LITERARY HISTORY

OF

Sanskrif Buddhism

(FROM WINTERNITZ SYLVAIN LEVI, HUBER)

BY

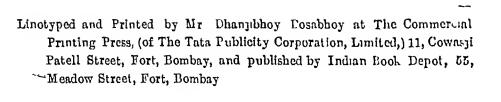

G K NARIMAN

(Author of Religion of the Iranion Peoples Iranian Influence on Muslim Literature)

> Second Impe May 1923

> > BONDATI

INDIAN BOOK DEPOT 63, MEADOW STREET FORT

OFFERED

AS A TRIBUTE OF APPRECIATION TO

S_{IF} RABINDRANATH TAGORE THE POET SCHOLAR

OF AWAKENING ORIENT

CONIENTS.

TOD ENDOD D

Pice

26

27

FOREWORD			L'AGE.
Introductory	••		1
CHAPTER I
The two schools of Buddham			8
Essence of Mahayana			5
CHAPTER II
Sansknt Buddhist canon			7
CHAPTER III
Mahayasin			11
Importance of Mahavastu			18
Its Jatakas			14
Mahayastu and Puranas			15
More Mahayana affinities			17
Antiquity of Mahavastu			17
CHAPTER IV
Lalitavistara			19
Extravagant imagery			90
Conception and Birth of Buddha			20
Sin of unbelief			22
Pali and Saraknt go back to an older source			28
The Buddha at school			28
Acts of the Buddha			24
Component elements of Lalifaviatara			24
Translation into Chinese and Tibetan			25
Relation to Buddhist art			26

No image in primitive Buddhism

General estimate of Lahtavistara.

	C	HAPT	ER V.				Р́адё.
Ashvaghosha and his	school	•••		•••	••		28
Life of Ashvaghosha		••	•••	•••	••	•••	29
Ashvaghosha's great w	ork•th	e Budd	lha's bi	ography	• • •		30
Buddhacarita and Ka	lıdasa		•••	•••	•••	•••	32
Statecraft, erotic art a	nd war	fare	••	•••	•••	•••	33
Love and religion	•••	•••	•••	••	•••	•••	34
Synthesis of Schools	•••		•••	•••	•••		36
Sutralankara	••	•••	•••		• • • •	•••	36
Vajrasuci, polemic ag	gainst c	aste	••	•••		•••	38
Other works of Ashv	•		•••	••	•••	•••	39
Matriceta	•••		•••	(•••	•••	•••	40
Buddhist poet Shura	••	••	••	••	•••	•••	41
Master's selfless love		•••	•••	•••		•••	42
				•••	•••	•••	#4
	CF	IAPTE	R VI.
Literature of Avadana	as	•••	•••	•••			45
Veneration for the Bu	ıddha	•••	•••	••	•••	•••	45
What is Avadana?	•••		• • •	•••	•••	•••	45
The fixed model	•••	•••	•••		•••	•••	48
Culture evidences	•••		•••	•••	•••	•••	_
Maiden disciple Stor	y 28	•••	•••	•••			49
Extreme Compassion	Story	34	4.4			•••	50
Disinterested pity S				•••	•••	•••	50
Princess devout Stor	ry 54	•••	/	•••			50
Guerdon of service to	Buddl	na Sto	rv 100		•••	•••	5 L
Avadanashataka and	cognate	tales	-y 100			•••	51
Tibetan and Chinese	analogi	es	•••	•••	•••	•••	52
Characteristics	•••		•••	•••	•••	•••	52
Analysis of componer	nts	•••	••,	•••	•••	•••	53
Shardulakarna love	of the r	intouch	able	•••	•••	•••	54
Ashokavadana	0. 11.0	intouch	aute	•••		• • •	55
Kunala. Queen moth	er and	cton no-	• • •	•••	•••	•••	57
Palı parallels	L MIIU	arch 201	1	•••	•	•••	58
Rupavati's sacrifice		•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	58
1	316	•••	•••	•••	•••		59

床.

			PAOI
Kalpadrumayadanamala			60
Unequivocal Mahayanism			60
Miscellaneous Avadanas			61
Avadanas in Chinese and Tibetan			C2
CHAPTER VII
Mahayanasutras			64
Worship of Books in Nepal			e t
Saddharmapundurka			64
Parable of house on fire			67
Reclaimed son a parable			68
Figurative language			G9
Exaggeration of phrase and figure		4.	G9
In praise of Sutra			70
Persistence of Puranic influence			71
Elements of diverse epochs			71
Age of the Sutra		14	78
Karandavyuha its Theistic tendency			74
Potency of Avalokiteshvara			75
His perchanations			7G
Sukhavativyuha the Land of Bless			77
Manjushri			79
Kurunapundanka Sutra			80
Lankavatara			80
Samadiurapa			82
Savamaprabhasa Sutra			83
Rashtrapala Sutra			88
Prevision of degeneracy			84
CHAPTER VIII
Nagarjuna			80
Vinduction of middle doctring			nΛ

91

Other works attributed to Nagarjuna

								PAGE
Nagarjuna's l	ıfe	•••	•••	•••		•••	•••	92
Aryadeva	•••	•••	•••		•••	•••	•••	94
Asanga	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	94
More philoso		n poet	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	95
Asanga	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••		96
Buddhist hun	aour	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•	98
Opponent of	Samkhy	a philo	sophy	•••	•	•••	•••	99
Candragomi	•••	•••	••	•,	•••	•••	•••	100
Shantideva	•••	•••	•••		•••	•••	•••	100
Core of doctr	ine	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••		101
Importance of	of the bo	ook	•••		•••	•••	•••	102
Other virtues	•••	•••	••	•••	•••	•••	•••	103
Quotations fi	rom pre	vious w	orks	•••	•	•		103
Moral ideal	•••				•••	•••	••	105
Books contra	asted	•••	•••		•••	•	•••	105
The aspirant	es obliga	tions	•••	•••		•••		107
Self and oth	er the	dıfferen	ce	••		•••	•••	107
Psychic iden	itity		•••			•••	•••	108
Philosophica	ıl doubt		•••	•••		• • •	•••	108
Reaction	•••	•••		•••	•••	•••	•••	109
			CHAP	TER I	IX.
Stotras, Dha	ıranıs. T	antras		•••	•	.,,	•••	110
Hymns · Bu	-			•••	•••	~ • • • •		110
Tara and he				•••	•••	•••	•••	111
Dharanis or	-			-	•••	•••	• • • •	112
Sanskrit Dh				•••	•••	•••	•••	116
Antiquity of			•••				•••	117
The Adikar					•••	•••	•••	118
Varieties of			trainin	g	•••	•••		118
Degrading:				444	•••	•••	•••	119
Supreme Y			•••	•••	•••	•••	•	120
The author	_		•••				•••	121
Printed Ta	ntra lite	rature	••	•••	•••			122
Christianity	and Br	addhism		160	•••	446		128

CHAPTER X.

PAGE

154

155

156

157

Are Similarities accidental?			128
Seydel's hypothesis			124
" Loans " from Buddhism			124
American scholar's researches			125
Parallel texts			126
Legends			1°6
Miracles			127
Resurrection and Nirvana			198
Results of comparison			199
Vitality of Boddhism			181
CHAPTER \I
Ancient Indian National Literature			188
Importance and extent of Indian literature			188
Peculiar traits of Indian genrus			184
Aryan unity of speech			186
Impact of Indian genius on German thought			188
CHAPTER XII
Beginnings of Indian Studies in Europe			141
Great Britain and Brahmanic learning			142
Early English scholars	be .		148
Jones and Colebrooke			148
Sanskrit learning and Germany			147
Dara Shukoh's Perman Upanishad			150
Beginnings of Vedic studies			152
Leader of research in three great religious			152
Christian Lattern			158
The Great Dictionary			158
Histories of literature			154

CHAPTER XIII

Catalogues of Max.

A few dated events

Encyclopædia of Sanskrit knowledge

The Chronology of Indian Literature

	A14
						Page.
Extra-Indian helps		•••			•••	158
-	•••					160
Indian's sense of history	644	***	***
A	PPENI	DIX I.	•
Constitution of the Buddhis	t Canon	, by Sy	lvaın	Lévi	•••	162
A	PPENI	OIX II	ſ .
Sutralankara		•••	•••		•••	177
	•••	•••	•••	, 	•••	177
Prefatory The outraged Pandit	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	178
Buddhist and Brahmanic c			•••	•••	•••	179
Chinese Aid	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	180
Japanese co-operation		•••	•••	•••		181
In search of treasure	•••	•••	•••	•••		183
Life of Ashvaghosha	•••	•••	•••	•••	• •••	184
Chinese reverence for Sans				•••	•••	185
Was he a King?	•••		•			187
His method	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	189
Authorship established	••	···		•••	•••	191
The persona of the Story			•••	•••		196
The grade of civilisation		•••	•••	•••	•••	198
The Arts	•••	•••	•	•••		200
Vindication of a neglected		•••	•	•••	•••	201
Preserved in China though			•••	•••	•••	201
His renowned predecessor				_	•••	_
	- 		•••	•	•••	200
•	APPEN	DIX I	II.
Most ancient Buddhist rec	ords, by	M. W	^r ınterni	tz	••	207
The Pali Canon			•••			207
				•••	••	201
	APPEN	DIX	IV.
Buddhist Diama, by M.	Wintern	ıtz	••			219
·			• •	•••	/ * *	2 20

APPENDIX V	PAG
Treasure-Trove of Ancient Literatures The discovery—Seeming careculators	224 224
New old tongues—Resurrection of dead languages—the last creed of Mancs Pahlavi the religious and secular kitom of medieval Iran	280
Enormous Buddhat Sandont literature in original and vermicular versions—Great docorery of the century; Pali not the mother tongue of Buddhism Pali emesents translation from prinshed vernacular	285
The histus in classical Sanskitt supplied—Buddhist poetry or drama in Sanskitt—Matinetia and Asbraghonha the forerunness of Kalidasa—Authenbeity and Vaulication	265
of Tibetan treasures	o10
APPENDI\ VI
The Inscription of Ara By Prof H. Laders, Ph.D., (Berlin)	245
Postscript	955
APPENDIA VII
The Sources of the Drygavadana. Chinese translation of Sanskrit Buddhut Laterature 257
How Chinese belps Sansknt	260
APPENDIX VIII
Inscribed frescos of Turfan, by Ed. Huber A Bharbut Sculpture	204
King Kannika and the Mula Sarvastivadia	269 274
APPENDIX IX.	214

.. 276

The Medical Science of the Buddhists

$VIII_{\ell}$

APPEN	IDIX :	X.			PAGE
The Abhidharma Kosha Vyakhya			•••		279
APPENI	DIX X	CI
Reference to Buddhism in Brahma	ınıcal	and Ja	ın Wri	ings.	287
APPENI	X XIC	CII
Notes on the Divyavadana	••	•••	•••	•••	293
Notes	•				801
Index		•••	•••		341

ABBREVIATIONS

BEFEO-Bullétin de l'Ecole française d'Extrême Opent.

Bibl Ind. Bibliotheca Indica

Ep. Ind Epigraphia Indica.

ERC—Encycloped a of Religion and Ethics edited by James Hastings Edinburgh.

GGA-Göttinger Gelehrte Anzeigen.

Grundres-Grundres der undo-erschen Philologie und Altertums kunde founded by G Bühler continued by F kielhorn, edited by H. Lüders and Wackernagel, Strassburg Trubner

Ind. Ant....Indian Antiquary (Bombay)

IA-Tournal Assatique.

IAOS_Journal of the American Oriental Society

JASB_Journal of the Assatic Society of Bengal.

JBRAS-Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Assatic Society

JRAS-Journal of the Pall Text Society

NGGW-Nachrichten von der K. Gesellschaft der Unsenschaften zu Göttingen.

OC-Onentalistenkongresse (Verhandlungen, Transactions, Acts.)

PTS-Palı Text Society

RHR-Revue de l'histoire des Relimons, Paris,

SBA-Sitzungsberichte der Berliner Akademie der Wissenschaften.

SBE-Sicred Books of the East edited by F Max Maller

SWA Strungsbenchte der Wiener Akademie der Wissenschaften

WZKM-Wiener Zestschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes.

ZDMG-Zeitschnift der Deutchen Monjeuländischen Gesellschaft.

FOREWORD

The works with which our standard literary histories of Sanskrit literature deal are nimost exclusively confined to Brahmonic texts Weber, Barth and Hookins and after them even Barnett and Keath have scareely assigned its due place in the history of Sanskrit literature to the contribution made by the Buddhist anthors. The brilliont and outstanding exception in Fuglish is still the Renaissance chapter of India What can it teach us by Max Muller That there was n yest literature embodied in Sanskrit by Ruddhist thinkers is nitested even by the sparee references in classical bans krit to them and by an occasional find of a Buddhist work in a Jam bhandara The late Dr. Peterson came upon the Augustindutile in a Jam threes, and the various papers read before the Bombay Branch of the Royal Amatic Society by Telang and Professor h B I athak demonstrate the denosits of Buddhist works in extensive anotations if not in entlye texts to be found in the libraries of the Toins of / Kanara. The Mahay3 utpatts In one place (n. 51) mentions thirty-eight famous writers the names even of some of whom have grown strange to us. The works of others have perished and there are hardly any of the lives and complete literary remains of whom we have positive knowledge. For a search of Sanskrit Buddhistic texts in Jain libraries the public may look up to enlightened Jaln religious preceptors liko the Jainacharya Vijayadharmasuri who combines ancient traditional practices,-the Jain saint did all his journles to Benores Calcutta and other sacred places in Northern India on foot from Surat -with a broad religious outlook and a Western method of organised research

Thus there is a gap in our knowledge of Sanakrit literature which this hook is intended to supply. I have entirely depended upon Winternitz in the first thirteen It was my intention to bring up-to-date the work which appeared originally in 1913, but commercial Bombay has evinced small care for literary research and the best of its libraries are yet innocent of the learned series like the SBA, SWA, and toung puo, not to mention a host of other continental periodicals, without which it is impossible to continue Winternitz's laborious history Winternitz is by no means a new name to English readers He prepared for Max Muller the voluminous index to the forty-nine volumes of his Sacred Books of the East I have endeavoured to embody all his valuable notes and cite all the authorities which he has most industriously collected, but it is possible that some may have been left out since the chapters were first prepared for the literary columns of the Bombau Chronicle which had naturally to be kept free from learned overloading

Next after Winternitz the reader will have to feel grateful to M Sylvain Levi, of the College de France, of some of whose charming studies I have attempted to produce a faint The "Constitution of the Buddhist canon," was reflex turned by me into English for the Rangoon Gazette as soon as I received a copy of it from the distinguished savant created a mild sensation in the Asiatic seat of Pali learning where my efforts at the appreciation of Buddhism as incorporated in Sanskrit literature were combated with a fury familiar to those who have a practical acquaintance with odium theologicum The romance of Sutralanhara is a brilliant essay of Sylvain Levi's for the accidental defects m which the responsibility must be borne by myself The Appendix (III) on the Pali canon gives a foretaste of the splendid pages of Winternitz which I hope it will not take me long to bring out in English As a supplement to the history I have added as Appendix IV the weighty contribution to the Buddhist drams by Winternitz (VOJ 1913 p. 38) While these chapters will more or less appeal to the special ist. Appendix V on the 'Treasures of succent literatures by Luders will interest any one susceptible to the importance of the revival and resuscitation of a dead past and in some cases of a past ueither the existence nor the death of which was suspected. It was prepared in the first instance for one of Mrs Besant a literary periodicals. The number of works which have been brought again to unanticipated light from Central Asia incindes not only Sanskrit and Buddhiat texts, but Iranian and especially Pahlavi documents of prime value. The Appendix (VII) on the sources of the Divyavadana is inserted as a proof of the great importance of Chinese for Sanskrit Buddhism The contribution by Ed. Huber (Appendix VIII) is believed to be his last. The death at the early age of thirty five of this French genius is a loss not only to Buddhist scholarship in its difficult rami fluctions of Chinese Tibeten, Sanskrit and Pali but to that exceedingly rare branch of learning which links Mahayana Buddhism to Persia through the intermediary of Tibet (Melanges Sylvam Levi, p 305) As the literary activities of the Buddhists have perhaps not been fully represented in the work of Winternitz in respect of grammar lexicography, -Amera was most prohably a Buddhut,-astronomy and medicine. I have inserted the condensed remarks of J Jolly on medical science of the Buddhists from the Grundrus Much concise information in English on Vasubandhu has been supplied by Sylvam Levi and the Japanese scholars in the various-articles in the Encyclopaedia of Beligion and Ethics but I hope the few pages from Burnouf will not be held antiquated (Appendix X) The Abhidharma Kosha Vuakhya may yet possibly attract the lessure and the atten tion of an Indian lover of learning in a position to have it edited. References to Buddhism in Brahmanical and Jaina writings (Appendix XI) and Appendix XII represent a portion of the notes made by me for a Sanskrit Buddhist literary record which must be effaced in the presence of Winternitz's work. My thanks are due to all the editors of the periodicals in whose journals the chapters in this collection appeared in the first instance

Some inconsistencies in the matter of spelling have to be explained They relate generally to the ch-sound and the sh-sound The consensus of Orientalists is inclined to assign to the English c the phonetic value of ch in church However, old associates like Panchatantra will no doubt long appear in their time-honoured shape. There is much to be said in favour of the exclusive phonetic value of c espeenally as it never now represents the h-sound. Various devices have been adopted to do away with the h and at the same time to represent sh Here the general agreement of scholars is less pronounced. I do not think many, if any, scholars will agree with me in my insistence on avoiding Sarvastivadin and Chandragomin which are to me alien importations such as at least Indian Sanskritists should unhesitatingly reject. If we speak of our friend Trivedi there is no reason why we should adopt the European exotic Yajurvedin. I adhere to Mula Sarvastivadi

I have to thank the Commercial Press, Bombay, for promptness and care and to deprecate in advance a certain amount of overlapping of material due to my having had to deal with several authors working on the identical themes My own notes are indicated by N at the end of each

THE AUTHOR

LITTRARY HISTORY OF BUDDHISM

Buddhism rose in India and it is all but dead in India; but the zeal of the early Buddhist Introductory missionaries spread the faith far beyond the boundaries of its native land. There is no lack of authentic histories of Buddhism but up to now no systematic history of the Buddhut literature in Sanskrit has appeared. Buddhism has had an immense literature The literary productions of the Buddhists fall into two divi sions The sacred language, however, of Buddhism, has not been one. The religion had early branched into several sects and each of them had a sacred tongue of its own. It is yet a , most question what the original language of Buddhism was and whether we have descended to us any fragments of the tongue amployed by the Buddha himself. Whatever that original language was it is now certain that Pali has no alarm to that distinction. Strictly speaking there are only two sacred languages of the Buddhists, Pali and Sanskrit. Pall is the hieratic language of the Buddhists of Cevlon. Sum and Burma who observe a prossio and more ancient form of Buddhism The sacred language of Tibet, China and Japan is Sanskrit and although very few books on Buddhum written in Sanskrit have ever been discovered there it is unquestionable that at one time there was an emmense Buddhist literature a vest amount of which was translated into Tibetan and Chinese and latterly scholars have succeeded in recovering a portion of the Sanskrit eanon which was believed to have perished beyond recall. The history of Buddhism will have a sufficient amount of light thrown on it when we have accessible to us in a Buronean language the essence of the Chmese and Tibetan Bud dhist works. But Pali Buddhism has the merit of being compact and has been studied more or less vigorously in Europe The Sanskrit Buddhism has had the disadvantage of being looked upon with suspicion. It was believed to be a later production. Very few scholars are now sceptical regarding some of the texts which this Sanskrit Buddhist literature embodies and which date from an antiquity as respectable as any of the Pali texts.

The following chapters were intended to be published in English with the collaboration of the distinguished scholar who first conceived Plan of the and executed the plan of a history of work Buddhist literature in Sanskrit The War interrupted the design At the suggestion of Indian scholars interested at once in Buddhism and in Sanskrit I have undertaken to publish these chapters which, unlike my studies on Paisis and Early Islam, lay claim to no originality. The ment of these pages devoted to an elucidation of the historical data comprising the Buddhist literature, that has survived in Sanskiit, consists in a lucid marshalling of every available source which makes the study as valuable as it is original. It is at once a pioneer and a perfected enter-In the original scheme due regard is had to the Pali branch of Buddhism as well as Sanskrit I propose, however, in view of the deserved sanctity attached to Sanskrit. first to lay before brother Pandits the section on Sanskrit The original work is supported throughout by authorities and references The extent of these notes covers almost as much space as the text itself

CHAPTER I

However extraordinarily rich and extensive the Pali literature of India Ceylon and Burma Two Schools may be still it repres nis only the of Buddhism. Interature of one sect of the Buddhists Alongside of it in India itself and apart 'rom the other countries where Buddhism is the dominant religion several sects have developed their own literary productions the language of which is partly Sanskrit and partly a dialect which we may call the mid Indian and which is given the designation of mixed Sansl rit by Senart Of this Sanskrit Interature there have remained to us many voluminous books and fragments of several others while many are known to us only through Tibetan and Chinese translations. The major portion of this literature in pure and mixed Sanstrik which we for brevity a alle call Buddhist Sanskrit literature belongs either to the school known as that of the Mahayana or has been more or less in fluenced by the latter. For an appreciation, therefore of this literature it is necessary in the first place to make a few thereations on the schlam in Buddhism which divided it early into two schools the Mahnrana and the Hinavana

The most ancient Buddhist school the doctrine of which coincides with that of the Theravada as perpetiinted in I all tradition sees in salvation or Nirvana the supreme filies and in the conception of Arkatship which is already in this life a foretaste of the coming Nirvana the end and goal of all strivings—a goal which is attainable only by a few with the help of a knowledgo which is to be acquired only in ascetic life. This original objective of early Buddhism has not been rejected by the adherents of the later or Valiayana school. On the other hand, it has been recognised as originating with the Buddha himself. It is characterized as the Himayana or the "inferior vehicle" which does not suffice to conduct all beings to cessation of soirow. What the later doctime teaches is the Mahayana or the "great vehicle". which is calculated to transport a larger number of people, the whole community of humanity, over and beyond the This new doctrine, as is claimed by its sorrow of existence followers, rests upon a profounder understanding of the ancient texts or upon later mystical revelation of the Buddha himself and it replaces the ideal of the Arhat by that of the Not only the monk but every ordinary human Bodhisattva being can place before himself the goal to be re-born as a Bodhisattva, which means an enlightened being or one who may receive supreme illumination and bring salvation to all parstuam? If this goal is to be made attainable by many there must be more efficient means for making it accessible to all than are to be found in the Hinayana doctrine Therefore, according to the doctrine of the Mahayana, even the father of a family occupied with worldly life, the merchant. the claftsman, the sovereign, nay, even the labourer and the pariah can attain to salvation on the one hand, by the practice of commiseration and goodwill for all cleatures, by extraordinary generosity and self-abnegation, and on the other, by means of a believing surrender to and veneration of the Buddha, other Buddhas and the Bodhisattvas the Pali canon the Buddha is already sometimes shown as a superman, but he becomes such only because of his attainment to supreme illumination which enables him to perform muracles and finally to enter Nurvana What has remained for us as an object of veneration after his passing away is only his doctrine or at any rate his relics The school of the Lokottanavadis, which are a special sect of that Hinayana, go further and decline to see in the Buddha an ordinary man For the Buddha is a superhuman being (Lokottara) who comes down for a limited period of time for the succour of all mankind

In the Mahayana on the other hand, the Buddhas from the first are nothing but divine heligs and their peregrunations on the carth and their entry into Nirvana no more than a freak or thoughtless play And if in the Hinayana there is the mention of a number of Buddhas, predecessors of Shakyamuni in earlier mens the Mahayana counts its Buddhas by the thousand may by the million. Mercover innumorable millions of Bodhuattvas are wor shipped as divine heings by the Mahayana Buddhists These Bodhisattvas who are provided with perfections (Paramitas) and with illumination, out of compassion for the world renonneo their claim to Nirvana Furthermore there are the Hindu gods and goddesses especially from the Shiva cyclo who are placed on a par with the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas who contribute to the amplification of the Buddhist pan theon. This newly fermed mythology, this new Bodhisattva ideal and the much more vigorously prominent worship of the Buddha ro Buddha bhokts together form the popular phase of Mahayana. So far this process was already extant in the Hinayana, it developed itself under the influence of Hindusm and similarly the philosophical side of Mahayana is only a further evolution of the dectrine of Hinayana under the influence of Hindusm

The ancient Buddhum denied the Ego and saw in the knowledge of the neu Ego a path to Nirvana, to extinction of the Ego The Mahayana schools wont still further and taught that not only there was no Ego but that there was nothing at all—only a blank, sarvam shunyam They professed a complete negativism or shunyavada which denied hoth Being and nen Being at the same time or believed in idealistic negativism or Vijnanavada which at least recognises a Being comprised in consciousness. As Max Wallaser has put it, negativism is a better characterisation of the Mahayana philosophy than nihilism.

The Sanskrit literature in Buddhism, however, is by, no means exclusively Mahayanist Before all the widely spread sect of the Sarvastivadis, which belonged to the Hinayana and which is indicated by its designation of positivists, possessed a canon of its own and a rich literature in Sanskrit Literally the doctrine of Sarvastivada means the doctrine of All-Exists.

CHAPIER II.

Of this Sanskrit canon no complete copy is to be found. We know it only from larger or Sanskrit smaller fragments of its Udana varge, Buddhist Dharmapoda Ekottaragama and Madhya magama which hove been discovered from the xylographs and manuscripts recovered from Eastern Turkistan by Stein Grunwedel and Le Coq, as well as from quotations in other Buddhist Sanskrit texts like the Mahavastn, Divyavadana and Lalitavistara and finally from Chinese and Tibetan translations

The literature of Central Asian discoveries has already assumed great proportions. The more important references are Pischel, Fragments of a Sanskrit Canon of the Bud dhist from Idykutsari in Chineso Turkistan, SBA 1904, p 807 New Fragments ibid p 1138 The Turion Recen sions of the Dhammopada SBA 1908 p 968 What, how ever, Pischel regarded as the recensions of the Dhammapoda are in reality fragments of the Udanavarga of Dharmatrata. the Tilician translation of which has been rendered into Ene lish by Rokhill in 1883 and the Sanskrit original of which Luders is going to edit from the Turian finds. Vallee Pour sin has discovered fragments of the same work in the collection brought from Central Asia by Stein and there is found Udana corresponding to the Pall Udana (JA, 1912, p. 10. vol. xix p 311) Levi JA, 1910 p 10 vol. xvi, p 444. the other hand the ancient Khareshti manuscript discovered in Khotan by Dutreud de Rhins, important equally from the standpoint of paleography and literary history, represents an anthology prepared after the model of the Dhammapada in Prakrit (Comptes rendus de l'Aendemie des inscriptions. May 1895 and April 1898 Stein, Ancient Khotan, 1188; Senart OC XI, Paris, 1897, i, i, seq JA 1898, p 9, vol. XII.

193, 545, Luders NGGW 1899, p. 474, Rhys Davids JRAS, 1899, p. 426, and Franke ZDMG 60, 1906, p. 477).

Buddhist Sutras in Sanskrit inscribed on bricks have been found by V A Smith and W. Hoey in the ruins of Gopalpur along with inscriptions ranging between 250 and 400 A.D (JASB proceedings, 1896, p 99) For translations into Chinese and Tibetan, see Oldenberg ZDMG 52, pp. 654, 662, Anesaki Le Museon, new series xx, vi 1905, pp 23-37. On a Chinese translation of a "Niivanasutra," see JRAS 1881, p 66.

To the Vinayapitaka of the same canon belongs probably also the fragment of a ritual for the initiation of monks written in Sanskrit which was found in Nepal by Bendall as well as the Pratimokshasutra which is inferred from one Tibetan and four Chinese translations, Album Kern, p. 373, and OC xiii, Hamburg, 1902, p 58 S Levi discovered the fragment of a Vinayapitaka of the Sarvastivadis in the Tokharian (JA 1912, p 10, vol xix, p 101, Oldenberg ZDMG 52, p 645)

The principal texts of the canon of the Mulasarvastivadis this is the designation of the Sanskiit canon according to tradition—were translated from Sanskiit into Chinese in 700-712 by the Chinese pilgrim I-tsing

(J Takakusu, a record of Buddhist religion by I-tsing, translated, Oxford 1896, p XXXVII See Anesaki JRAS 1901, p 895, Ed Huber in BEFEO VI 1906, p. 1, Sylvain Levi in the Toung Pao, V 1904, p 297-, VIII, 110).

A sub-division of the Mulasarvastivadis are the Sarvastivadis who had a Vinaya of their own just as the other three sub-divisions of the same school, viz, the Dharmaguptas, Mahishasakas and Kashyapiyas (Levi ibid p 114, 1907). But the Chinese "Tri-pitaka" does not mean the same thing as the Pali Tipitaka but contains also many non-cano nical texts and even philosophical treatises of Brahmanism (Takakusu, JRAS 1896 p 415)

Likewise in the Tibetan Kanjir which is also denominated 'Tripitaka' there is much which has no comparison with the Tipitaka of Pali and which doubtless does not belong to the ancient canon. As in these so also in the Chinese and Tibetan there are the sub-divisions into Vinava, Sutra and Abhidharma.

This Sanskrit canon in its Chinese rendering hetrays in the texts and in the arrangements of its component books many coincidences with the I ali canon and on the other hand many deviations from it. This is to be explained in some passuming that the Pali canon was first translated in some part of India first from a common source prohably the lost Magadhi canon and later on in another province the Sanskrit canon branched itself off

According to Svivain Levi (Toung Pao 1907 p 116) the Vinaya of the Sanskrit canon vas first codified in the 3rd or 4th century after Christ In the Sanskrit canon the Aramas correspond to the Nikayas la Pali the Dirghagama answering to the Dighanikaya the Madhyamagama to the Maiihimanikaya the Ekottaragama to the Anguttaranikaya and the Samyuktagama to the Samyuttanikaya. There was also a Kahudraka corresponding to the Khuddakanikaya Whether in this latter all those toxts were included which in the Pali canon are embodied in this Nikaya we do not know hat we know that in the Sanskrit canon also there were corresponding to the Pali texts of Suttanipata a Sutranipata Udana corresponding to Udana, to Dhammapada a Dharma nada to Theragatha a Sthaviragatha to Vimanavatiha a Vimenavastu and to Buddhu Vansa a Buddha Vamsha It. is doubtful whether the collection of the ' seven Abhidhar mas" which stands translated in the Chinese Tripitaka was also derived from the ancient canon in as much as these Abhidharmas have nothing in common with the Abhidhammapitaka of the Pali canon except the numeral seven and a few titles

J. Takakusu, JRAS 1905, p. 138 and JPTS 1905, p. 67,

Thus if the canon of the Mulasaivastivadis has been preserved only incompletely, the other Sanskrit Buddhist sects likewise give no closed canon, each having only one or more texts to which was accorded special sanctity as a kind of Bible and which assimilated the older texts of a Tripitaka recognised as such in principle and rejecting others.

CHAPTER III

As belonging to the old school of Hinayana we have in the first place to mention the Mahavastu Wahavastu. "the Book of the Great Events'

Le Mahavastu Sanekrit text was published for the first time with introduction by E. Senart with a detailed con spectus of contents in the Introduction, Paris 1882 1897 A. Barth in RHR., 11 1885 p 160 42 1900, p 51 and Journal des Savants 1899, p 459 p 517 p 623 E. Windisch the Composition of the Mahavastu Leipzig 1909 A conspectus of the contents is olso given by Rajendralal Mitra in his hepoticse Buddhut Laterature pp 113 161

The hook gives itself the title of The Vinayopitaka according to the text of the Lokettaravadis belonging to the Mahasanghikas These Mahosanghikas that is the adhermant of the Mahasangha or the Great Order are according to concurrent reports the most ancient Buddhist schismatics

This is the only thing positive which we can ascertain regarding the rise of Buddhist sects from the contradictory ond confused accounts (Compare Kern Manuel of Buddhism p 100)

A sub-division of theirs was the Lokottaravadis that is those according to whose doctrino the Buddhas are Supra Mundane or Lokottara and are only externally connected with worldly existence

Nothing in the perfectly Awakened Ones is comparable to anything in the world but everything connected with the great Rishis is exalted above the world.' They wash their feet olthough no dust ottaches to them, they sit under the shade although the heat of the sun does not op press them they take nourishment although they are never troubled with hunger, they use medicine although they have no diseases. (Windisch loe alt p 470) According to the Mahavastu, the Lokottaravadis belong to the Madhyadesha or the 16 countries lying between the Himalaya and the Vindhya mountains (Mahavastu V. 1, p 198.)

Entirely in keeping with this doctrine, the biography of the Buddha which forms the principal contents of the Mahavastu is related as an "Avadana" or a miraculous history It is clearly not thereby differentiated much from the texts of the Palı canon which are devoted to the life of the Bud-Here in this Sanskrit text just as in the Pali counterdha part we hear of miracles which accompanied the conception, the birth, the illumination, and the first conversions brought about by the Buddha The Mahavastu harmonizes with the Pali Nidanakatha in this that it treats of the life of the Buddha in three sections, of which the first starts with the life of the Bodhisattva in the time of the Buddha Dipankara (V 1, 193) and describes his life in the time of other and earlier Buddhas The second section (in V 2, 1) takes us to the heaven of the Tushita gods, where the Bodhisattva who is re-born there is determined to seek another birth in the womb of Queen Maya and relates the miracle of the conception and the birth of the prince, of his leaving the home, his conflict with Mara, and the illumination which he succeeds in acquiring under the Bodhi Tree The thud section (V 3), lastly recounts, in harmony with the principal features of the Mahavagga of the Vinayapitaka, the history of the first conversions and the rise of the monastic And this is also one reason why the Mahavastu is 01 der described as belonging to the Vinayapitaka, although bairing a few remarks on the imitiation of the Order it contams next to nothing about the Vinaya proper or the rules of the Order

Note The Mahavastu does not contain the Pali technical expressions, Durenidana, Avidurenidana and Santikenidana See Windisch loc cit p 473, 476 ft

When we, however say that the Mahayastu recounts the main entline of the life of the Buddhe for the Lokettare vades, that by no means implies that this exhausts the con tents of the work; nor does it give an adequate idea of its composition. Far from being a literary work of art, the Mahayastu is rather a labyrinth in which we can only with an effort discover the thread of a coherent account of the life of the Buddha. This account is constantly interrupted by other material, specially by the numerous Jatakas and Avadanas and also by dogmatic Sutras. We find no order Sometimes an attempt is made to put together in a looss fashion the various component parts of the work. More over, the same story is frequently repeated whether it be an episode in the life of the Buddha or a Jataka, being re lated twice one after another first in prose and then in verse. although in a more or less diverging version. But in sove ral passages the same episodes recur with a trifling differ Thus the legend of the Buddha a hirth is recounted no less than four times (Windisch Buddha's Birth p 106. 124 ft.) Again language is also not uniform No doubt the whole work, both the prese and verse is written in what we cell ' mixed Sanskrit but this dialect makes a varying annroach to Sanskrit The more disparate it is from Sanskrit the more ancient it oppears (Oldenberg ZDMG 52, 663)

Importance of Mahayastu.

many ancient traditions and old versions of texts which also occur in the Pali canon. Thus the setting ont of his homs by the Prince Siddhartha, tha celebrated abhinishkramana of Sanakrit books, is related, as in the Pall Majjhimanikaya (26 and 36) in the most archaic fashion (V 2, 117) an instance of the various strata of the book we may mention another version of the same episode in the life of the Buddha and belonging to a later period which follows immediately after the first and more ancient iccital in the Similarly we find early versions of the cele-Mahayastu brated "Benares sermon" and presentments of the following well-known texts in the Pali canon The Mahagovinda Sutta (Dighanikaya 19) the Dighanakhasutta (Majihimanikaya, 74) the Sahassavagga of the Dhammapada, the Khuddakapatha, the Pabajja, the Padhana and the Khaggavisana Suttas belonging to the Suttanipata, and pieces from the Vimana Vatthu and the Buddha Vamsha ZDMG 52, 659 f 665 f Windisch Mara and Buddha, 316 f, 322 f) There are poems, moreover, on the buth of the Buddha and vestiges of ancient Buddhistic ballads which we so often come across

Quite of special value is, however, the Mahavastu as a mine of Jatakas and other stories These Its Jatakas been separately treated by Serge have d'Oldenberg (JRAS 1896, p. 335 f.) and by Baith (Journal des Savants 1889, p 625 f) 'Chaipentier has discussed a few of the Jatakas in the Mahavastu in his history of the Pacceka Buddhas (p 2 f 12 f, 25 f) half of the book consists of Jatakas which are related partly in prose with veises inseited, or first in prose and then agam in verse Further we see the Bodhisattva now as a universal sovereign, now as the son of a merchant, then as a Brahman, again as a Naga prince as a lion, as an elephant, Many of the Jatakas are versions of the same story which we find in the Pali book of Jatakas They harmonize word for word with the Pali and many a time show more or less divergence Thus, for instance, the Shyamakajataka (V 2, p 209 f), the pathetic story of the Brahman's son who is shot dead with his arrow by King Peliyaksha is only a version of the Shyamakajataka so well known to us. The Kinnarijataka (V 2 p 94 f) corresponds in character though not in contents to the Kinnara legend in the Jataka book. Kushajataka appears once (V 2 p 420 f.) in a recension which is tolerably divergent from Pali, a second time (V 1 p 3 f.) in metrical form which betrays resemblances with the Pali gathar. The story of Amars the smith a daughter (V 2 p 836) answers to the Pali Jataka No 387 The Markatajataka (V 2 p 246 f.) is the fable of the monkey and the crocodile and is known to us as No 208 of the Pali Jataka hook. The history of Nahm who is seduced by Eka Shringa grows into a highly developed legend in Mahayastu (V 3 p 143 f.) But it retains some of the more ancient features which have disappeared in the prose Pali Jataka of Isisinga (Luders NGGW 1901 p 20 f.)

There are however many Jatskas and Avadanas in tho Mahataata which have nothing corres ponding to them in Pali In these are Mahavastn and Puranas especially glorified again and again the extraordinary propensity to self-sacrifice and generosity on part of the Bodhisattva Thus as King Arka for example the Bodhisattva bestows upon the Bnd dha of the age 80 000 grottoes or cave temples fashioned out of the seven kinds of precious stones (1, 4) On another occasion he surrenders his wife and child only to learn a wise maxim (1 91 f) As a beggar he is more pious than King Kriki for he kills no living boing and places his pots on crossways in order that they may be filled with rice and grain for the hungry and when he hears that his parents in his absence have given away to the Buddha the straw with which he had shortly before embelluhed his hat he resources over it for a month (1, 317 f.)

Many of the narratives bear the impress of a Brahmanic or Puranic character Such is, for instance, the history of Brahmadatta who is childless and betakes himself to the Rishis upon which three birds are borne to him which speak with a human voice and utter many sapient proverbs This. story reminds us of the beginning of the Markandeya Purana. And incidentally it may be observed that the portrayal of hell in the beginning of the Mahavastu has points of contact with the same Rurana It is, however, in the Palı tradition that we find the foundation of the visit of Maudgalyayana to the 8th Inferno as well as his sojourn in the world of beasts and the world of Pietas, the Asuras, and various kinds of deities For in the Pali tradition also Moggalana is a saint who roams through heaven and hell and all the worlds However, the Rajavamsha or the History of the Kings to whose dynasty Shakyamuni belonged begins entirely after the fashion of the Puranas with an account of the creation (1, 338 ff) The split of the Pulanas is also breathed by the Jataka (1, 283 ff), in which a Rishi named Rakshita who is the Bodhisattva, attains to such muaculous powers as an ascetic that he touches the sun and the moon with his hand The spirit of the Puranas is very similar to that of the Mahayana and many of the stories in the Mahavastu betray the same partiality for the phantasmagorial astounding soicereis to perform the miracles of saints, so peculiar to the Mahayana texts To this class belongs "the Story of the Umbrella" (Chattravastu I, 253 ff) After the Buddha had freed the city of Shravasti of a terrible plague caused by Yakshas, gods or spirits hold up umbrellas over the Buddha to do him honour. The latter however with his usual compassionateness makes one Buddha to appear under each umbrella by virtue of his supernatural powers so that each god believes that the Buddha is seated under his own umbrella.

And, although the Mahavasin belongs to the Hinavana and has contocts with much which may or actually does occur in the Pali texts of the More Maha Theravadle it embodies a good deal which vana affinities makes an approach to the Mahayana Thus. for Instance we find in the first volume (1 63 193) a lorgo section on the ten Bhumus or places which a Bodhisattya has to go through and the description of the virtues which ho must possess in each of the ten stages. In this section has been interpolated a Buddhanusmriti (1 163 ff.) that is a hymn to the Buddha who in no woy is here different from Vishna or Shiva in the states of the Puronas It is also in keeping with the ideo of the Mohavana when it is said that the power of Buddhas is so great that the adoration of the Explicit One alone suffices for the attainment of Nirvana (II 362 ff) and that one earns for oneself infinite merit when one only circumambulates a stupe and offers worship with flowers and so forth. That from the smile of the Huddha proceed rays which Huminate the whole Buddha field (Buddha Ichetra) occurs innumerable times in the Mahayana texts (III 137 ff) It is also a Mahayanist conception when mention is made of a great number of Buddhas and when it is stated that the Bodhisattra is not generated by fother and mother, but springs directly from his own properties (Windisch the Buddha's Birth p 97 Note p 100 f and p 193 f)

The nature of the composition of the Mahavastu entails the difficulty that the period when it was Antiquity of composed is very hard to determine Many Mahavasta circumstances point to a high antiquity for instance the fact that it helongs to the Lokottaravoda school and its language. That the work is entirely written in 'mixed Sanskrit while in the Maha yana texts this dialect ulternates with Sanskrit, is a mark of its greater antiquity For, as Barth says, Sanskrit is in Buddhist texts only an interloper (Journal des Savants, 1899, p. 459) Certainly old are those numerous pieces which the Mahayastu has in common with the Pali canon and which go back to ancient Pali sources The gathas of the Khadgavishna Sutia (I 357,) may be even older than the corresponding Khaggavisana Sutta in the Pali Suttampata When, however, in the Mahavastu these verses are sing by five hundred dying Pratveka Buddhas then in their mouth "He wanders lonely like a unicorn" sounds they refram peculiarly incongruous and it becomes improbable that the prose portion should be as old as the galhas. To the time of the first century after Christ likewise point the Mahayanist features already indicated as well as a few passages which seem to have been influenced by the sculptors of the Gandhara art When, for example, in the scene of the flower muacle, the lotus flowers in the form of a circle fall round the halo of the Buddha, it may be noted that the halo was first introduced into India by Greek artists (see A Foucher JA 1903, p 10, part II, p 208, and his L'art grecobouddhique du Candhara, vol I, p 622, besides, the many Buddhas under the umbiellas remind us of the sculptured monuments) The reference in the Mahavastu to the Yogacaras brings us down to the fourth century (I, 120), and so do the allusions to the Huns and the most interesting ones to the Chinese language and writing and the characterisation of astrologers as "Horapathaka" (III, 178) But the core of the Mahavastu is old and probably was composed already two centuries before Christ, although it has been expanded in the fourth century after Christ and perhaps even at a later period For it is only the embellishment that has been borrowed from the Mahayana, while on the other hand, it is merely a feeble admixture of the Mahayana doctrine proper and not of the Mahayana mythology which we find in the Mahayastu

1

CHAPIER IV

The Mahavasta describes itself as a work belonging to Hanyana although it has assumilated Lalitavistara some of the Mahavana features. The Lalitavistara on the contrary is regarded as one of the most sacred Mahayana texts as a Vaipulya Sutra. It is a text book of voluminous contents and gives the usual designation of a Mahayana Sutra and yet original by the work embodied a descriptive life of the Buddha for the Sarvastivadi school attached to the Hinayana.

The Lalitavistars is edited by S. Lefmann who also brought out a translation of the first chapters in Beilin in 16"5. The great Bengali scholar Bajendralal Aliara prepared an English translation for the Billiotheca Indica of which 8 fasciculi have appeared (Calcutta 1881 to He has also brought out an incomplete text. A complete. French tra lation by Forceux appeared in Paris in the Annals du Musco Guinet, tol. 14 zir. (Paris, 1887 1892.) The Chinese tradition as to the Lalitavistana makes it a life of the Boddha r presonting the Sarvasthadl school (Beal, the Romanile Levend of Salya Buddha from the Chinese Samkrit, London, 1876, Introduction Also Forcess French translation of Labravistana introduction vol. II) Beal's Romantic Legend is an abbridged translation from the CH ersion of the Abbinish Kramana Sutra which has not been preserved in the original Sanskrit, but was translated fato Chipese so early as 597 A.D. It appears to have been a biography of the Buddha promiting the sect of the Dharmaguptas

The Mahavann idea however corresponds already to the very title of the Lahtavistara which means the 'exhaust ive narrative of the sport of the Buddha. Thus the life work of the Buddha on the earth is characterised as the diversion (Lahta) of a supernatural being

In the introductory chapter the Buddha appears as an exalted divine being although the chapter starta after the mode of the ancient Pali Suttes with the words So have I heard. Once upon a time the Master was sejourning at Shravasti in the Jeta Park in the garden of Anathapindada '

But while in the Pali texts the Master is introduced with these or similar stereotyped initial phrases and is surrounded by a few disci-Extravagant ples or at the most his suite of "500 imagery. monks," and then immediately the Sutta proper begins, in the Lalitavistara, as in all the Vaipulya Sutras of the Mahayana, the picture that is outlined of the Buddha is a grandiose one encircled by divine radiance. He is surrounded by twelve thousand monks and by no less than thirty-two thousand Bodhisattvas, "all still in the trammels of only one re-birth, all born with the perfections of a Bodhisattva, all enjoying the knowledge of a Bodhisattva. all in the possession of an insight in magical charms" and so forth While in the middle watch of the night the Buddha sits sunk in meditation, from his head issues forth a stream of light which penetrates into the heavens and sets all the gods in commotion These latter forthwith chant a hymn of praise to the exalted Buddha and soon after appear Ishvara and the other divinities before the Master, throw themselves at his feet and implore him to reveal the excellent Vaipulya Sutra called the Lalitavistara for the salvation and blessing of the world While they panegyrize in extravagant terms the excellences of the text revealed by this and even earlier Buddhas, the Buddha expresses his assent by silence. Only after these circumstantial introductions, which fill a large chapter commences the biography proper of the Buddha which forms the contents of the work And it starts ındeed just from where in the Palı Nidanakatha the second section (avidurenidana) begins

The Bodhisattva abides in the heaven of the Gratified

(Tushita) gods in a glorious celestral

Conception palace The Bodhisattva is the recipient and Birth of of over a hundred honorific epithets and Buddha. the celestral palace in which he resides of over a dozen Under the sound of eightyfour thousand drums he is called upon to descend to the earth to commence his work of salvation. After long consultations in which the excellences and the deficiencies of if large number of princely families ore weighed the Bodhi sattva finally decides to be rehorn in the house of King Shuddhodana in the womb of Queen Maya possesses all the qualities of a Buddha s mother Perfect like her heanty which is described to minutest detail, are her virtue and chastity Besides of all the women of India she is the only one in a position to hear the future Buddha since in her is united the strength of ten thousand elephants. The conception proceeds with the assistance of the gods after the Bodhisattve had determined to enter the womb of his mother in the form of an elephant. The gods prepare not only a celestial residence for Mova during her lying in. but construct a palace of sewels in her womb so that the Bodhisottvo may not remain soiled there for ten months. In this palace of lowels he sits in his marvellous tenderness. But his hody shines in glorious sheen and a light expands it self for miles from the womb of his mother. The sick come to Maya Devi and are cured of their diseases as soon as the latter places her hand upon their head. And whenever she looks towards her right she sees the Bodhisattve in her womb just as a man beholds his own face in a clear mirror ' The yet unhorn Bodhisattva in his mother a womb delights the celeatials by pions sermons and the god Brahma chevs his every suggestion

This part is comprised in chapters 2 to 6 The beginning of the sixth chapter has been translated by Windisch in his Buddka's Grburt p. 162 ff

As the conception so also the Bodhsattva's hirth. It is accompanied by miracles and portents. In the Luminit Park he is horn in the manner well known to us through numerous sculptures though not like an ordinary human hut as an omniscient Exalted Being as a Mahapurusha, 'The Great Spirit Lotus flawers are strewn under every step of his and the new boin child announcing his greatness takes seven steps towards each of the six cardinal points

The creator Prajapati is characterized as Purusha and Mahapurusha in the Brahmanas and Upanishads and subsequently also Brahma and Vishnu The seven steps of the new born child Buddha are also to be explained from the myth of the march of Vishnu

Here the narrative interrupted by a dialogue between Ananda and the Buddha in which veheSin of unbelief mence is shown towards every unbeliever who does not credit the miraculous birth of the Buddha (chapter vii, p. 87 to 91). Faith in the Buddha is taught as an essential component of religion And we are reminded of Krishna in the Bhagavadgita when the Buddha says.

"To all who believe in me I do good Like friends are they to me who seek refuge in me And many a friend the Tathagata has And to those friends the Tathagata only speaks the truth, not falsehood To believe Ananda should be thy endeavour This I commend unto you"

Why this dialogue should appear just here is certainly not due to accident, but is based on the fact that it is with reference to the legends relating to the conception and the birth of the Buddha that the Lahtavistara diverges very strikingly from other Buddhist schools in its extravagance as to the miraculous. It is no longer so in the future course of the narrative. Indeed there is here very often an extraordinary harmony with the most ancient Pali account, e.g., that of the Mahavagga of the Vinayapitaka, although it may be noted meidentally that the Gathas of the Lahtavistara appear more ancient than those in the corresponding Pali texts. (The relation of the Pali tradition to the Lahtavistara is treated of by Oldenberg in OC, V, 1882, vol. 2,

According to E. Kuhn, Gurupuja Kaumudi (p. 116 f.) these two legends of the child Buddha may have served as models for the Gospels Apocrypha which relate similar stories of the child Jesus The chapter 12 and 18 also contain episodes which are wanting in the other biographies of the Buddha. (Winternitz WZKM 1912, p. 237 f.)

On the other hand in its further course the Lalitavistara narrative (chapters 14-26) deviates only a Acts of the little from the legend known to us from other sources, the principal events in the Buddha. life of the Buddha being the four meetings from which the Bodhisattva learns of old age, disease, death and renunciation, the flight from the palace, the encounter with King Bimbisaia, Gautama's years of instruction and his futile ascetic practices, the struggle with Mara, the final illumination and the enunciation of the doctrine to the world at large at the request of god Brahma But even here the Lalitavistara is remarkable for its exaggerations. While Gautama, for instance, passes the four weeks after his illimination, in our most ancient account, in meditation under various trees (Mahavagga, 1, 1-4, Dutoit Life of the Buddha, p 66), in the Lalitavistara (p 377), in the second week, he goes out for a long promenade through thousands of worlds and in the fourth week takes a small walk, which stretches only from the eastern to the western ocean The last chapter (27) however is once again after the fashion of the Mahayana sutras, a glorification of the book of Lalitavistara itself, and is devoted to the enumeration of the virtues and the advantages which a man acquires by its propagation and reverence

From all these it is quite probable that our Lalitavistara is a redaction of an older Hinayana text Component expanded and embellished in the sense elements of of the Mahayana, a biography of the Lalitavistara. Buddha representing the Sarvastivada school This assumption also explains the nature of the text which is by no means the single work of one anthor, but is an anouymous compilation in which very old and very young fragments stand in inxtanosition. The hook moreover consists, according to its form of unequal sections a continuous narrative in Sanskrit prose and numerous, often extensive metrical pieces in Mixed Sanskrit. ' Only rarely these verses constitute a portion of the narrative As a rule they are recapitulations of prose narra tion in an abbreviated and simpler and sometimes also more or less divergent form Mony of these metrical pieces are heantiful old hallads which go back to the same ancient sources as the poems of the Pali Suttaninata mentioned above. The examples are the birth legend and the Asita episodo in chapter VII the Bimbisare history in chapter XVI and the dialogue with Mare in chapter XVIII They belong to the ancient religious ballad poesy of the first centuries after the Buddha. But several prose pessages also like the sermon at Benares in the XXVIth chapter are assignable to the most ancient stratum of Buddhistic tradition. On the other hand the younger components are to be found not only in the prove but also in the Gathas many of which are composed in highly artistic metres. Such are the Vasantatilaka and Shardulavikridita which are tolerably frequent (see the index to metres in Lefmann's edition VII, p 227 f, and Introduction, p 19 ff)

We do not know when the final redaction of the Lahta vistara took place. It was formerly erroneously assorted that the work hed alreedy into Ohinese heer translated into Chinese in the first and Tibetan. Christian century As a matter of fact wo do not at all know whether the Chinese hiography of the Buddha called the Phuyan long which was published in about 300 A.D., the alleged second translation of the Lahtavistara, is really a translation of our text (Winternitz, WYKM 1912, p. 241 f.) A precise render ung of the Sanskrit text is in the Tibetan, which was only produced in the 5th century. It has been edited and translated into French by Foucaux. It may be taken for certain that a version little different from our Lalitavistara was known to the artists who about 850-900 decorated with images the celebrated temple of Boro-Budin in Java For these magnificent scriptures represent scenes in the legend of the Buddha in a manner as if the artists were working with the text of the Lahtavistara in the hand. And Pleyte has simply recapitulated the entire contents of the Lahtavistara as an explanation of the sculptures (The Buddha legend in the sculpture in the temple of Boro-Budin, Amsterdam, 1901. See also Spever La Museon 1903, p. 124 ff)

But the artists who embellished the Greco-Buddhistic monuments of Northern India with scenes Relation to from the life of the Buddha are also Buddhist Art already familiar with the Buddha legend as related in the Lahtavistara. They worked no doubt not after the text, but in accordance with living oral tradition. The harmony, nevertheless, between the sculptures and the Sanskrit text is not rarely of such a character that we must assume that the literary tradition was at times influenced by the artist. Upon art and literature there was mutual influence.

The authorities to be consulted here are L'art Greco bouddhique du Gandhara, part I, 324 f 666 ff Giunwendel Buddhist art in India, p 94, 04 f, 134, Senart OCXIV, 1905, 1,121 ff, and Bloch ZDMG 62, p 370 ff

While the ancient Buddhistic ait in the time of Ashoka, in the reliefs of Bharhut, Sanchi, etc., No image in knows of no image of the Buddha but only primitive a symbol (e.g., the wheel) for the person.

Buddhism of the Founder of the religion, a representation of the Buddha is the principal object of the Gandhara art. Can it not be connected with this that in the intervening centuries the Buddha became an object of Bhakti and the adoration of the Buddha was pushed into the central point of his religion? Thus there is concurrent testimony that the age of the Gandhara art, the forms of which falls in the second century after Christ was also the period of Mahayana texts which treat of the Buddha legend.

It is therefore, but natural that we should have preserv ed in the Labiasistara both the very old General esti tradition and accounts younger by en mate of Lallta turies of the legend of the Buddha An important source of old Buddhism it is Visiara only there where it coincides with the 1 th texts and other Sanskrit texts life the Maharastu But it la erronious to regard the Labitavistara in its entirety as a good old source for our knowledge of Buddhism as das Senart in his ingenious and unsuccessful I'ssai sur la legende du Buddha (p. 31 f., 456 f.) Nor does the lealitmistara give us a clue to popular Buddhism of older times as i claimed by Vallee Louisin. It is rather a key to the devilopment of the Budillia legend in its carliest beginnings in which only the principal events of the life of the great founder of the religion have been adorned with miraeles down to the final apotheosis of the Master in which from start to finish his care'r appears mere like that of a god above all the other gods. But from the standpoint of lite rary history the Lalitavistara is a c of the most important works in Buddhist literature. It is not indeed a Buddhin opic proper but it embodies all the germs of one. It was from the ballads and episodes which have been preserved in the oldest elements of the I alitavi tarn if probably not from the Lalltavistera itself that the greatest pact of Bud dhum. Ashvaghosha created his magnificent epic called Buddhacarita or life of the Buddha.

CHAPTER V.

Authorities Sylvain Levi, Le Buddhacarita d'Ashvaghosha, JA 1892 p 8, vol XIX, p 201 ff When Levi at p. 202 characterizes the Buddhacarita as " a substantial Ashvaghosha abridgment of the Lalitavistara" he is in the wrong. and his school. At least the Lalitavistra in its present redaction could not have been the model of Ashvaghosha Tho Buddhacarita has been edited by Cowell, Oxford 1893, and translated by him in SBE, vol XLIX On Ashvaghosha and his importance to Indian literature, Sylvain Lev. deals in his comprehensive study Ashvaghosha le Sutralankra et ses sources JA 1908, p 10, vol XII, p. 77. ff Anesali in ERE vol II 159 f We now know from the discoveries of Luders that Ashvaghosha was also a dramatic poet, as the author of the Shariputraprakarana SBA, 1911, p 385 ff A biography of Ashvagosha by Kumarajiva was translated into Chinese between 401 and 409 A D It is given as an excerpt by Wassiljew in his Buddhism though it is a wholly legendary account

Down to the year 1892 when the Fiench scholar Sylvain Levi published the first chapter of the Buddhacarita, people in Europe knew little of Ashvaghosha beyond his name. To-day he is known to us as one of the most eminent poets of Sanskiit literature, as the masterly model of Kalidasa and as the author of epic, dramatic and lyiical poems. Unfortunately, however, we know very little of his life. All tradition agrees that he was a contemporary of king Kanishka (about 100 AD) and that he was one of the leaders, if not the founder, of the Mahayana doctrine of Buddhism

On the uncertainty of the age of Kanishka see above vol I, p. 437, Franke and Fleete independently come to the conclusion that the Kanishka came to power in 5253 BC On the contrary, R G Bhandarkar(JBRAS, XX ff 19,385 ff) is of opinion that Kanishka lived in the third century A D Boyer in JA 1900, V XV, p 526 ff makes it probable that he lived at the end of the first and the beginning of the second century A D In his latest investigation on the wra of Kanishka, Oldenberg comes to the conclusion that he is to be assigned to the close of the first century A,D (NGGW 1911, p 421 427) To the same result arrives on other ground Pandit Haraprasada Shastri (Sundaranandam Kavyam, p. 427). He would also indentify the poet with Ashvaghosa Raja occurring in an inscription of the times of Kanishka (Ep. Ind. VIII 171 I) which however logel considers to be an unu cottaful attempt Quite positively. Ashvaghesha came of a Brahman family and had a sound Brahmanic educa Life of Ashyn tion before he went over to Buddhism chosha As a Buddhist he joined, we may surmise at first the Survastivada school but laid great stress on Buddha Rhakis and thus prepared for the Mahayana As his hirthplace or home is mostly mentioned Saketa or Ayodhya, modern Oudh But Benares and Latua are also mentioned in this connection. His mother a name was Savornakshi. The Tibetan life of Ashvaghosha says of him ' There was no anestion that he could not solve there was no objection which he would not remove the threw down his opponents as fast os n strong wind breaks down decayed trees "

According to the same account he was a distinguished musician who himself composed music and with his troupe of minstrels male and female roamed through market towns. There he played and sang with his choir melancholy ditties on the nullity of existence and the crowd stood charmed with his entrancing melody. In this way he won many over to bis religion. According to Vusuhandha he assisted katyayanipatra-in the preparation of his comment ary on the Abhidharma.

The Chinese pilgrim I tsing who journed through India in 671-095 speaks of the learned monks who success fully combated the horeties furthered the religion of the Buddha and were consequently esteemed higher than gods and men by the people. And he ndds that in each generation there are only a couple of such men—men like Nagarjana, Dova and Ashvaghosha of antiquity "

Hiven-tsiang calls Ashvaghosha, Deva, Nagarjuna and Kumaralabdha "the four suns which illuminate the world" (SBE Vol. 49, p. 9). The same I-tsing relates how in his time in India was read in front of Buddhist shrines interalia a manual of sacred texts prepared by Ashvaghosha. He also knows him as the author of hymns, of Sutralankara and of the Buddhacarda (1-tsing Record translated by Takakusu, p. 152, f. 165, 181)

Of the Buddhavarda I-tsing says that it was a voluminous poem which recounted the life and Ashvaghosha's the work of the Buddha "from the time great work when he was still living in the royal palace the Buddha's till his last hom in the park of the sal biography. trees" He adds "It is extensively read in all the five parts of India and in the countires of the South Sea (Sumatra, Java and the neighbouring islands). He clothed manifold notions and ideas in a few words which so delighted the heart of his reader that he never wearied of perusing the poem. Moreover it was regarded as a virtue to read it masmuch as it contained the noble doctime in a neat compact form" (I-tsing p 165 1). From what I-ising says it follows that he knew the Buddhacanta in the form of its Chinese translation in which the epie consists of 28 cantos and the narrative is brought down to the Nuvana of the Buddha

It is the Fo sho hing t tsan translated from banshrit into Chinese between 114 and 421 by Dharmaraksha and by Beal from Chinese into English in SBE XIX, Rhys Davids (JRAS 1901, p 105 f) has rightly emphasized that this Chinese work is no translation in our sense. Much more accurate is the rendering of the 7th or 8th century into Tibetan (Leumann, WZKM 7, 1893, p 193 ft)

Now since the Tibetan translation also contains 28 cantos we must indeed suppose that in the Sanskirt text which comprises only 17 cantos and terminates with the conversions in Benares we have only a torso; and in fact it is but a torso. For out of these 17 cantos only the first 13 are old ond genuine. The concluding portion was supplied by one Amritananda, who lived as a copyist in the beginning of the 9th century because he himself admits he could find no complete manuscript. Even the manuscript of the Puddhacurita discovered by Haraprasada Shastri reaches down only to the middle of the 19th canto (JASB Vol. 5 p. 47 fl.)

and what the Chine e pilgrim says in culogy of the Buddhacarita we can completely sal stantiate in the basis of the torso we nessess. Here we have in reality for the first time a proper Buddha enje created by a true post a piet who permeated with the love and reverence for the exalted nerson of the Buddha and profound reverence for the verity of the doctrine of the Buddha represents the life and tho teaching of the master in noble language of art which is not artificial. The Budifbacarita is technically colled a Mahakawa or great noem -a courtly one in art and it is composed in the style appropriate to have the beginnings of which we find in the Hamayana Valmiki and his imme diato followers were the predecessors of Ashvaghosho just as the latter himself was a forerunner of halidasa. All the three great poets, however agree in this that in the employment of Alamkaras or poetic embellishment they are throughout moderate Aml moderate as to language and style is Ashvighosha also in the presentment of the infracu lons in the Buddha legend. He eschens the extravagance such as we find for example in the Lalitovistara. In contrast with the chaotic disorder of the text of the Maha vastn and the Lulltavistara we find in the Buildhacarita a considered and artistic arrangement of the material And although the poet is at home with the older sacred texts he stands independent of them. Not that he has in any way altered the tradition, he understands how to invest with a new poetic garb the legend known of old and to lend originality of expression to the doctrine of the primitive Buddhistic sutras. Always is Ashvaghosha more of a poet than a monk, at least in his Buddhacarita. As Windisch observes, Ashvaghosha seems to have diligently avoided the ring of the phraseology of the older texts (Mara and Buddha, p. 205)

Quite differently poetical for instance from that of the Lalitavistara is the picture of the young Buddhacarita prince going out for a walk in cantos 3 and Kalidasa. and 4

Here in a chaiming way is depicted how when the news arrives that the prince had gone out the ladies of the city in their curiosity hasten from their chambers to the 100fs of the houses and to the windows, hindered by their guidles which fall off, and rush forward with the greatest haste pressing on and pushing each other, frightening by the clank of their waistbands and the ring of their ornaments the buds on the 100fs The faces of the beauties, chaiming as lotus, gleaming out of the windows appear, as if the walls of the houses were really decorated with lotus flowers Cowell has already noticed in the preface to his edition of the Buddha Charita, Kalidasa has imitated this scene from Ashvaghosha (Buddha Chanta, m 13/24) in his Raghuvamsha (vii, 5/12) The meeting with the old man whom the gods cause to appear before the prince is charmingly descubed In his astonishment the prince asks

"Who is the man coming this side, oh charioteer? With white hair, eyes sunk deep in their sockets, Bending over his staff, his limbs quavering? Is that Nature's course or a sport of Chance?"

To this the characteer replies:

"Old ogs it is that has broken him,—age,
The thief of hearty and the destroyer of strength
The source of sorrow and the end of joy,
The foe of intelligence and the disappearance of memory
He too sucked at his mother s hreast
As a child learnt to walk in course of time
Slowly he grew big and strong —o youth
By degrees has old age creet on him.

After the prince had learnt on his three walks out of his palace of old age disease and death no more could he find any joy in life. It is in vain that the family priest hy order of the king calls upon the women and maidens of the palace to bend their energies on their seductive out to soothe the prince and turn him from his distressing thoughts. The prince remains untonched by the soft distractions. He only thinks of the unthinking ways of these women and cries out (iv 60 f.)

How senseless the man appears to me whose neighhour ill and old and dead he Sees and yet holds fast to the good things of this life and is not thrilled with anxiety

It is as if a tree divested of all flower and fruit must fall or be pulled down --

Unaffected remaining the neighbouring trees."

The presentment of the love scenes helongs to the indispensable element in the poetic are Statecraft, as an apparago to the court. And the crotic art and poet satisfies this demand in depicting the sports of the lovely maidens who endeavour to draw the prince towards themselves (iv. 24/63) rust as well as in the vivid portraval of the night scene in the ladies' chamber which causes the prince to fly from the palace These themes give Ashvaghosha the opportunity for the display of his crotic art. It may be noted that the description (v, 48/62) in its primitive shape is iccounted by the young Yasa in the Pali Vinayapitaka have already had occasion to remark that a similar scene in the Ramayana (v, 9/11) has been copied from this Buddhist poet Ashvaghosha The court poet, however, must also be familiar with the doctrine of the nitishastras or statecraft And the world-wide principles are unfolded to the prince by the priest attached to the loval household in order to divert his mind from his meditations (iv, 62/82) Finally, belonging to the same species of court poetry is the delineation of the battle scene Here our poet rises to the occasion in that in the thirteenth canto he conjures up a vivid scene of the struggle of the Buddha with Mara and his hordes classed in the category of court poetry viz, Saundarananadakariya Love and The religion discoverer and editor of this poem is Pandit Haraprasada Shastii (A Bastion, JA 1902, vol xix, p 79 ff and F W Thomas JRAS 1911, 1125). It ลโรด tuins round the histor v ofBuddha's 'life, but 'limns the especially those scenes 'and episodes which have been either touched upon or not treated at all in the Buddhacarita Thus in the first canto is exhaustively described the history of the finding of the city of Kapılavastu The actual content of this poem, however, is constituted by the history of the loves of Sundarı and Nanda, the half-brother of the Buddha who is initiated into the Order against his will by the latter

Ashvaghosha was the author of another poem to be

"Tust as Sundary the levely bride of Nanda, weeps and wails over her lost husband so does Nanda suffer for his beloved. Vain are the attempts of the brother monks to tranquilize him Even the word of the Buddha is imnot ent to reconcile him. Then the Muster takes him by the hand and rises with him to heaven. On their way they see in the Himalayas a hidedus one-eyed female monkey and the Buddhe asks Nanda if Sundari was more character than she and Nanda naturally says Yes, with energy however they see in the heaven the unsurae or celestial nymphs and Nanda finds that the difference between them and his wife is as great as that between the latter and tho one-eyed ane. From this moment onwards he is possessed with a passionate longing for the fairies and returning on earth gives himself up to serious ascetic practices in order to be able to attain to the paradise Thereinon Ananda, the favourite disciple of the Buddha teaches him that even the joys of paradise are vain and ungatory. Nanda is finally canvinced and goes to the Buddhn to say that he had no longer a desire for the beanties of beaven. The Buddha is greatly pleased and preaches to him in several cantos the cardinals of his doctrine. Nanda now rotires into the forest practises the four great meditations and becomes an arkat Gratefully be betakes himself to the Buddha and does him reverence but the Master calls upon him now that he has attained his object out of compassion for others to preach the doctrine of salvation and conduct others to emancina tion

The reference to the foreliste convention of Namia occurs also in our older sources. Mahavange, i. 54 Nikhankatha p 81; Rhya Davids Buddhist Birth Steries, p 138 As is pointed out by Harapmania Shattri (p xill) a strongly divergent version of this legand is to be found in the Pall commentary on the Uhammapada. See also Spance Hardy Manual P Buddhism; Katn History of Buddhism; i 155; Foucher, Greece Buddhist Art (1, 464).

Whilst in the Buddha Charita there is no express doctrine emanating from the Mahayana school the concluding portion of the Saundara-Synthesis of Schools nanda-kavya already begins to betray a leaning towards the Mahayana It is not sufficient for it that Nanda himself should become a saint who attains to Nu vana. He must also be an apostle of the faith, although it must not be forgotten that even in the Hinayana the obligation of the propagation of the faith and proselytism is highly praised, as in a Sutra in the Angutta-Besides in the third great work of Ashvaghosha, ianikaya entitled the Sutralankara, which we up to now knew only from a Fiench translation of the Chinese version belonging to about 405 BC, many of the semi-legendary stories are based on a Hinavanic foundation From this Sutralankara translated into French from the Chinese version of Kumarajiva, Huber was able to trace three stories to the Divyavadana (BEFEO, 1904, pp 709-726) but fragments of the Sanskrit original have more recently been discovered at Turfan and studied by Luders in an old palm leaf manuscript, (see Fragments of Bhuddhist Drama, Berlin, 1911, and Vallee poussin Le Museon, 1909, p 86)

Sutralamkara or "Sutra-Ornament" is a collection of pious legends after the model of the Jata-Sutralamkara. kas and Avadanas which are narrated in prose and verse in the style of Indian poetic art Many of these legends are known to us of old eg, that of Dirghayus or prince Long-life and of king Shibi Others already show more of the spirit of the Mahayana or at least a reverence for the Buddha which is more Mahayanistic in its tendency. An illustration is furnished by story No. 57, which happens also to be one of the most charming in the collection.

A man comes to the monastery and desires to be mitiated into the Order The disciple Sharipatra examines him and finds that the candidate in none of his previous existences for mons had done the smallest good deed and prononnees him unworthy of admittance. The man leaves the monastery in tears. Then the Buddha himself meets him and the Buddha's heart being full of compassion he strives to convert all mankind with the love that a mother bears to her son. He lays his hand on the head of the rejected one and asks ' Why down thou cry f And the latter relates to him how Shariputra had dismissed him. Thereupon the Bud dha consoles hun in a voice that resounded like distant thunder and adds that Shariputra was not omniscient The Buddha himself then briuge the man back to the mones tery and relates before all the monks the karma which was a good act wherehy the man had acquired right to emancips tion. Once upon a time in his previous birth this person was a poor man who was wandering in a hill forest to collect wood, when a tiger rushed at him. Filled with terror he cried out adoration to the Buddha? On account of these words the man must partake of deliverance from sor row The Buddha himself initiated him and presently he became an Arhat.

An example of a real Mahayanutic Buddha hhaktı is also furnished by No 68 where Gantamı, the foster mother of the Buddha attamı to Nirvana through the grace of the Buddha

That the Sutralankara 12 of later origin than the Buddha charita 12 proved by the fact that the latter 12 quoted in the former' (Huber page 192 222) Since in two of the stories of the Sutralankara 2 part is played by king Kanishka Ashvaçhosha munt have lived at the time of the composition of the hook as an old man at the court of the king But it 12 much to be deplored that up to now we have only Chinese translations of the Sutralankara The Sanskrit text so far has never been discovered Not only is it in itself a literary work of importance the merits of which impress themselves upon us through two translations, first Chinese and then French, as has been appropriately observed by Levi, but it is not of trifling significance for the history of Indian literature and culture masmuch as it mentions the epics of the Mahabharata and Ramayana, it combats the philosophical doctrine of the Sankhva and Vaisheshika schools just as forcibly as it opposes the religious views of the Brahmans and the Jams and refers in a variety of ways to the scripts, to the aits and to painting Still more is uncertainty a matter for regiet with reference to a few other books which are attributed to Ashvaghosha question whether they really belong to him. This applies especially to the Vanasuchi or Diamond Needle which is in any case an interesting little book in which there is a vehement polemic against the caste system of the Biahmans

The Vajrasuchi or refutation of the Arguments upon which the BrahmaVajrasuchi pical institution of the caste is founded by the learned polemic against Buddhist Ashvagosha (edited by Lancelot Wilkinson) caste also the Tunku by Soobajee Bapoo, being a reply to the Wujra Soochi, 1839 A Weber, Uber die Vajrassuci (Abdhandlungen der Preuss Akademie der Wissenschaften phil h st. Kl 1859, S 295 ff und Indische Streifen 1, 116 ff) B H Hodgson Essays on the Languages, Litera ture and Religion of Nepal and Tibet, London 1874, p 126 ff and S Levi
A 1908, s. 10 t, XII p 70 f

Here the author very effectively takes up the Brahmanic standpoint and demonstrates on the authority of Brahmanic texts and citations from the Veda, the Mahabharata and Manu the invalidity of the claims of castes as recognised by Brahmanas When in 1829 Hodgson published a translation of the books and Wilkinson in 1839 published an edition they astonished scholars by the democratic spirit of Europe displayed in the book. In this tract, the doctrine of equality of mankind has been advocated for all human beings are. in respect of joy and sorrow love insight manners and ways death fear and life all equal. ' Did we but know more about the author and the time when the book was composed it would be of much creater importance for the literary history of India on account of the anotations from Brahmanic texts. It sneaks for the authorship of Ashvochosha that in Sutralamkara No. 77 the Brohmanic institations are arrangeed with the help of quotations from Manu s law hook just as in the Vajrasuchi. On the other hand the Varraspehi is enumbrated peather in the Tibeton Tanjur nor among the works of Ashvaghosha by I taing and further in the Chinese Tripitaka Catalogue the Vairasuchi which is said to contain a refutation of the four vedos is described as translated into Chinese between 973 and 981 and is averabed to a Dharmakirti (Bunyo Namio Catalogno of the Chinese translation of the Buddhist Tripitaka No. 1303) The Chinese term fa shang is the translation of the Sanskrit proper name Dharmakirti

It is altogether undeeded whether other books the authorship of which is assigned to Ashva of Ashva writers were actually composed by him the fame of Ashvaghosha as a teacher of the Mahayana is founded on his Mahayana

Shraddhotpada or the Rise of the Mahayana Faith a philosophical treatuse studied in the monasteries of Japan as the basis of the Mahayana docirine. The poet of the Buddhacaria sava Levi shows him here as a profound metaphy sician as an intrepid reviver of a doctrine which was destined to regenerate Buddhism. However it is anything but cer tain or rather highly improbable that it is in reality the product of Ashvaghosha since it omhodies teaching which is assignable to a later date. So long, however, as the Sanskrit.

text of the book is denied us a final judgment regarding the age of the author is impossible

The Shraddhotpada was translated first in 534 and then in 710 AD into Chinese From the second Chinese translation T Suzuki prepared an English version, "Discourse of the awakening of Faith in the Mahayana" Suzuki holds Ashvaghosha the poet to be the author and asserts on the basis of the book itself, the Mahayana Shraddhotpada that he was the actual founder of the Mahayana sect The doctrine which the book incorporates is, however, that of Vijnanavada as taught by Asanga and the teaching of the Tathagatagarbha and the Tathata which occurs in the Lankavatara Professsor Takakusu, who holds the authorship of the poet Ashvaghosha as altogether out of the question, says that the older catalogue of the Chinese texts does not contain the name of Ashvaghosha as the author In the Tibetan Tanjur Ashvaghosha is also described as the composer of the Shatapanacashatikanamastora, panegyiic in 150 verses, which according to I-tsing, is the work of the poet Matriceta In fact I-tsing cannot say too much regarding the renown of this Matriceta, who at all events belongs to the same school as Ashvaghosha and is accordingly confused with him

To follow the Tibetan historian Taranatha, Matriceta is only another name of Ashvaghosha, (FW, Matriceta. Thomas OC XIII, 1902, p 40) One dare not decide whether our Matriceta is identical with the Matriceta, the Author of the Maharajakanikalehha, (Thomas Ind Ant, 1903, p 345 ff and SC Vidyabhushana JASB, 1910, p 477 ff) "It is entrancing," says I-tsing, "in the congregation of the monks to hear recited the hymn in 150 verses or the hymn in 400 verses These fascinating poems are like heavenly flowers in their beauty and the exalted principles which they contain emp late in dignity the height of mountain summits. Therefore all the composers of hymns in India imitate his style regard ing him as the father of literature Even men like the Bodhisattya Vanca and Va ubandhu creatly admire him Throughout India every monk a soon as he is able to recite the five or ten commandment. learns the usalms of Matri The legend would have it that in a previous buth he was a nightingale which culoused the Buddha in charm ing melody 14 in him elf translated from Sanskrit into Chinese the lymn of 150 years (Peror l p. 156 666) Now however, most fortunately we have discovered in Central I in framments of the Sanskrit originals of the hymns of Matriceta and from the mutilated manuscripts discovered at Turfan t which we already owe so much Siegling has succeeded in recen tructure almost two thirds of the text. The vers s are in the arti tie but not the extravagant havra sixle Besides Dr Sicaling who has been prepar ing an edition for the press similar fragments discovered in Central Asia have been published by Levi (JA 1910 pare to and Vallee Louisin 1911 page 7(1) F W Thomas translated one of the Matriceta's poems the Larnanariha turnana from the Tibetan rendering into Inglish (Ind. Ant vol. 31, p 145)

Better known is the poet Shura or Aryashura probably issuing from the same school, al Briddhist poet though of a considerably younger date Bhura. Whose Jatakamala alrongly resembles the butralamkara in style The Jatakamala or the Garland of Jatakam is however only the name of a species of composition. Several poets have written jatakamalas that is they have treated with a free hand in an original poetic speech in mixed verse and prose selections of the Jatakas. It was also not Aryashura's business to discover new stories but to reproduce ancient legends in artistic and elegant idiom. His diction in prose as well as verse is of the havya class, but noble and elevated, more artistic than artificial So far as the ratakas are designed to be employed by the monks in their sermons, the jatakamala also serves this purpose for the preacher. Only the poet who was probably himself a preacher at the court, has none but monks before his eyes, who held their religious discourses in courtly encles where Sanskirt poesy was understood and appreciated The book contains 34 jatakas which, like the 35 jatakas of the Pali Cariyapitaka illustrate the Paramitas or the excellences of the Boddhisattva Nearly all the stories appear also in the Pali Book of Jataka and twelve are to be found likewise in the Carryapitaka Many of the Sanskiit veises harmonise with the Pali Jatakas (See Speyer's translation, p. 337) To the few stories which are wanting in the Pali collection belongs the first · in which is related how the Bodhisattva sees a hungry tigiess about to devoui its young and sacrifices himself to be her nourishment. It is a highly characteristic story and may be reproduced here as an example of the anecdotal literature designed to convey the Mahayana doctrine of universal compassion

"Already in his earlier biths the Master Master's self-displayed a selfless love for all creatures less love and allowed himself to be absorbed into other beings. Therefore must men cherish for the Buddha, the Lord, supreme attachment. For the following miracle on the part of the Lord in one of his previous births is recounted a deed which was celebrated by my venerable teacher one of the adorers of Three Jewels who gave satisfaction to his preceptor by his insight and truth, and became himself an emment master in the search for virthe In those doys the Bodhisattin who is now the Lord in keeping with his extraordinary promises by virtue of his charity love succour to the poor conferred grace on the world out of compas ion issuing, from the immaculate stream of insight and love was born in a Brahman family devoted to their duties and pre-eminent for character learned and powerful. As he grew up he presently nequired mastery over all the drist and sectiones. He obtained much wealth and honour However he found no pleasure in world by life and soon withdrew into retirement. As a pious ascetic he lived in the forest. One day he was wandering accompanied by a single disciple in the mountains. He saw in a cave a young tigrest exhausted with hinger and about to devour her own young trustfully approaching her to feed on her milk

As the Bodhisettya saw her

Trembled he brave us he was.

I illed with compassion for the serrew of the nearest

Like the prince of mountains in an certhqueke

How strange! The compassionate remain intropld even under greet personal grief.

But when a stranger is smitten bewever small they quail.

He sent out his disciple to fetch meet But this was enly a pretext in order to be left alone. He was already determined to hurl houself dawn the precipice in order to save the life of the creature and to serve as food to the mother tiger. He based his resalva on this that this futile earthly life has no value except as an offering for others. Moreover he would give a heartening example unto those who would henceft the warld, put to showe the self-seckers point the path of heaven to the benevolent and himself attain to supreme illumination. Nothing else he desired "Not out of covetousness, not in search of renown, nor joys of Heaven or kingly tule to acquire, not for the sake of my eternal weal, but only to do good to my neighbour, do I act thus As surely as this is truth, so may it be granted into me to remove the tribulation of the world and to bring salvation to it, even as the sun brings it light when darkness swallows it up"

With these words he hurls himself down the cliff The tigress has her attention called by the noise, leaves her young and throws herself upon the body of the Bodhisattva to devour it When the disciple comes back and beholds the spectacle, he is profoundly moved and utters a few verses of veneration for the exalted Master Men, demi-gods, and gods express their admiration for the Lord by strewing garlands of flowers and precious stones over what is left of his bones

The mexhaustible sympathy of the Bodhisattva has also been glorified in most other stories. Itsing extols the Jatakamala or Jatakamalas among the works which in his time were great favourites and were much read in India Among the frescoes in the caves of Ajanta there are scenes from the Jatakamala with inscribed stophes from Aryashura. The inscriptions belong palæographically to the sixth century AD and since another work of Aryashura had already been translated into Chinese in 434, the poet must have lived in the fourth century.

I-tsing, Tr Takakusu, p 166 f, H Luders, NGGW 1902, p 758 ff B Nanjio, Catalogue of the Chinese Tripitaka, No. 1349, The Zacharie, GGA, 1888, p 850, F W Thomas in Album Kern, p 405, ff The Chinese translation of the Jatakamala mentions Aryashura as the author. It has only 14 storics, see Ivanovski in BHR, 1903 V. 47, p. 298 ff.

CHAPTER VI

The Intakamala is siso called Bodhisattva Avadana mala for Bodhisattva Avadana is synony Literature of mais with Intaka. The Jatakas are Avadanas consequently nothing but Avadanas having the Bodhisattva for their hero Consequently works like the Sutrahunkara and the Jatukamala hayo much in common with the texts of the Avadena literature. On the other hand muncrous Intakas are to be found

On the Armiana literature in general see Bornouf Introduction to the History of Buddhism p 207; Feer in the introduction to his translation and Spayer Foreword to his cilition of the Armianalus 1 in the collections of Aredonse

the Mahayana

I ike both backs of Buddhest stery interature the Avadana texts also stand so a to say with Veneration one foot in the llungana and the other for the Buddha. In the Mahayana literature And I tsing (Takakusu p xxii L and 14 f) lets us lined that the line of demarcation between the Hunayana and the Mahayana was often anything but rigid. The alder works belong entirely to the Hunayana and yet they display the same veneration for the Buddha which is not wanting likewise in the Pali jatakas and apadanas but they eschew the hyperbole and the mythology of the Mahayana while the latest avadana books are permented with

The word avadana signifies a great religious or moral achievement as well as the history of a What is great schievement. Such a great act may Avadana?

Avadana?

Avadana?

Avadana signifies a great religious or moral achievement as well as the history of a great act may be confined to the founding of an institution for the supply of income flawers gold and jewels to, or the hullding of, sanctuaries,—stupes charityes and so farth Since these staries as a rule are designed to incul cate that dark deeds bear dark fruits, white acts beget fair fruit, they are at the same time tales of harma which demonstrate how the actions of one life are intimately connected with those in the past or future existences. They are to be regarded as legends only from our modern standpoint To the Buddhist they are actualities. They have indeed been related by the Buddha himself and are warranted to be the words of the Buddha, Buddhavacana Like the jatakas the avadanas also are a species Sutra It is accordingly usually related by way of an of sermons introduction where and on what occasion the Buddha narlated the story of the past and at the close the Buddha draws from the story the moral of his doctrine Hence a regular avadana consists of a story of the present, a story of the past and a moral If the hero of the story of the past is a Bodhisattva the avadana can also be designated a nataka A particular species of avadanas are those in which the Buddha instead of a story of the past relates a prognostication of the future These prophetic anecdotes serve like the stories of the past to explain the present There are besides avadanas in which both the parties of the stories are united and finally there is a class in which a karma shows good or evil consequence in the present existence All these species of avadanas occur sporadically also in the Vinaya and the Sutra pitakas however, are grouped in large collections with the object of edification, or for more ambitious literary motives A work of the first variety is the Avadanashataha which is most probably the most ancient of its kind. It is a collection of a hundred avadana legends Since it was already rendered into Chinese in the first half of the 3rd century and since it makes mention of the dinara we may with tolerable certainty assign it to the second Christian century That it belongs to the Hinayana is indicated already by the character of the ancedetes but this is blowise corroborated by the circumstances that in the starles relating to the present there are fragments embodled from the Sanskrit canon of the Sarvastivadis relating to the Parinirvana and other sutras. In these legends the warship of the Buddha plays a great part. There is no trace in them however of the Budhlsativa cult or of any Mahayanistic mythology.

The Avadanashataka consists of ten decades each treating of a different theme. The first four shataka contain stories designed to show the enables a man to become a Buddha or a Pratycka Buddha. The division into vargas (Pali vagga) of ten components each is a favoarite with Pali texts and accordingly would appear to date from the older Buddhist period. All the tales of the first and nearly all of the third decade are of a prophetic nature.

Here an act of picty is related by which a person -a Brahman a princess the son of an usurer a wealthy mer chant a gardener a king a ferry man a young maiden and so forth -makes adoration to the Buddha which usually leads to the occurrence of some kind of miracle and then the Buddha with a smile reveals that the particular person in a future ago will became a Buddha or (in the Third book) a Pratycka Buddha On the other hand the his tories in the Second and in the Fourth decades are Intakas. With regard to the saintly virtues and astounding acts It is explained that the hero of these tales was no other than the Buddha himself in one of his earlier births. A kind of Pretavastu, carresponding to the Pali Petavatthu is represented by the Fifth book. A saint -usually it is Maudgalyayana,-proceeds to the world of spirits and observes the sorrows of one of its decisens, (pretas) male or female. He questions the spirit regarding the cause of his tribulation The spirit refers him to the Buddha, and the latter then nairates the history of the "black deed," refusal to give alms, offence to a saint, etc., which this ereature perpetrated in his previous both. The Sixth book relates historics of men and beasts that through some prous aet are born as deities in heaven The last four decades narrate stories purporting to show the nature of acts which lead to Arhat-ship The Athats of the Seventh book are all derived from the Shakya clan, those of the Eighth book are all women, those of the Ninth arc persons of irreproachable conduct, and those of the Tenth are men who in former days committed evil deeds and suffered in consequence and subsequently owing to an act of virtue attained to the state of an Arhat

Now these stories in our collection have not only been arranged after a definite plan and system, The fixed but are related according to a set model model. This process of working according to a pattern is earried to the extent of perpetual resteration of phrases and descriptions of situations in unaltered strings of words. Thus following the rigid pattern every one of our tales begins with the protracted formula.

"The Buddha, the Lord, venerated, highly respected, held in honour, and lauded by kings, ministers, men of wealth, citizens, artisans, leaders of caravans, gods, Nagas, Yakshas, Asuras, Garudas, Kinnaras and gigantic snakes, adored by Devas, Nagas, Yakshas, Asuras, Garudas, Kinnaras and gigantic snakes, the Buddha, the Lord, the Renowned, the Served, betook himself, accompanied by his disciples and provided with all the necessaries in clothing food, bedding, covering, refreshments and medicaments in the shape of alms to and was sojourning at "

Similarly every one of these tales ends with:

Thus spake the Lord and with cestasy in their hearts the monks applieded the speech of the Muster'

Finally when the moral of the story is pointed out the process is invariably described in these words:

Therefore Oh monks is the fruit of whally dark deeds wholly dark that of wholly white deeds is whally white that of mixed de ds is mixed wherefore Oh monks you shall abandon the darl and the mixed deeds and take your pleasure only in fair acts

A pion man an opulent personage a mighty sovereign a happy wedding the up bringing of a coing man the appearance of an earlier evidencer Buddha and similar recurring phenomena are ever described in stereotyped terms. Nor is this minileable only to a few brief sentences. It holds good of extensive pieces covering several pages of print. One of the longest of these fixture pieces, describes the smile of the Buddha with which the latter lass down that every one can attain to the state of a Buddha Tho Buddlin always is moved to a smile before he prophesies the future. When he smiles from his month issue rays of blue yellow red and white One of these beams of light go down to the depths of inferno the others are duried heavenwards. After encircling thousands and thousands of words they return back to the Buddha and disappear into some one or the other of the parts of the Buddha a body according to the nature of the vaticination, and all this is delineated to the minutest particular. This circumstantiality and the minutis are characteristic of the parrative mode of the Avadana shotaka. However together with sauch that is banal and wearisome we always get edifying stories and many valuable anecdotes and noteworths variants to other stories acces sible to us from other pertions of Buddhist parrative litera ture We can cite only a few examples in order to give an idea of the character of this remarkable collection of Buddhist folklore

Here are some characteristic stories in which the true social life of India is mirrored

A poor girl smears the feet of the Buddha with sandal paste. This fills the whole city with the Maiden disfragiance of sandal. At this miracle the ciple. Story 28. maiden is exceedingly delighted, falls at the feet of the Buddha and prays that in her future birth she may be born a Pratyeka-Buddha. The Buddha smiles and prophesies that she shall be a Pratyeka-Buddha named Gandhamadana, (Fragrance-Delight)

This story is a version of the tale of King Shibi who has given away all his goods and posses-Extreme Comsions in charity He, however, is not content with merely making men happy; passion. Stoly he would show kindness to the smallest 34. creature He cuts off his skin with a knife and exposes himself in such a manner that flies feast on his This is seen by Shakia (Indra) in his heaven and he comes forward to put king Shibi to a further test, appearing before him in the form of a vulture leady to pounce upon him The king looks at the bird only with benevolence and says, "Take, my friend, what you like of my body, I present it to you" Thereupon the god metamorphoses himself into a Biahman and asks of the king both his eyes Shibi says "Take, Great Brahman, what thou wouldst, I will not hinder thee " Next Shakra reassumes his true form and promises to Shibi that he shall attain to perfect enlightenment

This is the legend of Maitiakanyaka representing the Sanskiit version of the Pali Jataka of Disinterested "Mittavindaka" But the story here takes pity Story 36. quite a different turn from the Pali masmuch as the hero is the Bodhisattva He gets here also his penalty for offending his mother and undergoes the hot wheel torture. But while he is subjected to the fearful torment he is informed that he will have to suffer it for sixty-six thousand years till another man guilty of a similar am appears. He feels compassion for the creature end resolves to bear the wheel on his head for all eternity so that no other being may have to endure the agony. In consequence of this thought of compassion the wheel disappears from on his head.

At the suggestion of his princess king Bimbisara set un a Stuna in his scraclio over some hair and nails presented to him by the Buddha Princess devout Story The Stung was worshipped by the women with incense lamps flowers, etc. Б4. when prince Ajatashatru assassmated his father Bimhisara and himself ascended the throne, he gave striot orders that no lady of his harem should, on pain of death, venerate the shrine Shrimati, however who was one of the ladies in the harem, did not obey the command and laid a garland of lights round the Stupe. The infuriated king put her to death. She died with the thought of the Buddha in her mind and was immediately translated to heaven as a divinity

While the heroes of all the Avadanas are the Buddha s contemporaries the hero of this last story is a person who lived in the times of service to Bud king Ashoka. The connection with the dha Story 100 time of the Buddha is established by the insertion of an account of the decease of the Buddha This narrative piece is extraoted from a Parimivanasuira and is in tolerable accord with the celebrated Pah Makaparanboanasuita. (Another passage from the Parimivanasuira serves as an introduction to Story No. 40)

A bundred years after the passing of the Buddha hved king Ashoka. He had a son named Kunsia who was so chaiming that the king thought he had no equal in the One day, however, he learnt from merchants from Gandhara that there were still more handsome young men than the prince in their country. According to the merchants there was living a youth called Sundara who was not only of meproachable beauty, but wherever he turned there sprang up a lotus-pond and a garden The astonished king Ashoka sent a messenger and invited Sundara and satisfied himself about this wonder The king asked to what karma the youth owed his excellence and the Elder Upagupta gave the explanation At the time that the Buddha had just attained to complete Niivana the present Sundaia was an impoverished peasant who prepared a refreshing bath and revived with food Mahakashyapa and his suite of 500 monks who had performed the obseques of the Master, who were depressed with sorrow at the passing of the Lord and who had been exhausted with the long journey. Sundara was now enjoying the fruit of this his good deed

A number of the stones in our Avadanashataka tuin up in other Avadana anthologies and a few Avadanasha- also in the Pali Apadanas. Thus the taka and legend of Rashtiapala which is No 90 cognate tales. In our collection corresponds partly to the Ratthapalasutta of the Pali Majhimuni-haya and partly the Ratthapala Apadana. But the correspondence stops short of the titles in the Sanskirt and the Pali Apadana displays great divergence (Feer, Avadanashataka, pp 240 f, 313 f, 335, 340 ff, 354 f, 360 f, 372 f, 439 f)

An old work which bears a great resemblance to the Avadanashataka and has a number of Tibetan and stories in common with it is the Karma Chinese analoshataka or Hundred Karma Stories This gues work, however, is unfortunately preserved to us only in a Tibetan translation (Feer pp. NNIN 1, 442 ff., V. V, 382 ff., 404 ff. and JA 1901 V.

AVII pp 00 ff 207 ff., 410 ff Speyer p MAf) Translated from Sanskrit but no longer preserved in the original language is also the Tibetan collection of Availanas now celebrated in the literature of the world as the story book of D anglun under the title of The Wiss Mon and the Fool It has been translated into German by I Schmidt Takakusu points to a Chinese version of this work (JRAS 1901 p 447 ff.)

A collection vounger than the Avadanashataka but one which has incorporated in it exceed Divyavadana ingly old texts is the Divyavadana or the Divine Avadana. The original ban krit has been edited by Cowel and Neil of Cambrid. I true extracts from it had already been translated by Burnouf (introduction to the History of Indian Haddhism). The title of the work is not certain it is only found in the chapter headings of some manuscripts. Rajendralal Mitra described in manuscript entitled Divyavadanamala which greatly deviates from our printed edition (Nepalese Buildhist I iterature pp. 301-316). Also in Paris manuscript which is described in the Cambridge edition (p. 663 ff.) harmonizes only partially with our Divyavadana.

This collection of storms of great importance for the listors of Indian sociology begins with the Mahavanistic benediction. Oh reverence to all the exulted Buddhas and Bodhisattyn's and contains a few obviously later accretions in the Mahayanistic scase. As a whole however, the book decidedly belongs to the Hinavana school. As the example of the Mahayanistic interpolation we may mention chiquter taxivity which is noted in the collection itself as a Maha, yanasuitra (p. 483). In chapter NAA there occurs the shaddkshara vidya or the well-known Tibetan formula of om man padme hūm (Poussin, Boudhisme p 381) The Sanskrit canon of Buddhism is repeatedly mentioned and individual canonic texts are quoted such as Dinghagama, Udana, Sthaviragatha (Oldenberg, ZDMG 52, 1891, pp 653, 655 f, 658, 665) It mentions the four Agamas (p. 333) Many of the stories commence and terminate exactly as in the Avadanashataka And finally a number of stereotyped phrases and descriptions, so characteristic, appear again in self-same words in the Divyavadana In all probability they are derived from the common source, the Vinayanitaka of the Sarvastivadis As a matter of fact, more than half of the anecdotes have been borrowed from the latter but several have been loans from the Sutralankara of Ashvaghosha which we discussed above (Huber BEFEO 1V, 1904, 709 ff, VI, 1906, 1 ff, Sylvain Levi T'onng Pao, V VII, 1907, 105 ff, and Speyer Avadanashataka II, pieface p XVI f).

The Divyavadana is composed of very varied materials

It has no principle of division, nor is it

Analysis of uniform with regard to language and components. Style Most of the legends are written in good simple Sanskiit prose which is only here and there interrupted by Gathas But in some passages we find also elaborate poetry of genuine Kavya style with long compounds The editor of this collection of legends appears, therefore, to have simply preced together a variety of stories from other texts From this also follows that the several component elements of the work are assignable to different periods of time If our collection, as has been alleged, was already translated into Chinese in the third Christian century it could not have been published in the original long before that date At the same time we have to bear in mind that because some of the Avadanas in the Divyavadana were translated into Chinese in the third century (Cowel Neil, p 655,), therefore it does not necessarily follow that the work as a whole was rendered into Chinese (Kein Manual, p 10 Barth, RHR 889, V 19, p 260) Not only there is the mention of the successors of Ashoka, the kings of the Shinga dynasty down to the Pushyamitra (178 B C) but there is the repeated occurrence of the dinara, which brings us down to the second century And some period after Ashvaghesha must have elapsed before a compiler could take extracts from his Sutralaukara for his own anthology. The Divyavadana therefore was reducted rather in the third than in the second century Nevertheless it is remarkable that just one of the most in teresting legends in the Divyavadana, the story of Shar dulakarna, was translated into Chinese in 265 A.D. The contents of this Avadana noteworthy in many respects are as follows.—

The Master was sojourning in Shravasti and Ananda was wont daily to repair to the town on his Shardniakarna begging round. Once upon a time as he love of the un was returning from the town, he became tonchable. thirsty and say a Chandals maiden, nmaed Parakriti fetohing water from a woll. Sister said he to her give me some water to drink. Prakriti replied. I am a chandals girl revered Ananda Sister, said Ananda I do not ask you about your family and your caste but if you have any water left, give it to me and I will drink. (Note that so far the similarity with Jesus and the Samari tan woman is surprising John 4, 7 ff., but the whole course of the narrative further down in the Gospel is so different that we can scarcely think of any connection between the Buddhist and Christian Scriptures) The maiden hands him the water to drink and falls deep in love with the Saint She tells her mother that she will die or have Anenda for her husband. The mother who was a powerful witch prepared a potent philtre and attempted her sorcery on Ananda with manirus The process is described in a wey similar to the incantation in the Kaushikasutra of the Atharvaveds. The charm is successful, Ananda comes into the house of the Chandala where the joyful Prakriti has pre pared a bed But in the moment of supreme danger, Ananda breaks out into tears and supplicates the Buddha in his The latter hastens to his succour with his own counter mantias Ananda leaves the Chandala home and neturns to his monastery. The great witch declares to her unfortunate daughter that the necromancy of Gautama is superior to her own But Prakriti, the Chandala maiden, was yet not cured of her love She went into the town and followed Ananda day after day as he went forth on his mendicant's circuit Once more Ananda in his sorrow turned to the Master for help The latter summoned Prakuti to himself and ostensibly consented to her desire that Ananda should be her husband Soon, however, he brings her to a frame of mind in which she takes the vow of spinsterly chastity and turns a nun She not only has her hair shaven , and dons the nun's weeds, but dives into the profundity of the four Noble Truths and understands the religion of the Buddha in its entirety

When, however, the Brahmans, warriors and citizens of Shravasti heard that the Buddha made a Chandala daughter a nun, they were greatly perturbed, conveyed it to the king Prasenajit and the latter immediately set out for the Master to remonstrate with him Numerous Brahmans, warriors and citizens of Shravasti had gathered together there Then the Buddha related the story of Trishanku, the Chandala chieftain The latter, ages ago, was desirous of matching his learned son Shardulakarna to the daughter of the proud Brahman Pushkarasarr The Brahman rejected his overtures with disdam and now follows a most interesting dialogue in which Trishanku subjects to searching criticism the caste system and the Brahmanic code of morality. demonstrates that between members of the various castes there exists no such natural difference as between diverse species of animals and plants. Moreover there could be no easte according to the doctrines of transmigration and the theory of karma masmuch as each individually is reborn in accordance with his own deeds Finally, Pushkarasarı is convinced of the crudition of Trishanku and consents to the marriage And concludes the Master the Brahman s daughter was in a former birth no other than the Chandala spinster Prakritt. The Buddha limiself was in that age Trishanku and who else could be Shardulakarna but Ananda.

This beautiful legend of the Buildhiers was known to Bichard Wagner by means of the French trans! Mon of Burnouf (Introduction p. 205 ff.) and upon it be has based his "Victors."

Old because niready translated into Chinese in the third Christian century is also the cycle of stories called the Ashokavadana incorpo-Ashokavadana rated with the Divvnvadann LAIA) The central floure of the tales is the great king Ashoka. Historically these legends centain hardly anything of moment. But the important exceptions are first the mention of the persecution of Jainson (p 427); and secondly the intolerance of Buddhist monks under Pushyamitra (p. 433 f.) Rhys Davids has studied these allusions (JPTS 1896 p 88 f) The tales are more valuable from the literary standpoint. First of all here we have the extraordinary dramatic legend of Upagupta and Mara It is an unusually bold idea to have Mara the Evil One, the Tempter convert ed by a Buddhist monk Still bolder it is when saint Upa gupta, who longs for a vision of the Buddha who had passed for centuries into Nirvana, implores his proselyte Mara to appear to him in the garb of the Buddha and the latter like an experienced actor so thoroughly personates the Buddha that the holy man sinks in obessance before him So dramatically conceived is the whole story that one can well helieve that hero simply a Buddhist drama is recapitu lated In languago style and metre the piece helongs to the art of court poetry We are not therefore at all aur prised that, as has been proved by Huher, the compiler of the Divyavadana has extracted in its literal entirety this magnificent section from the Sutralankara of Ashvaghosha

Divyavadana pp. 856-364, translated by Windisch, Mara und Buddha p, 161 ff, Huber Ashvagosha Sutralankara translated into French, p, 263 ff, and BEFEO 4, 1904, p, 709 ff

A Pali version of this legend quite artless and undramatic has been discovered from the Burmese book of Lokapannattiby Duroiselle (BEFEO, 4 1904, p 414 ff) It is remarkable that the monastery in which Upagupta (who subsequently became the preceptor of Ashoka) lived, was founded by the brothers Nata (actor) and Bhata (soldier) and was accordingly called Natabhatika Not inappropriately Levi calls the Ashokavadana a kind of Mahatmya of the Natabhatika Monastery at Mathura.

The source of one of the most charming legends in the Ashoka cycle of tales in the Divyavadana Kunala. Queen remains unknown It is the pathetic mother and episode of Kunala He was the son of step-son. King Ashoka, and at the instigation of his wicked step-mother was blinded of his eyes of wonderful beauty. Not for a moment did he feel indignation or hatred against her who was the cause of so much misery to himself

The Dividual and has many legends in common with the Pali canon. The seventh chapter is Pali parallels. an extract from the Mahapar imrvanasutia. To a well-known Pali sutra or dialogue corresponds the history of Purna who goes out as an apostle to the wild and violent Shronaparantakas, determined to bear with equanimity and gentleness their invectives, assaults and attempts at murder (Divyavadana p 36ff)

Samyuttanikava IV p. 60, Majjhimanikaya III, 267, JPTS 1887, p. 28 Pali jataka No. 4 answers to Divyavadana, p. 498 ff., the story being that of the young merchant's son who sells a dead rat and gradually acquires enormous wealth.

The Rupavatiavadana, thirty-second in our collection reminds us rather of the legends in the Rupavatis Jatakamala. The herome outs off her sacrifice breast to feed with her flesh and blood a starving woman who was about to eat up her child In her however we see the Mahayana ideal of a her child In her however we see the Mahavana ideal of a Bodhisattva who when questioned as to the motive of her behaviour replies—

Verily I sacrifice my breast for the sake of the child not that I may get kingdom or joys not for heaven not to become Indra not to reign supreme over the world as its sole sovereign but for no reason except that I may attain to supreme complete enlightenment in order that I may domesticate the untamed liberate those that are not free console those that are disconsolate and that I may conduct to complete Kirvana the unemancipated. As true as this resolve of mine is may my womanly sex vanish and may I become a man. No sooner did she niter these words than she was transformed into a prince of Rupavata who after wards became king and reigned for 60 years.

In the same Kavya style as the Jatakamala there is the legend which is an artistic elaboration of the Maitrakanyaka Avadana in accordance with the tradition of the Avadana shataka of which it is the thirty-sixth story. In our Divigia adama it is the thirty-eighth. Extracts of this nature bring the collection of Divyavadana in harmony with the ordinary category of the Avadanamala literature.

Poetic elahoration of avadana stories drawn partly from the Avadanashataka and partly from other Kalpadrumasources is represented by the Kalpa vadanamala drumpuddonamala or the Wishtree avadana garland that is, a garland of advalans which procures all desires by the Ratnavadana mala or the Precious stone avadana garlands and by the Asskavadanamals or the Avadana garland of king Asoka'

Feer p xxiii ff. Speyer p. xii ff. xxi ff., Raj Mitra Nepalese Buddhist Literature, pp 6 ff 197 ff., 292 ff., Bendall, Catalogue p 110 ff. A legend from the Ratnavadanamala is translated by Mahendra Lal Das in the journal of the Buddhist Text Society, 1894, part 3.

The Kalpadrumavadanamala begins with an elaboration of the last story in the Avadanashataka Unequivocal And just as in the latter the elder Upagup-Mahayanism. ta appears carrying on a dialogue with king Asoka so all the legends in these Avadanamalas have been shaped in the form of conversations between Asoka and Upagupta The Asokavadanamala in its first part contains legends of Asoka himself, then only follow religious instruction in the shape of historical narratives related by Upagupta to Asoka Now all these three collections differ from the Avadanashataka not only in the circumstance that they have been east entirely in enic shlokas, but especially in that they belong unequivocally to the Mahayana and in language and style remind one of Besides, they must belong also to the period the Puranas which gave birth to the sectarian Puranas It may be noted that as has been shown by Waddell (JASB proceedings, 1899, p 70 ff) Upagupta is only another name of Tissa Moggaliputta, the perceptor of Asoka He is also a wellknown celebrity in Pali literature

Another collection which has liberally drawn upon the Avadanashataka is the Dvavimshatyavadana of the Avadana of the Twenty-two Sections Here also Upagupta is represented as holding dialogues with Asoka, but they soon disappear from the stage and their place is occupied by Shakyamuni and Maitreya, the Buddha of the present period and the Buddha to come But the legends here are related in prose and have been divided into sections in accordance with the morals inculcated by each They deal with "acts of merit," "listening to sermons," "hiberality," and so forth The Bhadrakalavadana is a collection of thirty four leginds which Upagupta relates to Asoka. Its title connects the advadanas with the age of virtue. It is similar to the Avadanamalas in that it is entirely in verse. But in plan and contests it hears a resemblance to the Mahavagga of the Pali Vinayapitaka.

Bendall Catalogue p. 88 ff ; Feer xxix Raj. Mitra, p. 42 ff ; Speyer xxxvi.

According to 8, d'Oklenburg who has translated the thirty fourth story which is another version of J. bemain 31 corresponding to the Pail Jataka. No. 537 (JRAS 1892 p. 331 f.) the Bk d = is of a later date than Eshemendra who fourthed about 1010 A D.

Just as in the sectarian Paranas there are extensive chapters and sometimes entire judgmen dent works which are technically called Minaturyas, of legendary import and generally invented to explain the origin of a festival or rite (vrata) so also we have a corresponding category of Buddhat texts. A collection of such legends is the I ratavandamala or Garland of avandas on fasts and rites which has nothing in common with the Avanda collection mentioned above except that it has the same framework,—dialogues between Upagupta and Asola

Raj. Mitra, pp 101 ff 22 ff., 231 275 ff Other texts of the same class are at pp 220 f 232 f 264 ff., 269 ff 230 ff L. Feer Buvarnavarana avadenam et Vratavadaramaia xif, Rome, 1889 f, p. 19 ff

These are obviously very late Medayana texts. A collection of a most variegated nature is the Vicilrakarnila vadana which has thirty two stories some of them derived from the Avadanashataka and others appertaining to the type of the Vratavadana Mixed like the contents is also the language being now a barbarous Sanskrit now Sanskrit verse again Pali and se forth. (Speyer pp xeil-c.) All these books are up to now only known in manuscript. But there are others which are accessible to us though only in their Tibetan and Chinese translations

As regards avadana collections in Chinese, (see Feer NXX) the Contes et Apologues Indians of Avadanas in Stanislas Julieu Paris 1860, translated Chinese and into German by Schnell 1903 are of Chinese origin, ultimately going back to Tibetan. Sanskiit prime texts. But in our collections of manuscripts and in Chinese and Tibetan translations we have preserved to us not only anthologies of avadanas. but also several individual avadanas of extensive compass For instance the Sumagadhavadana, represents the legends of Sumagadha the daughter of the famous merchant Anatha-pindada, who creates an aversion for the Jams in her husband and by a mulacle converts the whole city to the religion of the Buddha. In one of her former buths she was the daughter of the celebrated king Kriki, associated in legends with his wonderful dreams. These dieams have a wider significance than as affecting Sanskiit or even Buddhist literature. They belong to the literature of the world (See Jataka No 77 and S d'Oldenburg in JRAS p 509 ff , and Tsuru-Matsu Tokiwai Studies in Simagadhayadana. Dissertation for the University of Strassburg, 1889, Ray Mitra, p 237) It is remarkable that the same avadana is quoted from a Vinaya text in the Abhidhaimahosha Vyakhya of Yashomitia Finally, we have to make particular mention of the ponderous corpus of avadanas by the great Kashmirian Buddhist poet Kshemendia, who flourished about 1040 AD His work the Avadana-Kalpalata enjoys

The text with the Tibetan translation is edited in the Bibliotheca Indica series by Sarat Chandia Das and Hall Mohan Vidyabhushana Kshemendra' is a prolific writer and versifier of almost astounding fertility. We shall come across him more than once later on because he has occupied himself with various provinces of literature. However, he high reputation in Tibet

٨

distinguished himself less by his genius and tasto than hy his iron assiduity. The event mass of legends into which Kahemendra works the Buddhust Avadanas in the style of the elegant poetry is more didactic than spiritnal as regards the tales which he selects The Buddhist propensity to self sacrifice has been carried here to such refinement and to such a pitch and the doctrino of Karma has been inculcated with such extravagance and above all the moral is so thickly strewn over that it often overshoots the mark. The collection consists of 107 legends to which Somendra, the son of balle mendra added besides an introduction the one hundred and eighth tale of Jimptayahana All these legends are mostly known to us either from other Avadana anthologies or otherwise. The Padmovati Avadana for instance is the story of Padmayati familiar to us in the Pali commentaries. The Ekashringa Ayadana is the Rishvashringa legend so well known to us. They both ocenr also in the Mahayastu (NGGW 1901 p 26) and Luders has shown that Kahemen dra has worked up this legend after the Mahayasta The vorsion by Kshemendra of this story has been reproduced in German verse by H Francke

CHAPTER VII

The entire Buddhist Sanskrit literature discussed up to now belongs to the borderland and the Mahayanasutras, buffer state between the Hinayana and the Now we turn to Mahayana Buddhism those works which stand decidedly on the Mahayana soil There is no canon of the Mahayana, and there can be none because the Mahayana represents no unity of sects Wc are indeed, informed of a council which is said to have been held under King Kanishka, but whether at this council any canon was established, and if so, in what language and by what sects, is left doubtful The so-called "nine dhaimas" are no canon of any sect, but a sense of books which have been composed at different periods and belong to different persuasions, though all of them enjoy a high veneration in Nepal to-day These nine works are

Ashtasahasrika Prajnapaiamita, Saddharmapindarika, Lalitavistara, Lankavataia, Suvarnaprabhasa, Gandavyiha, Tathagathaguhyaka Samadhiraja, Dashabhumishvara All these scriptures are also designated Vaipulyasutras

The term dharma in the "nine dharmas" is no doubt an abbreviation for Dharmaparyaya or Worship of religious texts. A formal divine service is Books in Nepal. accorded to these nine books in Nepal, a bibliolatry which is characteristic of the Buddhism prevalent there and which is manifested in the body of the texts themselves

Hodgson's Essays p 13 , Burnouf's Introduction p 29 ff., 60 ff , Kern's der Buddhismus II 508 ff

The most important and as a literary production of high value among the Mahayanasutras is the Saddhaima-Saddharmapundarika, the "Lotus of the pundarika. Good Law" It was translated into French as early as 1852 by Burnouf and in 1884 an English translation by Kern appeared in the Sacred Books of the East series. The Sanskrif fext was edited at St Petershurg in 1908 in the Bibliotheca Buddica series by the noint editors the Dutch scholar Kern and the Japanese professor Bunylo Nanjio Whoover desires to be acquainted with the Mahayana Buddhum with all its distinguishing features with all its excellences and shortcomings, may be recommended a study of these texts. Here very little remains of Shakyamuni as a man. The Buddha is properly speaking now higher than a god above all the divinities an immeasurably exalted Being who has lived since countless arons and who will live for oll eternity. I am the father of the world 'he says of himself (xv Gatha 21) who have sprung from myself (Syavamblu) the physician end the protector of oll creatures and only because I know how tho fotnous ore of nerverted sense and blind that I who have never ceased to exist give myself out as departed.' It is only because of his compassion for all creatures, his regard for the infirmities of human nuderstanding, that he pretends to have entered Nirvana. Ho is comparable to the physician who had many sons and who once during their father a absence fell seriously Ill. The father on his return, treated them with medicaments, but only a fow of them took tho medicine the others refusing it. In order to persuade even the latter to accept the treatment, the father goes out into a foreign country and pretends to be dead. The children who now feel themselves orphans take the prescribed physic and are healed. The Buddha has recourse to a similar straingem when he apparently enters Nirvana, but again and again he omerges to proclaim his gospel. (Chapter xv. SBE 21 p 304 ff) It is his evangel that connects him with humanity, but not like the Buddha of the Pah suiras who rooms about from place to place as a mendicant friar to proclaim his doctrine, preaches the Buddha of the Letus. He takes up his stay on the Gridhrakuta peak among 'a numerous assembly of monks and nuns and often still larger crowds of thousands of Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, of gods and demi-gods" And whenever he purposes "to shower down the mighty ram of religion, to sound the great drum of faith, to laise the lofty banner of faith, to kindle the ulluminating touch of creed, to blow the powerful trumpet of religion, to beat the colossal kettle-drum of religion, a flash of light breaks forth from the cucle of hair between hrs eyebrows which illuminates the eighteen thousand 'Buddha countries' with all the Buddhas and the creatures the therein and reveals wonderous Bodhivision to the Buddha of the sattva Maitieva Fo1 15 likewise a mighty soicerei who loves by means of grand phantasmagoria to influence the minds of his audience And thus diverging as is this Buddha from the one known to us in the ancient texts, so also deviates his doctrine from the Buddha of the Hinayana Tiue, it is his mission to conduct the creatures to "Buddha knowledge," to enlightenment But he gives them a particular vehicle "the Buddha, Vehicle," which leads them to the goal Every living entity can become a Buddha that only listens to the sermon of the Buddha, that performs any deed of virtue, that leads a moral But even those who adore the relies, build stupas, or construct images of the Buddha of any kind whether of precious stone, maible, wooden statues of frescoes, and even children who set up stupas of sand while at play or scratch the lineaments of the Buddha on the wall, those who offer flowers or incense to the stupas or make music there, nay, even such as have fortuitously thought of the Lord with the idea of "Veneration to the Buddha," every one of them attains to supreme illumination (chapter 2, Gathas 61 ff, 74 ff, SBE 21, p 47 ff) The three "vehicles" are only apparent They are all supposed to lead to Nirvana, that of the disemle that of the Pratvekabuddhas and that of the Boddhisattvas In reality, however, it is only the grace of the Buddha hy which the one as well as the other reaches illumination and becomes Buddha. This tenet is elucidated with one of those charming paralles which not seldom occur in the Saddharmapundarika.

In an old dilamdated hou there lived a father with his children. Sudd niv the hous took fire Parable of The father was in acony about his children house on fire. He was a strong man and could tale up the younger ones in his arms and fly from the hence but the hence had only on door children who say reted nothing were running about in they and took no heed of his varning. He was the at it d with peri lim, plans with his children in the surroughue fire Now a sound id a oc urred to lam Children alvay has tork and be called out to them and said that he had all s the of exact are tors fulleck-cart for earls antelop early collected for them out of the house. No sooner did the children hear the word than they rushed out of doors and were say d. Now they a Led of their father for the promit d. thre kind of tex earts and the father being a wealthy man gay them solen hd and h autifully upholstere I hal lock-carts. The children were delimited and lappy & v. who would accuse the father of fal chood in that he are bused the children three limbs of ordinary play carts and have them in reality earts of a most splendly description! Sumbarly the Buddha trests the children that are men Inducing them to come out by promise of the three ' yehleles' from the burning and delapidated house of this verid, saves them and bestows upon them a unique vehicle the costlicat of all, the 'Vehicle of the Buddha'

The Buddha is also represented in the Buddhist parable of the lost a m as the good affinent father I indly disposed towards his sons, the human children:

A rich man had an only son He roamed about in foreign countries for fifty years while the growing continually more Reclaimed father was son: a parable. wealthy and had become a great man But the son lived in foreign lands impoverished and in straitened circumstances. At last he comes home as a beggai where his father was all this while longingly expecting him. The beggai son comes to the house of his father but he does not recognise his parent in the great man who, surrounded by a large retinue like a king, sits in the front of his mansion As he sees the pomp and circumstance, he flies from the house in fear lest the beggar in tattered rags be maltreated The father, however, immediately recognises him and sends out his servants to fetch the men-Trembling and shaking with terror he is dragged dicant along and falls down powerless The father then gives orders to release him The beggai stands up joyful and iepans towards the poor quarters of the city Now the wealthy man bethinks himself of a plan to win the confidence of He gets him oppiessed with the meanest piece of work by the workmen in his house but takes opportunity frequently to associate with him and gradually worms himself into his confidence Twenty years in this way pass by without the father being recognised by the son When on the point of death he summons all his relations and announces that the beggai, who had become his confidential servant was his own son, and appoints him heir to all his estate This wealthy man was the Buddha, the son that was lost and 1ecovered are the human children who only very gradually draw themselves to the Buddha, the wise father, and finally acquire his fortunate legacy ages equal to the number of the ears of corn in the four con-And there arose one after another in the world tinents "twenty hundred thousand myriads of ten million" such Buddhas (chap x1, SBE, 21 text, pp 376 f 355). In the most extravagant fashion, beyond all limits of computation the Buddha is glorified, especially in the grandiose phantasmagoria of Chapter XIV in which, through the magical powers of the Buddha, the earth splits and suddenly appear from all sides many hundred thousand myriads of ten thousand Bodhisattvas each with a following as numerous as the aggregate grains of sixty Ganges streams And while these immimerable Bodhisattvas pay homage to the Buddha fifty ages pass away during which a great silence rules but which through the supernatural power of the Lord appear only as an afternoon To the astonished Martreya the Buddha says that all these Bodhisattvas have been Equally limitless and exaggerated is the adohis disciples ration of the text itself For, strangely enough, in the midst of our text there is the recurring mention of the preaching and the exposition of the book by the Buddha and its propagation by the pieceptors Thus in Chapter XI, Shakyamum causes to appear in the air a stupa and from inside the stupa is heard a voice of a Buddha dead for myrrads of ages, "Excellent, excellent, exalted Shakyamum, thou hast well uttered this sermon of the Lotus of the good Religion, yea, it is so, it is so, exalted, blessed Lord" Time and again the ment of the preacher of the Lotus and the faithful listeners of this exhortation is plaised. It is cited in Chapter XXII

The sermon of the Lotus is like fire for those who are benumbed, like clothing to the naked, In praise of like a leader to the caravan, a mother to the Sutra. children, a boat to those who would cross the river, a taper for the dispelling of dark.

ness He who writes down this book or causes it to be written acquires endless merit. The female creature that hears it has lived for the last time as a female. Ho who listens to the sermon of the Lotus and declares his agree ment with it shall always have a sweet breath as if issuing from a lotus and from his body will flow the fragrance of sandal

All this immoderation of language and especially the laudation of the text in the text itself are Parsistance as pecuher to the Mahayano Sutras as to of Puranic the Puranas The Amitavurdhyana Sutra infinance lave down When a person has commit ted much evil, but has not spoken ill of the great Vaipulya Sutras, and if he he a very atupid man, who neither feels repreach for his wicked deeds nor repents of them but if he at the moment of his death encounters a good and wase preceptor who recites to him the superscription and titles of the twelve sections of the Mahayana texts and if he has thus heard of all the Sutras, he will be absolved from the great sins which would otherwise hurl him into birth and death for thousands of ages. It is the spirit of the Puranas which is perceived in every line of the Saddharmapundarika The few point of contract between the text of the Saddharma pundarika and that of the Shatapathabrahmana which Kern indicates by no means suffice to bring the work in line with the Vedic literature (SBE 21, p xvi f.) and it is pre onsely on this account that the book cannot belong to the oarliest period of Buddhism. If we did not know that it had already been translated into Chinese between 2,5 and 316 AD we should not consider it as so ancient for the latter date must at least be its age

At all events however the book centains elements of diverse periods It is impossible that the Elements of Sanskrit prose and the guthas in mixed diverse Sanskrit should have arisen contemporanceusly even if they did not incorporate often glaring meonsustency of contents

Frequently in the prose passages as also in the gathas the book is spoken of as a metrical composition It is probable that originally the book consisted only of verse with brief prose passages interspersed by way of introduction and links between the verses These brief prose paragraphs were subsequently expanded especially as the dialect of the verse gradually became absolete And, without being exactly commentaly they came to serve as an exposition. It is remarkable that just those chapters which contain no gathas prove even on other grounds to be rather accretions These chapters, from xx1 to xxv1, are more devoted to the panegyne of the Bodhisattvas while the Saddhaimapundarika in the rest of the texts sings the glorification of the Buddha Shakyamuni One of these Bodhisattvas is Bhaisajyaraja, the prince of the Physician's art who, in xxi chapter reveals magical formulæ and exoleisms (Dharanis) and in chapter xx11, after he has for twelve years fed on fragrant substance and drunk oil, covers himself in finest clothing, has an oil bath and burns himself Foi twelve thousand years his body buins without cessation, and this grand sacrifice and glorious fire work has the only object of showing respect to the Buddha and to the Saddhaimapundarika! The xxivth chapter is devoted to the Bodhisattva Avalokiteshvara, a great redeemer He who invokes him is free from every The sword of the executioner breaks to pieces when the person condemned to death offers supplication to All fetters are loosened, only if his name is pronounced He saves the shipwrecked and the caravans overtaken by 10bbers A woman who desires a son or a beautiful daughter has only to myoke Avalokiteshvara and her wish is fulfiled This chapter also contains a large gatha extract to the glorification of Avalokiteshvara, but this too is a late addition For all the gathas are not older than the prose, many, being interpolated at subsequent periods (Kern SBE 21 p. xviii f) The ancient Chinese translation contains doubtless chapters xxi xxvi, but in an order differ ent from that of our Sanskrit text This shows that the parishishtas or appendices were not appertaining originally to the work.

Although, however the Saddharmanundarika represents later and earlier ingredients it displays Age of the a much greater unity of character than either the Mahayasty of the Lalitavistars. Sntra It is not nossible that the older and the younger components should be separated by any extensive If the book had assumed its present compass lapse of time between 265 and 316 A.D., when the first Chinese translation was prepared or even earlier in its primary formation it must have well arisen about 200 A.D. Even Kern, who strives to establish that the Saddharmapundarika and the Lahta vistora have preserved materials going back to the most ancient period of Buddhism, has been able to cite instances only from the Lalitavistare. There is no ground for asserting that the older text saw the light a few centuries ear as Kern assumes (p xxu) Bendall ascribes to the fourth or fifth century a manuscript of the Saddharma pundarika discovered by him (JRAS 1901, p. 124) ments of the Saddharmapundarika have been discovered also in Central Asia during the explorations by Stein and others (JRAS 1911 p 1067 ff) One fact is meontestable entire Saddharmapundarika, prose and gatha presupposes a high development of the Mahayana Buddhism, especially in the direction of Buddha bhakti, the adoration of relics, the worshipping of images and shove all a highly flourishing epoch of Buddhist art. For when there is such prominent mention of thousands of myriads of ten millions of atupas which were erected for the relics of a Buddha or of the ten millions of viheres which are debneated as magnificent buildings, most luxuriously furnished there must have existed at least several hundreds of stupas and vihards, topes and monasteries, and these were doubtless embellished with images of the Buddha in precious stones, with statues of the Buddha carved in wood or metal and with reliefs and frescoes

See especially chapter ii, Gathas 77 ff , SBE In Japan the Saddhari^{na} pundarika is the sacred book of the Nichi-ren sect, Buniyu Nanjio, Sh^{ort} History of the Twelve Buddhist Sects, Tokyo, 1886, p. 132 ff

To the Bodh, attva Avalokiteshvara who has been eulo-

Karandavyuha: pundanka is also dedicated an entile its Theistic Mahayanasutra of great compass, the fill tendency title of which is Avalokiteshvana-gurla-karandavyuha, "The exhaustive description of the basket of the merits of the Avalokiteshvara". The title is usually mentioned in its abbieviated shape of Rarandavyuha We have two versions of this book, the more ancient one being in prose and the younger in shlokas The prose text was edited by Satyavrata Shamashrami in 1873. The catalogue of the India Office library registers an edition which seems to have appeared in 1872 at Sciampore.

Burnouf, Introduction pp 196-206, Raj Mitra, Nep Buddh Lit, p, 9⁵ ff Bendall, Catalogue p. 9ft, La Vallee Poussin, ERE II, p 259 f

The metrical recension occupies theistic ground For it is related how at the beginning of things appeared the Adibuddha or the primitive Buddha, also called Svayambhu, or Self-Being and Adinatha or the Flist Lord, and created the world by his meditation Avalokiteshvara is derived from this spirit and he co-operated in the creation of the world fashioning from his eyes the moon and the sin, Maheshvara from his forehead, Brahman from his shoulders, Narayana from his heart, and from his teeth the goddess of speech Sarasvati Precisely as this introduction is of the Paranic kind, so also are the language and sivile of the metrical Karandavijuha totally of the younger Puranas. Wo have no evidence that the theistic Buddhism with its Adi building as a creater existed in India, prior to the tenth century Even La Vallce Poussin only demonstrates that the creed of Adahuddha was spread over India but not that it can be proved to have existed in ancient times. (ERE, I p 95) Further the fact that the Tibetan translation which was made probably in 1616 A.D and which is found in the Kaning and is based on the prose version, which does not contain the Adibuddha section shows that the poetic version was then unknown (La Vallee Poussin ERE II p. 259) On the other hand, the cult of Avalokiteshvara is already familiar to the Chinese pilgrim Fab ien about 400 A.D. Ho himself implores this Bodhisattva for rescue when he is overtaken by a storm on his voyage from Cevlon to China. The oldest images of Avalokiteshvara date from the fifth century A Chinese translation of a Karandavijuha was mado as carly as 270 A.D

L. A. Wakiell, JRAS, 1894 p. 57 A. Foucher Etude sur l'iconographic Boudhique de l'inde, Paris 1800 p. 97 ff. and La Vallee Founts, ERI' II p. 256 ff. Burniyo Nanjio, Catalogue No. 108 where the title is given a Ratnakaranda-kavyuhasutra. A second translation was made between 420 and 479.

The bane idea is the same in both the versions of the Karandavyuha—the exaltation of the Potency of marvellous redeemer Avalokiteshvara, Avalokiteshvara the Lord looking down that is, he who surveys with inflante compassion all the creatures. This interpretation is found in the text itself (Burnouf Introduction p 201 f.) but it is possible to explain the name in other ways (La Vallee Poinsin ERE II, p 201 f.) Avalokiteshvara here appears as a typical Bodhisattva but declines to enter into Buddhahood so long as all the creatures have not been emanicipated To bring salvation to all the creatures, to succour all the sorrowing, to save all from want, to exercise unbounded commiseration which does not recoil from sin, and does not stop short at the gates of hell, this is the one and the only obligation of the Avaloki-Words are placed in the mouth of Avalokiteshvara to the effect that it is better for a Bodhisattva to commit sins in the exercise of sympathy, to suffer in hell rather than to disappoint a cleature of the hopes centred by the latter in him (ERE, II, p 257 f) The opening chapter of the Karandavyuha portrays how he descends into the fireful Avici (hell) in order to set free the tormented from their No sooner does he enter it, than the scorching glow turns into agreeable coolness, in place of the cauldrons in which millions of the damned are boiling like vegetable, there appears a lovely Lotus Pond The seat of torture is transformed into a pleasance

E. B. Cowell, Journal of Philology, vi, 1876, p 222 ff, reprinted also in Ind. Ant., viii, 249 ff L. Scherman, the Vision Literature, p, 62 ff. Cowell compares the apocryphal gospel of Nicodemus and derives the Indian from the Christian legend.

From this hell Avalokiteshvara passes on to the abode of the Pretas and treats with food and His peregridiank these ghosts writhing with evernations lasting hunger and thirst. One of his wanderings takes him to Ceylon where he converts the cannibal female giant Rakshasi, from thence to Benares where he preaches the doctrine to the creatures who have been born as insects and worms, and thence to Magadha where he saves the inhabitants in a miraculous way from a terrible famine. In Ceylon he appears as the winged horse Balaha in order to carry away and save from perishing the shipwrecked persons enticed by the giant sorceress.

Jaiaka ha, (90° where the winged charger is Herrica) with the Roddin in a previous litth. In the Karardavyuha the merch of Fimbala carried off to Coylon is the Roddina Shakyamuni in an earl or existence.

Little as is the claim of books like the harandayyuha npon our attention, on the whole we are bound to concedathat hardly anywhere clie human helpicsmess and longing for emancipation have found a more vigorous expression than in these tracts and the idea of redemption a finer in strumentality than in the personation of Avalokiteshvara

The Buddhist a longing for spiritual liberation finds a more logical outlet in the Sukhoroli Sukhavativyuha rynho a detained description of the Land of Blus As the Saddharma the Land of Blice pundarika serves to glorify the Buddha Shakyamunl as the haraudayyuha is dedicated in the Bodhlestiva Avalokiteshvara so the Sukhavativyuha is sacred to the panegyric of the Buildha Amita hha. Among the jungmerable Buddhas there is one who his means of prayers or pranchang in a former life faithfully practising the virtues of a Bodhisattya for untold ages was horn again in the world of Sukhayatl in the Occident There he produces houndless light whence his name Amhabha and immedantable is the duration of his life, whence his other name Amitavus In this Buddha country ' the Laradise of Sukhavati there is no bell there is no existence as beasts. Pretos or Asuras This blessed land is filled with infinite fragrance. There grow trees of precious stones in many hundred thousand colours and equally marvellons loins flowers. There are no mountains there but the land is a plain like the palm of the hand Charming rivulets supply lovely sweet water and their splashing makes the most lovely music. The creatures that are born in Sukhavatl are provided with the most fascinating qualities of body and mind and enjoy all the delights which they have only to

There is no difference between men and gods wish for There is no such thing as day or night There is no darkness Amitabha is continuously praised and he who constantly thinks in reverence of him, he who bethinks himself of the growth of his good deeds, he who turns his thoughts to enlightenment, and he who devoutly prays to be born in that world, to him Amitabha appears in the hour of his death and the aspirant sees the light again in the Land of Bliss Nay, even those who think of Amitabha with a single thought are born there But the creatures in Sukhavati are not born They come into being seated on lotus flowers of woman when they have firmly believed in Amitabha or as adhering to the chalice of a lotus when their faith is not sufficiently firm Joyous and tranquil, perfectly wise and immaculate live the creatures in that world of benignity With that extravagance of language and exaggeration of figures which are come across in Mahayanasutras is also described the grandeur of Amitabha and his paradise in the Sukhavativyuha

Of this book we have two diverse recensions The longer one which might well be the original and the shorter one which appears to be an abbreviated edition of the former with an emended introduction. Both versions have been edited by Max Muller, Bunyin. Nanjio in the Anecdota Oxoniensia Aivan Series, Vol. I, part II, Oxford, 1883, and translated by Max Muller SBE vol. 49, part 2. A third book called the Amitayui dhanasutra is less occupied with the picture of the country of Sukhavati than with the exhortations to meditation or dhyana of Amitayus by means of which a man attains to the Blessed Land. It is translated from Chinese by J. Takakusu in SBE Vol. 49, part 2, p. 159 ff.

This Sutra is unfortunately not preserved to u in the origi nol Sanskrit, but only in a Chinese translation and is interest ing in that it contains the history of Aistashatru and Bim bisara I nown also in the Pali accounts (hern Der Bud dhismus I 213 ff Spence Hardy Mannal of Buildhism Lon don 1660 p 317 () A Sul havatievulia is reported to have been translated into Chinese between 148 and 170 and there are no less than twelve versions of it dating fr in diff rent centuries. In 402. Kumaranya termslated the 1 rt r version A translation of the Sukhavativvuha-Sutra is at a credited to Hiven Talang in 1000 AD (Nange Catal con New 2) 25, 27, 199, 209, 863). This testifies to the fav or in which the text was held in China. In Janua haves rathe three texts relating to Amitavus and Sukhavati form the fundaments of the doctrine of the two Buddhisti set flai hu and Shinshu. The latter has the largest number of adh r ents of any Buddhi t sect in Isnan. It is to be noted that the literary value of these texts by no means corresponds to their importance in religious history

D. hanfig, Twelte Japanese Bookh 1 Feets ID 104 Cm 122 C and Anocalota Oxoniceria, Vol. I p. xelli fi. 11 11sts, Amids Bookha, our Deluge, Texts for the understanding of Sukharat-Dollh (m., Le') (1 1910)

In the cult and in the art of the Buddhist the Bodhisattia Manjushri. Sattia Manjushri occupies a di tinguished Manjushri. In the Gandacyuka, Manjushri is glorified as the only one who can help the aspirant to perfect enlightenment. This work is only available in manuscript. It was translated into Chinese between 317 and 420 under the title of Avatamasakasutra or Buddhavatamasakasutra and is the cardinal text book of the Japanese Buddhist sect he gon

Baj. Mitra Nep Rudih, Lit. p. 90 ff | Berdatt Catalorus p. 28 According to Hodgeon a Essays p. 16 (also see p. 40) Arysranga was the author of this book | compare also Burnouf Introduction p. 111 It is Professor Takakusu who informs us that the Gandavyuha is identical with the Chinese Avafamsaka for he has made a comparison of the Sanskrit with the Chinese original

See Wessiljew, Der Buddhismus, p 171 ff, and B. Nanjio, Twelve Japanese Buddhist Sects, p 57 ff The Gandavyuhasutra No 971 in B Nanjio Catalogue (see No. 782) translated between 746-771 is altogether a different work,

The Sutra, which has many points of contact with the Sukhavativyiha but which has also many Karunapun- legends of the class of Avadanas, is the darika Sutra: Karunapundarika, the Lotus of Compassion It relates to the marvellous country of Padma where the Buddha Padmottaia worked and whose life was thirty world-periods. The Sutra was translated into Chinese in the sixth century.

Raj Mitra, p. 285 ff, Bendall Catalogue, p. 73 Sylvain Levi has dis covered and published a legend from the Karunapundarika in the Tokharia language (Memorial) volume to Vilhelm Thomsen, Leipzic, p. 155 ff.)

While these Mahayanasutras are devoted mainly to the cult of the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas Lankavatara whose wonderful qualities and mighty deeds are eulogised or legends in connection with whom are recounted, there is a series of Sutras in Buddhist Sanskrit which partake more of a philosophical or dogmatic character. Of this nature is the Lankavatara, or as it is also called Saddharmalankavatara. The book gives a report of the miraculous visit of the Buddha Shakyamini to Ravana, the King of Ceylon. Ravana pays his reverence to the Buddha and presses him for a reply to a number of his enquiries touching the religion. The answers given by the Buddha which represent the doctrine of the Yogacara.

school go to form the mam contents of the ten chapters of the Sutra It is, moreover interesting maxmuch as it explores the tenets of the Sankhyas, Vaisheshikas Pashupatas and other philosophical schools and religious denominations of Brahmanic origin Remarkable is a prophetic passage in chapter 10 where the Buddha 1975.—

'A hundred years after my Nirvana will live Vyasa, the composer of the Mahahharata. Then will arise the Panda vas, Kauravas, Nondas and Mauryas. The Nandas Maur yas, Guptas and Miccehas the most degraded of princes, will be the rulers. The domination of the barharians will be succeeded by an upheaval which in its turn will herald the Kaliyuga.'

The teaching of the Yogacara school is the same as the destrine of Asanga and the same precepts are found in the Mahayanashraddhotpada

The mention of the barbarians can only refer to the reign of the Hun princes, Toramana and Mibirakula, and consequently the hook must bave been composed in the beginning of the aixth century. But as egain a Chinese translation of the Lankavatara had already heen made in 433 the excerpt must belong to a subsequent recension or can only be an interpolation.

Burnouf Introduction, p. 455 ff. Bendall Cellingue, p. 50 ff.; S. Cil.

Mira Hep Boddh. Lift p. 118 f., where, however the statement about a Chinese translation made in 163-193 fs. incorrect. See Burnylu Hanjio Catalogua Nos. 173-177. Of the same species of literature is also Dassbhumish warn Mahayanasutra in which the Buddha holds an exhortation to the gods in Indras heaven on the ten stages, the "desirablum! through which an omity arrives at Buddh hood. This Butra was translated into Chinese in 400 Inj. Mira Nep Buddh, Lit p 81 ft. Bourts if legue p 4 ft.

nature is also the Samadhiraja, the Of a dogmatic It is a dialogue King of Meditations between Candi aprabha and the Buddha It Samadhiraja. is shown here how the Bodhisattva by means of the diverse meditations, especially the supreme one the sovereign meditation can achieve transcendent knowledge of the conditions which are necessary for the preparation of the mind for the loftiest stage of thought The conditions are veneration of the Buddhas, absolute renunciation of the world, gentleness and benevolence to all creatures, complete indifference with reference to one's own life and health, in the case of necessity, sacrifice for others, and finally the conviction of non-leality of the world or firm faith in the universal Void or Shunyata When meditating on ', the form of the Buddha the candidate must not think of any corporeal shape because the Buddha is composed of pure religion, he is not procreated, he is effect without cause, he is the cause of all things and without beginning, of bound-, less greatness and illimitable beneficence The same ideas recui repeatedly in between, there being legends of holy men who propounded the great Samadhr

Raj Mitra Nep Buddh Lit., 29-7-221. Bendall Catalogue, p 22 f

Based from the standpoint of negativism or Shunyatavada is likewise Suvaranaprabhasa or Suvaranapra- Golden Effulgence, the contents of which bhasa Sutia are partly philosophical partly legendary, and partly digress into the region of Tantra-Buddhism. The Buddha is here an eternal divine Being.
A Brahman asks for a relic of the Buddha, be it no bigger! than a mustard seed (chapter II) But he is instructed that it is easier to have hair grown on the back of a tortoise than to find such a relic. For the Buddha is not really born but his true corporeal frame is the Dharmakaya or Dharmadhatu that is an immeterial hody consisting only of religion.

According to Suzuki's Ashva-bosha s Discourse on the Awakening of the Faith, p 62 n Dharmakaya denotes the Absolute.

Nor did the Buddha cuter Nirvana his body being oter nal, A large portion of the Spira is occunied with the glorifleation of the Spire itself. In chapter VIII appears the roddess Sarasvati in chanter IX Mahadevi the consort of Shive to belaud the Spira. Among the legends which we find related in the buverneproblems we encounter that of the prince who kills himself to serve as food to a starying tigress and the father of the prince preserves his bones in a golden easket over which to creet a stupa. There is, however also a recital of magical terms or Dharanis and Toptra ritual in the book. On the whole we see a diction the most sluggish. among acctarian Pursues and one would wonder how the Golden Effulgence had acquired such immenso reputation among the Buddhists of Nepal Tibet and Mongoha if the people concorned were not of comparatively a low state of The Sutra was translated into Chinese in the sixth century Burnouf, Introduction, p. 471 ff., Ra) liltra Hep. Buddh, Lit. p. 241 ff. Bendall Catalogue, p. 13 f., M. Anenkl, ERE IV p. 839 According to La Vallee Fousin Bouddhirme, Etudes and Materiaux, p. 137 the Suvarna-pabhasa is nothing but a Mahatmap of Dharanis. A Ingment of the Suvarna-pathhese, which is also quoted in the Suvarna-pathhese.

Partly dogmatic and partly legendary in nature is the Rashtrapalasutra, also entitled RashtraRashtrapala palaparipriceka which was translated into Chineso between 589-618 The Sutra consits of two portions, the first of which is more of a dogmatic nature and contains the responses of the Buddha to Rashtiapala's questions on the qualities or Dharmas of a Bodhisattva The second part narrates the Jataka of the prince Punyarashmi whose story has some features in common with the legend of the Buddha. But even in the first portion the Buddha briefly narrates his deeds in previous births to elucidate the Bodhisattva Dharmas and in the course of his address makes mention of fifty Jatakas. At the end of these Jatakas there is an abrupt prophecy on the future decay of the religion which is the most important section of the Sutia. For the picture sketched here so vividly and with such precision could only be a reflection of actual facts and must be a satirical portrayal of the lax morals of the Buddhist monks, since we are told, for instance "Without self-reproach and without virtue, proud, puffed up, niitable will be my monks, intoxiPrevision of cated with spirituous liquor. While they degeneracy. grasp the banner of the Buddha they will only serve men of the world, and they will have to themselves, like householders, wives, sons and daughters. They will not eschew lust so that they may not be born as beasts, spirits and demizens of hell. They will address homilies to fathers of families but will remain themselves unbridled."

Rastrapalaparipruccha, the Sutra of the Mahayana, published by L. Finot Bib. Budd, II, St. Petersburg 1901, La Vallee Poussin "Le Museon" IV, 1903, p. 306 ff With the Pali Ratthapalasutra our Sutra has nothing in common except the name Rashtrapala in Pali Ratthapala.

There must have been an entire class of such Pariprucchas or questions among the Mahayanasutras like the Puranaparipruccha and so forth, Nanjlo Catalogue, p. xiii ff Finot, p. ix ff, 28 ff.

This vaticination of corrupt monasticism reminds us of similar one in the Pali Theragatha. And the Chinese translation of the Rastrapalaparipruecha made between 589 and 618 shows that the circumstances depicted here must have arisen already in the sixth century. But the Sutra cannot be much older than the Chinese translation as is evidenced by the barbarous language especially in the gathas, which is an intermingling of I rakrif and bad Sanskrit, the artificial meter and the untidy style.

The most important and the most reputed of all the philosophic Mahayanasutras are the Pramaparamitas antras of perfection of wisdom. They treat of six perfections (paramitas) of a Bodhisattyn, but particularly of the Praina or wisdom the supreme excellence This wisdom however consuls in the recognition of the Shunun vada or negativism which declares overything as word, denies Being as well as non Being and has for a roply to every question a No It is believed to have been at first a sutra of one hundred and twenty five thousand shlokas in which this wisdom was inculcated in the shape of dialognes in which the Buddha was the principal speaker Subsequently this sutra was abbreviated into a handred thousand, twenty five thousand, ten thousand, and lastly eight thousand shlokas. According to another tradition the satra with eight thousand shlokas was the original it being subsequently gradually expanded. As a matter of fact we are acquaint ed with Prainaparamitas of a hundred thousand of twenty five thousand, of eight thousand, of two thousand five hun dred and of seven hundred shlokas. In the Mahayana often as in the Hinayana there is mention of ten but more frequently of six paramitas var, generosity, performance of duty, gentleness intropldity, meditation and wisdom (Dharmasamgraha 17)

(The Prajnaparamitas are press works but in India it is customary to measure even texts in press by shlokas each unit consisting of thirty two syllables.) (The Tibetan Sher-phyin is a literal translation of the Shatasahasiika which has been quoted as Bhagavati in the Shikshasamuccaya It was translated into Chinese between 402 and 405 according to Ancsaki (Le Museon VII, 1903) This translation contains quotations from Pali texts (Bendall C pp 143-148 and JRAS 1898 p. 370)

The senseless customs of embodying constant repetitions which we find so annoying in the Pali suttas becomes in the voluminuous Piajnapaiamitas so limitless and excessive that it would be quite possible to strike out more than half of these collossal works like the Shatasahasiika for the same sentences and phrases recur times without number Thus, for instance, it is not only said in the introduction that out of the whole body of the Buddha rays of light break forth and an immeasurable effulgence is spicad over the entire world, but it is repeated of his teeth, bones, of each member and particle of his body that rays of light issue from them to the east, the west and so on, and in the ease of each cardinal point the entire description is repeated. It is not enough ior these writers to say that "everything is only name," but this everything is detailed to exhaustion in interminable series of sentences. It is concervable that men should entertain the philosophical view that the world is not a reality and that all is negation and that man is unable to express any verdiet on any question except in the shape of a negative, but that people should from this standpoint offer universal denial and write book after book and thousands of pages might appear impossible. But this impossibility is material-, used in the Pragnaparamitas This extravagance for the sake of extravagance is explained by the supposition that the monks scribbled so much because it was with them a religious ment to transcribe as much as possible of these sacred books and to write out of them to the same extent same principal reiteration manifests itself in Buddhistic art. Entire vast surfaces of rocks and caves are covered with the images of the Buddha. As regards the contents of these treatises the essential doctrine in the Hundred Thou send Prajnaparamitas is the same as in the Vajracchedika Prajnaparamita. The latter resembles considerable in form the Hinayana sutra. It consists of a few pages in which the doctrine of these texts is condensed. As in the veluminous Prajnaparamitae here also it takes the form of a dialogue between the Buddha and Subhuti. The Shunyata doctrine is not explored and no attempt is made to inculcate it but it is simply repeatedly stated. There is no pretence at argument, Starting from the ancient Buddhas degma of the non-Ego here not only the Ego but everything class is demed,—even the doctrine of the Buddha and the Buddha humself. This we read in the Vajracchedika (Ch. 13)

The Vajracchedika has been edited by Max Muller and translated by him in the SBE. For Stein Fragments in Khotan see JRAS 1903. It was translated into French by Harlez (JA 1891). The same scholar printed and translated the Manchin version (W/KM 1897). It was translated into Chinese about 401. In Japan the Vajracchedika and the Prajnaparamitahridaya are the chief texts of the Shingon sects. In the Prajnaparamitahridaya metaphysics degenerate into magical formulæ. Fragments of the Vajracchedika in a north Aryan translation and a Adhyardhashatika Prajnaparamita in a Sanskrit recension with sections in the north Aryan have been made knewn to my from Central Asia by Leumann.

There are no doubt as many non Buddhist readers who see in utterances like those of Ch. 12 profound some as those who see nothing but nonsense in it. As a matter of fact it need not be either one or the other but just that ' middle doctrine which proceeds in paradoxes in that it on one hand asserts nihilism in the strictest sense of the word and on the other so far recognises the phenomenal world as to admit the relative truth of things and the doctrine becomes comparatively intelligible only by the assumption of a dual nature of verity, a superior and an inferior one as has been clearly and significantly taught by Nagarjuna It may be noted that among those who are the least enthusiastic about this phase of Buddhism is Barth who declares (RHR 1882) that "la sagesse transcendante, qui sait, qu'il n'y a ni choses existantes ni non-existantes, ni de realite qui ne soit aussi une non-realite, saggesse qu'ont proclammée et proclamerone des infinites de myriades d'aihats et de bodhisatvas qui ont ete et n'ont pas ete quit seiont et ne seront pas, qui, grace a sa science de Buddha, a sa vue de Buddha, sant percus, aporcus, connus due Buddha, lequel luimeme, n'est ni existant ni nonexistant."

CHAPLER VIII

The adherents of the Hinayana proclain the Prajnapara mita in a hundred thousand alokas to be Nagarjuna. the latest Mahayanasutra and attribute its authorship to Nagariuna. The authority for this is Taranatha the Tibetan historian (p. 71) whose work has been translated from the Tibetan by Scholiner So far the tradition may be correct in that it is an apocry phal Sutra saming from the school of Nagariuna, for it consists like all Prajnaparamitas only of innumerable repetitions of the principles of the Madhyamika system founded by Nagariuna What appears in the dialogues of those Sutras as somewhat abstruse and confused is expressed systematically and with lucid clarity in the Madhyama kakarikas or Madhyamikasutraa of Nagarjuna This princi pal work of Nagarjung with the commentary by Chandra kirtı called Prasannapada was published hy L. da La Vallee Ponssin in the St. Patersburg Bibliotheca Buddhica in 1903 and the twenty fourth chapter of the commentary has been translated by the same Belgian scholar in the Mélanges Le Charles de Harles. The Madhyamakakarika is a systematic philosophical work of the class with which wa have been familiar in Brahmanio scientific literature. It is in a metrical form to help the memory. It is composed as Karikas to which the author himself usually appends his own scholia. Now the commentary composed by Nagarjuna himself to his work and the title of which we know to he Akutobhaya is no longer extant in Ranskrit but is known to us only in a Tibetan translation. This valuable scholia has been translated from the Tibetan by Max Walleser Both the old commentaries of Buddhapalita and Bhavavive ka are preserved only in the Tabetan Tanjur Candrakirti s Madhyamakayatara is also preserved nowhere except in the Tanjur It is a prolegomena not only to the Madhyamika system but to the Mahayana philosophy in general. This too has been made accessible to us by La Vallee Poussin in his French version from the Tibetan (Le Museon, viii, 1907, 249 ff, xi, 1910, 271 ff) The Sanskut commentary on the Madhyamikasitia, which we possess, is the one by Candiakirti who probably lived in the first half of the seventh century Candrakirti and Candragomi were contemporaries and rivals Candiagomi was a disciple of Sthiiamati who flourished at the close of the sixth century A contemporary of Sthiramati was Dhaimapala A disciple of the latter knew Candrakiiti, while Bhavaviveka, the contemporary of Dharmapala, has been quoted by Candrakurti (N Peri La vie de Vasubandhu, Extrait du BEFEO) According to S Ch Vidyabhushana (Journal of the Buddhist Text Society, v 1897) Candiakirti, however, was a contemporary of Sankará It is also from these philosophical Sutras that we first come to know its doctrine which, originating with the denial of the soul taught in the Theravada school, came to repudiate both Being and non-Being and is, therefore, designated the Middle Doctrine

١

In this treatise the natural objection is placed in the mouth of the opponents of Negativism Vindication of If all is "void" and if there is no begin-Middle doctrine. ming and no end, then there could possibly be no four "noble truths," no conduct of life on the principles of recognition of these verities, no fruit of good or bad deeds, no doctrine of the Buddha (Dharma), no monastic order and, finally, no Buddha himself Accordingly the entire system of the Buddha's religion should fall to the ground To this Nagarjuna replies

"The doctrine of the Buddha is based on two verities conventional truth, in which the profound sense is occult, and truth in the supreme sense. Who so does not know the difference between these two truths does not understand the deep contents of the Buddha's procepts. Only as hased on the truth of ordinary life can the supreme verity be in enlested and only with the help of the latter con Abrana be attained. We see indeed no other possibility of reducing to sense many a passage of the Prajuaporamitins which strikes us as meaningless or preposterous except on the basis of its accommodating itself in the listery of philosophy to the net unknown esamption of a two-fold truth. Volleo Poussing gives us a sound presentment of this Madbyomika doctrine in his. Buddhism. (pp. 189 ff. 290 ff. See olso Anesaki, ERE in p. 838.)

Besides Madhyomakaharikas mony other works are attributed to Nagariona whether rightly Other works or wrongly we are no longer able to decide attributed to Dharmasamgraha passes for his production It is a small dictionary of Bluddist techni-Nagariana cal terms and the original Sanskrit text has been preserved to us. It is edited by Kenjiu Kasaworn Max Muller and H Wenzel. It is to be noted that half of the termini of this Dharmasamgraha also occur in the Dhar masarirasutro which was discovered in the sands of Central Asia by Grunwedel and which has been published by Ston ner SBA, 1904 p 1282 ff) On the other hand the Subrillekha or the Friendly epistlo -a letter from Nagar juna to a king on the basic principles of the Buddhist reli gion in one hundred and twenty three verses-is known to us only in an English translation from the Tibetan version the original Sanskrit having perished (Wenzel in JPTS 1886 p 1 ff.) Unfortunotely we cannot determine who this king was to whom the epistle is oddressed although according to our Chinese sources, it was Satavohano while the Tibetans call him Udayana It is noteworthy that the missive contains nothing which might not also appear in the Pall canon, while its several verses coincide verbally with the Pali Dhammapada and similar texts. Many slokas are in harmony with well-known Brahmanic proverbs. The Chinese pilgrim I-Tsing highly extols this work of Nagarjuna and bears witness to its being widely read and learnt by heart in India in his days (Takakusu p. 158 ff.). The first Chinese translation of the epistle dates from 431 A.D. I-Tsing himself prepared a Chinese version of the epistle of Nagarjuna which he despatched from India to a friend in China. (Op. cit. p. 166.)

According to the biography of Nagarjina translated into Chinese in 405 by Kumarajiva, this Hindu master of Chinese was born in Nagarjuna's Southern India in a Biahman family. He 11fe studied the four Vedas and acquired all the He had, however, the reputation of being likewise a great wizard By means of his sorcery he could make himself invisible and intruded himself, followed by three companions into the loyal palace, where they offended the ladies of the harem They were discovered, the three colleagues of Nagarjuna were executed and he himself escaped by just previously having vowed to become a monk He redeemed the pledge, in minety days studied all the three Pitakas and mastered then meaning but was not satisfied with the same and commenced to search for other Sutras till finally he received the Mahayanasutia tiom a venerable hermit in the With the assistance of Nagaraja, the sovereign Himalayas Serpent, he also came by a commentary on the Sutia He energetically propagated Buddhism in Southern India His biographer would have us believe that he was at the head of the religious propaganda for over three hundred years (Wassiljew, p 232 ff) The Tibetans, however, are still more extravagant, and make him six hundred years old when he died Of these legends themselves much can be true;

Nagarjuna, just like the somewhat earlier Ashvaghosha. came of a Brahmm origin. Very probably Nagarjuna lived at the close of the second Christian century Our authorities are Rajatarangmi (/178) Kern (Manual of Buddhism 122 fL) and Jacobi (JAOS 31 1911 p 1 ff) His work betrays familiarity with Brahmanio knowledge. At any rate he must have as founder of a principal branch of the Maha yana Buddhism, enjoyed great respect so that centuries after him in his case was represented the phenomenon fami lier among literatures of the world. To him were storibed several works which were intended to secure high reputa tion. Throughout Northern India Nagariuma is also the Buddha without the characteristic marks, and his productions are quoted along with Sutres from the Buddha s own mouth ' (B Nanjio Twelve Japanese Buddhist Sects p 48 ff.) In the Chinese Tripitaka Nagarjuna is the reputed author of twenty four books. (S. Beal Ind Ant 16 1887, p 169 ff) We expect the translation of Nagarjuna s Catustata or four hymns from the collaboration of Vallec Poussin and Thomas Nevertheless Namariuna was as little as Ashvaghosha, the real founder of the Mahayana The Mahayana doctrine of the text menicating it must have an peared already in the first Christian century for we find translations of Mahayana manuals in Chinese in the second century Besides the Gandhara sculptural art, which is the peculiar art of the Mahayana Buddhum of India had its development in the period between the rise of Christianity and the four subsequent centuries. The most ancient Chinese translation of a Buddhist text is the 'Suira of the forty two Articles," which is reported to have been prepared in 67 A.D by Kamspa Matanga from Indian, that is Sanskrit originals (B Nanjio Catalogue, No 678) But we do not know whether these were Mahayana texts. The earliest Chinese translations of the Mahayana texts are those of the Sukhavativyuha, between 148 and 170 AD, of the Dasasa-hasrika Pragnaparamita, between 75 and 220 AD (B Nanjio Catalogue No 235 and No 5) Other Mahayana texts were rendered into Chinese between the third and the fifth century (Grunwedel Buddhist Art in India, pp 81, 150 ff, 167)

Along with the biographies of Ashvaghosha and Nagarjuna translated into Chinese by Kumara-Ai yadeva. give about 404 AD, we come across a life of Deva or Aryadeva who also is mentioned as a great master of the Mahayana "in antiquity" by I-tsing and Hiuen-tsang But his "biography" is entirely legendary and of his works all that is surviving in Sanskiit is a fragment of a dogmatic poem which has the uncommon interest of being a polemic directed against the Biahmanic nitual It inveighs, for instance, against the doctime which assigns the power of purifying sins by a bath in the Ganges But the verses do not contain anything specifically Mahayanistic (Haraprassad Shastii, JASB Vol 67, 1898, p 175 ff) Otherwise all that we know of Aiyadeva is from quotations in Sanskiit and from Tibetan and Chinese Buddhist literature Candrakirti cites Shataka-Catushataka and Shataka-Shastra of Aryadeva and also Aryadevapadiya ın hıs Madhyamakavı ittı (La Valee Poussin, pp 16, 173, 552 and 393, also La Vallee Poussin, Le Museon, p 236 ff, on the confusion of the name of Aiyadeva with Candrakiiti and the epithet of Nilanetia and Kanadeva as attached to Aryadeva, see N Perr, Apropos de la date de Vasubandhu, p 27 ff Extract from BEFEO, AI, 1911)

Asanga of Aryasanga was to the Yogacaia school of Mahayana Buddhism what Nagarjuna was to the Madhyamika sect. The Yogacaia branch teaches Vijnanavada, which is a doctrine that nothing exists outside our consciousness which consequently repudiates Shunuavada or the doctrine of the void equally with the reality of the phenomenal world But at the same time it admits in a certain sense the Being contained in thought and cansclausness. The subtle Bodhi can be attained only by the logacorn that is he who practices Yaga and that too anly gradually after the aspirant has campleted his career as a Bodhisattyn in all tha ten stages (databhum) The practice of York or mysticism which was already not quite fareign to Hinayana Buddhism was reducod hy Asanga ta a systematic canneation with the Mahayana Buddhism The principal text of this dectrine is the I opacarabhumusitra, af which only one part of the Bodhisat trabhumi is conserved in Sanskrit. The whole work was regarded by the Yogacaras as a revelation by Maitreya It is a scholastia philosophical book of the class of Abhidharma texts

(On the destrine of the Yogacara school see Vallee I cussin p 200 ff Outlines of Mahayana Buddhism London p 125 ff and Lovi in the Introduction to his Translation of Mahayana Sutralainhara On the Yogacara literature in Tibetan sources see Zerbatska: Le Museon VI 1905 p 144 ff The Bodhisattvabhuml tha ald text hook of the Yaga cara school in English by 8. Bendal and Vullee Poussin, Lo Museon VI 1905 p 38 VII 213)

As rovealed also by Mastreya or the future Buddha, is also regarded the Mahayana Sutralam-Kara; but the scholar Sylvain Levi who philosopher discovered the work fixes its anthurship than poet on Assaga. And indeed the cutre text consisting as it does of memorial verses or karikas and commentary or Tita is a production of Assaga. Without being an important poet, Asanga knew how to employ with ingenuity the Buddhast Sanskrit idnom and often to make use of artistic meter, sloks and Arya strophies. But he was decidedly more a philosopher than a poet. Even though in the last two chapters he glorifies the perfection of the Buddha and concludes with a hymn (verse v), he displays in his scholastic enumeration of all the excellencies of the Buddha, more erudition than inspired veneration. Only in the ninth chapter in which Asanga concentrates all his mental powers in a clear exposition of the concepts of Bodhi and Buddhahood, does he relieve with vividness and a lively imaginative diction the insipid monotony. Thus, for instance, Bodhi, by means of which he illuminates the world, is compared in a series of metaphors with the sim

Asanga, more properly Vasubandhu Asanga, is the eldest of three brothers who were born in Purusapura, modern Peshawar, in the ex-Asanga. tieme north of India, as the sons of a Brahman of the Kaushika family They probably lived in the fourth century and were all three adherents of the Sarvastıvada school Takakusu places Vasubandhu between 420 and 500 (JRAS, 1905, p. 1 ff.) Wogihara assigns Vasubandhu a date, between 390 and 470 and Asanga somewhere between 375 and 450 (op cit p 16) Sylvain Levi decides for the first half of the fifth century as regards the activity of Asanga But N Pen has made it probable that Vasubandhu was boin about 350 AD (Apropos de la date de Vasubandhu BEFEO XI, 1911, No 3-4) The youngest son Vasubandhu Vilincivatsa is not important in literature. All the more distinguished was the middle of the three brothers, Vasubandhu, one of the most remarkable figures in the history of the Buddhist Tetters I-tsing ieekons Asanga and Vasubandhu among the celebrated men of middle ages, that is, the period between the time of Ashvachosha. Nacariina and '

Aryadera on the one hand and his own times on the other (Takakusu p 1811) A blography of Vasabandhu in which that of his brother Asanga is also embodied was composed by the Indian monk Paramertha (419 :64) which was trans lated from Chinese by Takakney in the learned French journal Towng Pag (, 1901 pp 1 ff) It was published as an extract by Wassiljew in his most intere ting Buddhism which has been translated into French and German but still awaits an English translator (German translation o 23. ft) Still more of a legendary nature than the Chinese is the Tibetan biography incorporated with Taranatha . History of Buddhism (107 ff.) Paramartha upp ried fr in Magadha to Ching the worls of Asanca and Lasubandhu in the year With an astonishing erndition I a ubandlin combined 639 a great independence of thought Ilis mannum onus the Abhildharmakosha is unfortunately not pre-erved in the original Sanskrit We only know the Abhi tharmal isharija Lhya which is a commentary on the work by Yashomitra and the Chinese and Tibetan versions of the text. The old est Chinese translation is that by Paramartha made hetween 563 and 567 A second rendering prepared between 6.1 and 604 ariginated with the celebrated Illnen Tsing himself. The Abhidharmalasha was a work treating of ethics, psychology metanhysics composed in Sutras and Karikas after the fa shion of Brabmanic philosophical manuals. The book presupposes the Vibhashas or the texts of the school of the Val bhashikas The Vibliashas are reputed to have been compiled by Katyayaniputra and cast into a literary mould by Ashva ghoshe. Despite the fact that the Losha is a work of the Sarvastivada School which appertains to the Hinayana It is considered as an anthority by other sects. The treatise has heen used by the Chinese and Japanese Mahayanists as a text hook and it has given rise to a voluminous commentary literature

For other authorities, consult Raj Mitra, Nep Buddh Lit, p. 3 ff., Bendall Catalogue, p 25 ff., Burnouf Introduction, p 502 ff., Sylvain Levi EBE 1, p. 20 and La Vallee Poussan in ERE IV, p 129 ff

Standing entirely on the soil of the Hinayana is the Gathasamgraha of Vasubandhu with which we are acquainted in its Tibetan version. It is a collection of maxims with an intelligent commentary, excerpts from which have been cited by A Schiefner These 24 Gathas are apophthegms conceived wholly in the spirit of the Dhammapada The commentary shows us the philosopher Vasubandhu also as a humorous evangelist and the book is otherwise justly attributed to him Here is an illustration

"A jackal used to follow a hon because it yearned for the remnants of flesh devoured by him. Buddhist Once upon a time the hon was hungry, and humour having killed a large bear, called upon the jackal to carry it Now as the jackal was too feeble to bear the load and at the same time was afraid lest the hon in his anger should put it to death, could not make up its mind to agree to the demand But it knew that the hon was proud and said "In order to earry this burden two things are necessary, to groan and to bear the load I cannot do both at the same time You must take up one of the two " As the lion was proud and was not willing to, groan, he asked the jackal to groan and agreed to carry the load himself Accordingly the hon bore the builden and the jackal followed groaning after the lion Just in the same way I bear the buiden of the preaching of the doctrine, but you are only in the position of assenting and say "That is so"

Schiefner op' cit p 58, for Vasubandhu's Gathasamgraha, Mélanges Asiatiques, VII (Bulletin XXIV, St. Petersburg, 1878) p 559 ff As a philosopher Vasabandhu also wrote a discourse to combat the Samkhya philosophy It is Opponent of Samkhya philosophy combat the Kamkhya philosophy It is called the Paramartha Sopioti or Seventy Jerses of Supreme Verity The Sanskrit original has perished but it would appear to be refutation of the Somkhyacaptot of Ishvorakrishna 1 oramartho mentions a herebe named Vindhyavosho os the author of the Sainkhvo look against which Vasuhandhu a polemic was directed. It is remork oble however, that to the Chinese also Vasuhandhu is the remoted critic of Ishvorakrishna a worl.

(Takakusu Toung Lau 1961 p 1, ff REFEO Vol 1V 1961 p 1 ff JRVS 196, p 16 ff Vecording to Taka kusu Vindivavasha is identicol velth Ishvarakrishna)

It was not till late in life that Vasubandhu was converted to the Mahavana hy his brother. Now he repented, his hiography relotes his earlier depreciation of the Mahavana as much that he was prepared to cut off his tongue but his brother suggested to him that it would be a superior penance to employ henceforward his tangue with as conspicuous, success for the clucidation of the Mahayana principles as he had done to combat his determe previously. Vosubandhu acted up to the counsel and wrote after the death of Asanga a large number of commentaries on the Naditharmapundarika tha I rajnoparomita and other Muhavana. Sutras together with other learned works as to whose existence we know only from their renderings in Chinese and Tibeton. Pora martha praises the charm out the convincing power of his works and winds up with these words?

Accordingly all who study the Mahayano and the Hinayono in India use the productions of Vasubandhu as their text-books. There is nowhere a promulgator of the doctrine of Buddhism belonging to another school or in a heretical sect who is not seized with fear and perturbation as soon as he hears his name. He died in Ayodhya at the age of eighty. Although he led a secular life his true character was hard to understand "

(For other authorities, consult Raj Mitia Nep Buddh Lit, p 3 ff, Bendall Catalogue p 25 ff, Burnouf Introduction, p 502 ff, Sylvain Levi, ERE 1, p 20, and La Vallee Poussin in ERE, IV, p 129 ff)

A treatise on the doctrine of the Vijnanavadis in twenty memorial verses with a commentary called Vimshakakarika Prakarana is translated from the Tibetan by La Vallee Poussin (Museon, 1912, p. 53 ff.) Takakusu, Toung Pao, 1904, p. 27

Gandragomi ed high renown in the Buddhist literary world. He was a contemporary of Candrakirti whose doctrine he assailed and was alive at the time of I-tsing's visit to India in 673. According to Taranatha who has got a considerable deal of legendary nature to report about him, he composed innumerable hymns and learned works. Of the literary productions we own only a religious poem in the form of an epistle to his disciple, the Shishya Lekha Dharma Kavya. In this the Buddhist doctrine is propounded in the elegant style of Kavya

Minayeff, JRAS, 1899, p. 1133 ff, assigns him the close of the fourth and beginning of the fifth century B Liebich, WZKM 13, 1899, 308 ff places him between 465 and 544 But for Sylvain Levi's views, BEFEO, 1903, p 38 ff see above

The most conspicuous amongst the later apostles of Mahayana Buddhism, who also distinguishShantideva. ed himself as a poet Shantideva who lived probably in the seventh century If we credit Taranatha he was born in Saurashtra or modern Gujarat as the son of a king was impelled by the goddess. Tara herself to renounce the throne the Bodhisattva Man jushri himself in the guise of a Yogi initiating him into the sciences became a prime minister to the king Paneasimha and ended by taking to monastic life. Tarauatha ascribes to him the three works. Shikshasamuocaya Sutrasamuecaya and Bodhicaryevatara.

Taranath op cit. 162 ff., although we know of a Sutrammuccaya only by Nagarjuna, see Winternite WERM 1912, p 240 ff

The Shikshasamuccaya or the Compendium of Doctrine is a manual of Mahayana Buddhism which consists of 27 Karikas or memorial verses and a large commentary compiled by the author at the same time with the Karikas. We purposely say that the commentary by Shautideva is compiled because it is composed almost entirely of quotations and extracts from the sacred texts which he has grouped together round his Karikas and arranged in chapters.

The work accordingly displays an extraordinary erudition and vast reading but little originality. However, it is most perfectly adapted to be an introduction especially to the technical study of the Mahayana on account of the numerous and often large citations from texts, which have perished, of great value. This is more especially so hecause Shentideva proves himself in such cases as we can check, very exact and reliable in his quotations.

The basic thought of the work and in fact the core of Core of the Mahayana ethics is given expression doubline, to in the first two Karikas They are—

When to myself just as well as to others fear and pain are duagreeable then what difference is there between my self and others that I should preserve this self and not others He who would make an end of soirow, would attain to the faither end of joy, must foilify the roots of faith and set his heart determined on enlightenment "

The Shiksasamuccaya has been edited by the English scholar C Bendall in the Bibliotheca Buddhica Series of St. Petersburg with a ducid masterly introduction and a conspectus of the contents. The edition is based on a unique manuscript but the editor has brought to his task his rare knowledge of the Tibetan into which the original Sanskrit was translated, between 816 and 838, the Sanskrit being written most probably in the middle of the seventh century sutias Shantideva proves the salutariness Importance of of Bodhicitam, or the heart set upon the book. enlightenment, the determination to enter upon the path of a Bodhisattva with a view thereafter to become a Buddha. But he who has made this high resolve must exercise self-denial and practise self-sacrifice for the sake of others to the uttermost limit of possibility. He must be prepared to give up for the sake of others not only his worldly possession but his personal salvation hereafter. He must not shrink from appropriating to himself the sins and sorrows of other creatures in hell. The Bodhisattva must say

"I take upon myself the sorrows of all beings I have resolved to undertake them, I bear them, I do not turn away from them, I do not fly from them, I do not tremble, I do not quake, I fear not, I re-trace not my steps backwards, I do not despan And why so? It is imperative that I assume the burden of all heings. I have no inclination for pleasures for I have made a vow to save all creatures. Liberate I must all creatures from the primaval forest of birth from the primaval forest of sickness, from the forest of heresy from the forest of sickness, from the forest of heresy from the forest of all good deeds, from the primaval forest born of ignorance I have not thought merely of my own emancipation for I must save all creatures by means of the ferry of the resolve for omnisclence from the flood of Samsara. I have made up my mind to abide for interminable myriads of æous on the spots of torture. And why so? Because it is better that I alone should suffer than that all these creatures should sink into the state of formont. I deliver myself up as a pledge

The above is an extract from the lagradhvagasutra (La Vallee Poussin Bouddhame p 322 f. Other virtues 337 f.) Next after compassion rank all other perfections (Paramitas) necessary to the pure conduct of a Bodhisattra—meditation standing at the head of the list. It leads to supreme sagacity which is an insight into the Vod or Sunyata to the under standing of the Nil and the faith which has its expression in the adoration of the Buddha in the building of stypes and the like. And yet all this notwithstanding his mind must ever be directed to the salisation of other creatures. May I bring all creatures into the conditions of Nirvana!

from the Ratnameghanutra (op cit 348)

Bendall gives a catalogue of the numerous texts which are strung together in Shikkasamuccaya Quotations especially thoso which are represented by from previous a largo number of citations or by copious works extracts. Thus the Akashagarbhasutra is drawn upon to dilate upon various kinds of sin including the five criminal transgressions of a king the eight offences of a Adikarmika-Bodhisattva and so on (p 59 ff). On sins and penances two passages, a short one and a longer are reproduced from the Upaliparipriccha (pp 147 f, 168 ff) Tolerably numerous are the extracts from the Ugraparipriccha or Ugradataparipriccha, for instance, on the obligations of married life (p 78) and on the life of the ascetic in the forest. The latter subject is also treated of in an extract (p 193 ff) from the Candrapradipasutra as the Samadhiraja is here called and which is frequently laid under contribution Of frequent occurrence is the Gandayyuha on the noble friend (p 34), and on the virtues of his who is resolved upon Bodhi (p 101 ff) From the Vimalakirtinirdesha, which is several times depended upon, we get at a large piece on the virtues of a Bodhisattva (p 324 ff) Shantideva quotes as an independent text the Avalokanasutra which is embedded in the Mahavastu long passage from the Ratnolkadharani on the merits of a Bodhisattva furnishes us a "Dharani" which is no mere incantation and which can hardly be differentiated from a This citation is also interesting as indicating the Sutra avocations and names of the ascetic orders (p. 331 ff.). The more important of the other works quoted in the Shiksasamuccaya by Shantideva are the Tathagatagnhyasutra, Dasabhumikasutra, Dhaimasamgitisutra, several recensions of the Prajnaparamita, Karunapundarika, Ratnakutasutra, Ratnamegha, Lankavatara, Lalitavistara, Salistambasutra, Saddharmapundarika, Suvarnaprabhasa, etc

The Ratnakutasutra is said to have been translated into Chinese before 170 A D As to its contents as given in the Chinese rendering see Wassiljew's Buddhismus, p. 167 ff

Although the Sikasamuceayo is the production of n scholar of little originality and the Bodhi Moral ideal converges is the creation of an eminent

Moral ideal. caryavatara is the creation of an eminent poet there is no question but that we owe both to the same author. Apart from external grounds the two hooks so fundamentally different in their character take the same standpoint as regards the doctrine. In both the texts the moral ideal is the Bodhisattva who has resolved to attain to enlightenment who strives to obtain his object in the first place by means of inexhaustihle compassion for all creatures and secondly by means of oderation of the Buddha and who perceives supreme wisdom in the recognition of 'Voulty or Shunyeta

The text of the Bedditerrarets was cited by the Bussian scholar LP Minaged in the Zepithi and it has also been reprinted in the Jo z all of the Bedditt Text Society La Vallee Poursin published for the Bedditcheca Indica Prajealaramatic commentary on the Fediblerryavatara and also a translation of it.

Bome of the passages occurring in the Shile-houseraja have been taken aver by Shantidera in his Bodhicaryaratam, ep., Khile-samuccaya, p. 185. St. Bodhicaryaratam, vi. 190 St. Both in the Rodhicaryaratam (* 105) Shantidera recognises the necessity of a study of the Shile-seemoccaya.

Rath (RHF 13 1900, p. 65) characterises Shikessemuccaya as "La seindestiquo valutudo et delayeo unque ad nausam whilst he (RHI. 1803 p. 130 f.) greatif spiprodates the Robbergavalara as a counterfoil to the "Imitatio Christi" of Thomas & Kenyis The Robbicaryavalara teoches by no means how to imitate the Rudha but how to income Budha Compare Powder HHR, 1908 vol. 41, 211 ff

The Shikestamuccaya expands itself in learned gar rulity into a flood of quotations. The Books Booksarapuvatora which means admission contrasted, to the Bodhi life or the conduct of life leading to enlightenment, not scitom rises to the loftiest strains of religious poetry Shantideva himself disclaims any literary object for his production. He observes that he composed it "for his own satisfaction" or with the view that it may be of use to any one so inclined. But he gives expression to his religious sentiments with such warmth and inspiration that he becomes a poet almost in spite of himself

The work begins with the glorification of the Bodhicitta, meditations on enlightenment and the resolve to become a Buddha for the sake of the salvation of all creatures. Thus the poet says (1-8)

"When you overcome the many hundreds of birth sorlows, when you free all beings from their misery, when you enjoy many hundreds of pleasures, then do not, ever on any account, relax your thought of the Bodhi"

The poet pours out in inspired words his sentiments, after having thus directed his attention to enlightenment. He voices his inner joy at the good deeds of all creatures regarding their emancipation. He prays to all the Buddhas of all the quarters of the world that they may kindle the lamp of religion for all the ignorant. He implores all the Bodhisattvas to delay their own Nivana. He supplicates for the liberation of all creatures and finally offers himself up to all the creatures.

"By viitue of the ment which I have acquired through good deeds, may I bring mitigation to the sollows of all creatures? May I be medicine to the sick," May I be their physician and their nuise so long as their malady endures May I be a protection unto those that need it, a guide to such as have lost their path in the desert and a ship and a ford and a bridge to those who seek the farther shore. And may I be a lamp unto those that need light, a bed of repose to those that want rest, a servitor to all the creatures requiring service?" (III, 6, 7, 17; 18)

The obligations that the Heddisattya has upon himself (chapters is to viii) include the pledge to the aspirant a strike after Itselfu. He is respired the for obligations the used of all beings. He must exert himself for all perfect in a (deramitae)

Before all he inn t be prepared for elf acrifice. He must likewise observe all the regulations of the religion and all the precepts of good conduct as prescribed in the holy scriptures which he mit accordingly study with energy. And here certain texts are particularly recommended to the asymmit (V-103 ff.) The worst of our enemies are anger hatred and passion. We have to fight them. It is they who do use evil not our foes. The latter we must love like all other creatures. For when we love the erealness we rejore, the Buddhas, in injuding them we injur the Buddhas. When some one does me an evil turn that is only the fruit of some previous act or karina. Why should I be wrath with bin I. We should not bate even these who destroy the images of the Buddba the stupes may even the good religion itself.

To the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas who have so often ruined their bodies for the sake of other Bell and chers the inferno to them he is beneficial who is kind to other creatures. Therefore must ono show only kindness even to those who have done him an evil turn (see VI 43; 68 120 121 126). The Bodhisattia from the first diligently atrives to avoid any difference between his bgo and others and lo identify himself wholly and entirely with others. This is a function which the Bodhisattia bas particularly to practice

'I must destroy the sorrow of the stranger because it pains like one s own grief 1 must therefore do good to others because they are beings like myself.' Just as a man loves his hands and feet because they are his members, so also all living beings have the right of affection masmuch as they are all members of the same would of animate creation. It is only mere usage which makes us look upon this our body, which in fact does not exist, as our Ego Exactly similarly by habit we can bring ourselves to see our Ego in others (VIII 90 ff)

With admirable eloquence, which can only spring from reverential conviction, Shantideva manages

Psychic to advance almost as an obvious proposition that to the pious disciple of the Bodhi there is complete "equality between others and one's self," technically called paratmasamata and finally reduces it to "transformation of the neighbour into one-self," known as paratmapar wertana (La Vallee Poussin, ERE 11, 749, 752 f)

Thee ninth chapter is of a less philosophically ambitious nature and its contents are pure learning Philosophical In it the philosophical doctrine of the void doubt. or nihilism is developed according to the Madhyamika system This chapter has been edited with the commentary by La Vallee Poussin in his Bouddhisme. However irreconcilable the negativism of this system may appear to us with the renunciation and selfsacrifice with reference to other creatures taught in the first chapters, nevertheless with Shantidevi also the familiar doctrine of the difference between the two varieties of Truth is the means by which to bridge the apparent contradiction In the end everything in the world is vacuity and nullity But it is only the delusion as regards the Ego, the Atmamoha, which is permicious The delusion as regards duties, Karyamoha, is beneficent (La Vallee Poussin Bouddhisme, p 109 Still it is sufficiently strange that after all the teaching of active compassion the poet comes to the conclusion: (1x, 152 f.)

'Since all being is so vacuous and null, what can, what shall be acquired! Who can be honoured, who can be reproached! How can there be joy and sorrow, the level and the hateful, avarice and non-avarice! Wherever you search for them you find them not."

It seems to be the curse of Indian mentality that when over it soars too high it lands itself in Reaction. absurdity Thus the legends of sacrifice often turn into ludicrous tales and so does the whole fabric of the philosophy of Maliayana end in-Nothing On the other hand, with some justification we can look upon as a later accretion the tenth chapter which with its invocations to Vajrapani and Manjishri and its panegyris of ac's show a spirit totally counter to that of the other chapters. Already Taranatha reports that there was some suspicion regarding the genuineess of this chapter (La Vallee Poussin, Bodhicaryavatara tr. p. 143 £.)

CHAPTER IX.

We have already pointed out the great similarity between Mahayanasutras and Puranas And Stotras, just as we know that numerous Mahatmyas and Stotias are joined on to the Puranic literature so we find many analogous texts in the literature of the Mahayana The

Buddhist Svayambhu-purana, the Mahatmya of Nepal, and like productions are well known Svayambhu, or the Adibuddha, or the primeval Buddha, is here the Buddha turned into God in a monotheistic sense, and the Purana recounts entirely in the style of the Vaishnavite and Shaivaite Mahatmyas, legends of the origin of the country of Nepal, the shrine of Svayambhu and numerous places of pilgrimage or tin thas capable of performing cures and minacles and protected by snake deities or Nagas

See also R. Mitra Napalese Buddhist Literature, p. 248 ff, Hodgson, p 115, ff., Sylvain Levi, Le Nepaul 1905, 1, p. 208 ff.

Besides, the Buddhist stotras or hymns are in no way differentiated from those which are devot-Hymns: ed to the veneration of Vishnu or Shiva. Buddhist and Such stray stotias have found admittance into older texts like the Mahavastu and Hındu. others_ But we have a complete collection of such hymns, some of which are in the Kavya style and in metrical form An example is the Kalyanapancavimshatika the twenty-five-blessing hymn in twenty-five Sargdhara verses, by a poet called Amritananda, and the Loheshvarashataka, a hymn to the Lord of the world in a hundred verses by another poet called Vajiadatta A selection of fortynine litanies relating to Shakyamiini and other Buddhas and Bodhisattvas is the Suprabhatastava A hymn of the kind which from of old has been so common in India consisting of a succession of names or honorific epithets to the god is the Paramarthanamasamartr.

An untoki number of Nepalere deities are invoked for the sake of their blessings. See H. H. Wilson, Works H. p. 11 ff

Raj Mitra, Nep- Budh. Lit pp $2, 112, 289 175

Stoims which are still only in manuscripts are Sement bled of nidkems Il ignikatelestuti, Septebuddharteles and so forth.

Catelogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts in the Ecclician Library \cdot\ cl. 11 by M Winternitz and A, B, Keith, Oxford 1905, p. 255 ff The Septemedia steirs has been translated by Wilson, Works Vol. 11 p. 5 ff.

A large number of stotres are sacred to the Buddhist goddess Tara, the saviour, the female Tara and her counterpart of Avalokiteshvara A pane evric composed entirely in Kayya style by poet devotees. the Kashmirian poet Sarvajnamitra on Tara is the Srandharastotra otherwise called the Arvataras randharastotra, which is in thirty-seven strophes, Sraghad dharn or the bearer of garland is at once an epithet of Tara and the name of a meter in which the poem is composed. The poet lived in the first half of the eighth century According to the legend he was a personage distinguished for his liberality and according to Taranatha a son in law of the king of Kashmir After ho had given away in charity all his tree sures he is reported finally to have hed recourse to the life of an itinerant monk. Once he happened to encounter a Brah man on the way who appealed to him in his poverty and besought him for money for the marriage of his daughter In order to furnish money to the man Sarvajnamitra sold himself to a king who had just instituted a great himan sacrifice for which he was in uced of a hundred men. But when the poet heard the laments of his brothers in sorrow with whom he was about to he sacrificed he sung his hymn to Tara and the goddess descended and rescued the hundred victums condemned to death. Whilst the Sragdharastotra has poetic value the Armsteranamashatettarashatakastetra or the culogy in one hundred and eight names of the noble

Tala is only a litary of names and epithets of the goddess. The Ekavimshatistotra, the song of praise in thirty-one or twenty-one strophes is but a loose string of invocations to the goddess Tara

According to L. A. Waddell, JRAS, p. 63 ft, the cult of Tara was ntroduced about 600 A, D.

History of Buddhism, p. 168 ff.

These three stotias have been edited and translated by O de Blonay, Materiaux pour servir a l'histone de la deesse Buddhique Taia (Bibl de l'ecole des hautes etudes, fasc 107) The Siagdhaiastotra with a commentary and two Tibetan versions have also been edited by Satis Chandra Vidyabhusana. In the introduction the editor enumerates no less than minety-six texts relating to Tara. Of these only sixty-two are preserved in Tibetan translation. A great adorer of this goddess Tara was also Candragomi whom we mentioned above and to whom a Tarasadhanashataka has been attributed (Blonay, p. 17 f.)

A great and essential element of the Mahayanistic constituted by Dharanis or literature is Dharanis or magical formulæ The necessity Necromantic formulæ for exorcisms, and chaims for formulae. blessing and witchcraft which was taken into account in the earliest ages in the Vedic Mantias, especially those of the Atharvaveda, was too rigorously working in the Indian popular mind for Buddhisin to be altogether devoid of it. We already know how the Buddhists of Ceylon employ some of their most charming suttas as Parittas or Pirits. In a similar fashion the Mahayanistic Buddhists in India transform to some extent the sacred texts themselves into necromantic charms these we have to add innumerable invocations to the numerand—last bul not least—the favorrate invalerations words and syllables already occurring in the sacrificial invaleries of the Yajurvedo. An instance of a Sutra composed for magical objective is the Veghainfra. It commences as do other Mahayanasutras with the words:

So have I heard once upon a time the Master was dwelling in the palace of the snake princes Nanda and Upanda. It proceeds to receint how the supent deities made wership to the IInddha and the Redhisattivas upon which one of the serpentine kings thus interregated the Franked One

How Lord may all the serrows of all the snakes be assuaged and how may the snakes so rejuce and he happy that they may shower down rain over India at the proper time and thereby help the growth of gross seruls vegetation and frees cause to apront all seeds and caus, all sap to well up in trees, thus blessing the people in India with prespective 1 Rejoleting over the enquiry the Buddha replies—

'By means of a religious exercise Dharma oh hing of Snakes all the sorrows of all the snakes may be instantly assuaged and they may be blessed with prosperity 'Which religious exercise is thist'. It is Benevolence Maitr. The gods and men oh I rince of Strpenis who live It sneh benevolence will not be burnt by fire wounded by sword drowned in water killed by poison overpowered by a hostile army. They sleep in peace; they wake in tranquillity; protected they are by their own virtue. Therefore oh Prince of Serpenis thou must be actuated with benevolence as regards thy body with benevolence as regards thy speech with benevolence with regard to the thought But further oh Prince of Snakes thou must put into practice the Dharant called Sarrasukhamdada the Giver of all happiness. This assuages all the pain of all the serpents.

lends all sanity, brings down upon this India rain showers at the right season and helps the growth of all grass, scrubs, vegetables and trees, causes all seeds to sprout and all sap to well up " "And how does this Dharani run?"

And here follow the Dharanis proper They consist of numerous invocations to female deities like the Preserver, the Conserver and others to Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, with interlarded apostrophes like "Clear away the wicked, parify the way," and adjurations to snakes like "Come ye, great snakes, rain it down over India", and finally isolated and unintelligible syllables such as "Sara sire sire suru suru naganam java java jivi jivi juvu juvu, etc "At the end comes again a description of the wizards' rites which are performed with these Dharanis, and the assurance that in times of a draught there is no better means of calling down a shower of rain than the use of these Sutras.

A much simpler form of an adjuration to snakes, which however, is supposed to act as an antidote to snake poison is to be found in the Vinayapitaka, Cullavagga V, 6, where the snakes are tranquillized by the Buddhistic benevolence called Metta in Pali and Maitri in Sanskrit (See also Jataka 293 and Digha Nikaya, 32) A Sutra similar to the Meghasutra is the Dishasvastikasutia which is preserved in a fragment discovered at Turfan in Chinese Turkistan in the Uigurian language, (Tishastvustik by W. Radloff and Baron A von Steail-Holstein Bibl Buddhica, XII, St. Petersburg, 1910)

The Dharanis often appear as parts of a Sutra in which the circumstances are reported under which they were revealed But there are also numerous Dharanis which are preserved in individual manuscripts, and, on the other hand, entire large collections of Dharanis. In these we find formulm of exercisms against the infinence of evil spirits, polson, snakes and demons abarms for bealing the sick and for longevity; magical utterances which bring success in war and others which bring it about that a man is reborn in the paraduse of Sukhavati, that a man comes to no avil birth, that a man is freed from sing. There are also Dbaranis by means of which one can charm a Bodhisattya or protect one self from infidelity Nat only can wind and water be in fluenced by Dharanis but they can affect, according to wish the birth of a son or daughter. An nuusual favourito in -Nepal is the Pancaralsha ar the Five fold Protection which is a collection of five (Dharanis: (1) Mahapratisara a protection against sin malady and other evils (2) Mahasahas rapramardini, against the avil spirits: (3) Mehamayuri against snake poison; (4) Mahashitavati against bostile planets, wild animals and venomous insects and (5) Maba rakaha, against diseases. Such Dharanis as serve against all manner of evil powers are frequently employed also as amulets.

Dharani literary means "a means to bold fast" especially a spirit or a 150-cd power. It does not signify "a formula powering great efficacy" a finterpreted by Bornouf and Wilson. Burnouf deals in detail with Dharants; Introduction, pp. 483, 483 ff; Wassilyev Der Buddhismus, p. 163 ff, 183 ff, 317; La Vallee Poussin Bouddhisme, Kindes et Materiaux, p. 190 ff; C Bendail Jikas 1850, p. 236 ff. A Whomeghasutra was translated into Chinese between 297 and 439 and other trans! *!Dos were made between 597 and 639 and other trans! *!Dos were made between 639 and 636 and 746-771 B. Nanjio Catalogue Nos, 186-188 314 970.

For instances of Dharanimantra, Raj Mitra Nep Buddh Lat., p 80 f., and Dharani Collections, pp 93 f 174 176 207 f., 283, 291 f Numerous MSS are also registered in Bendall a Catalogue La Vallee Pomain conjectures (JRAS, 1895 p 438 ft.) that the Dharani called Vidyadharapitaka which is quoted in the Adikarmapitadipa is the same as the Dharanipitaka A like Dharanipitaka is said to have been included in the canon of the Mahasanghikas according to Hiuen-Tsiang (Kern Manual, p 4).

(Raj Mitra Nep Buddha, Lit, pp 164 ff, 173 f Winternitz and Keith, Catalogue of Sanskrit Manuscripts in the Bodleian Library, Vol II, p 257 ff).

In the Nepalese law courts the Buddhist people are sworn on the Pancaraksha (Hodgson Essays, p 18).

Many Dharanis are only a kind of philosophical Sutras, the doctrines of which they are intended to present in a nutshell, but in the process Sanskrit Dharanis in it becomes less a question of the substance Japan. of the doctrine than words which are mysterious and unintelligible Of this variety are the two Praynaparamitahidayasutras, the texts of which are enshrined in the palm leaves in the ancient closster of Horiuzi in Japan since 609 AD These Sutras inculcate the hridaya or the heart of the Prajnaparamita which is a mantra to assuage all pains which embodies the perfection of all wisdom and which runs thus. "Oh Lord, thou that hast gone, gone, gone to the further shore, gone entirely to the further shore hail!" This is by the way nothing but an erroneous etymology of the term Paramita Even this apostrophe which may be said in a certain measure to represent the essence of the negative doctrine of Prajnaparamitasutras stands on no more elevated spiritual level than the Ushnishavijayadharani which is likewise bequeathed to us by the palm leaves of Horiuzi and consists merely in a series of unintelligible invocations

The ancient palm leaves containing the Prajnaparamitahridayasutra and the Ushnishavijayadharani, edited by Max Muller and B. Nanjio (Anecdota Oxoniensia, Aryan Series, Vol. I, part III), Oxford, 1884, SBE, Vol. 49, part II, p. 145 ff

The Ganapatihridayadharani (Raj. Mitra Nep. Budh Lit., p. 89 f.) is addressed to the Shaivite god Ganapati, although it is "revealed by the Buddha,"

These Dharanis have found wide and deep admission into the ancient Mayahanasutras. We find Antiquity of them in chapters 21 and 26 of the Soddhor monundarika which are later interpola Dharanis tions and in the last two sections of the Lankavatora one in the oldest Chinese rendering made in 443 A.D. Accordingly we cannot consider the Dharanis to be altogether younger products. We meet with them in the Chinese translations dating from the fourth century. It may be conjectured however that originally they were unintel ligible Sutras which dispensed with the Buddhistic dectrine just as do the Parities of the Pall interature. But gradually the unintelligible mysterious syliables neguired prime im portance and became the core the big which lay concealed in the magical potency of the formula. And finally under the influence of Shaivite Tantras they became nowerful thanmaturers and the essential elements in Buddhistic Tantras which originally they were not.

The Tantras, however are n branch of Baddhistic literatine which is worth consideration as a testimony to the complete mental decadence in Baddhism. They treat partly of rites, Kriyatantra and ordinances Caryatantra and partly of the secret doctrine. Yogatantra intended for the Yogi The best of these works belong to the former class in which the ancient Brahmanie ritual is revived. Of this category is the Adikarmapradipa a hook which describes in the style of the Brahmanie manuals of ritual (Grihyasutras Karma pradipas) the ceremonies and religious functions, which have to be performed by the Adikarmaka Bodhisattva that is, the adherent of the Mahnyana, an aspirant after spiritual illumination.

The Adikarmapradipa is made up of the Sutra text technically known as the mulasutra with a The Adikarma- nunning commentary incorporating prespradipa. criptions regarding the initiatory ceremony for the disciple who may be a layman or a monk, sprinkling with water, ablutions and prayers, and further rules on gargling the mouth, brushing the teeth, morning and evening prayers, offering of water to the souls of the departed (Pretas), the giving of charity dinners, worshipping of the Buddha and other sacred creatures, the reading of the Prajňaparamita, meditations and the rest, which are to be practised by the candidate or the neophite as contradistinguished from the full Yogi

To the Kriyatantia texts also belongs the Ashtamivratavidhana which contains the ritual to be Varieties of observed on the eighth day of each fortTantras; Yogi's night The rite entails the drawing of mystraining. tic diagrams and movements of the hand, oblations and prayers with mysterious syllables which are addressed not only to the Buddha and the Bodhisattva, but also to the Shaivite deities

Wilson, Works II, p. 31 ff.

But a majority of the Tantras belong to the second category, that of the Yogatantra These treatises are derived indeed from the mysticism of the Madhyamika and Yogacara schools What the Yogi endeavours to arrive at is the supreme knowledge of the Nullity or Shunyata But it is worthy of attention that he exerts himself to attain this object not only by means of ascetcism and meditation but also with the help of necromantic exercises and adjurations, hypnotism and physical excitements. To the latter contribute the use of meat and intoxicants as well as sexual excesses Accordingly in these Tantras we encounter an agglomeration of mistineism witcheraft and erotics with revolting orgies. They comprise the practice of the five M s, mansa or flesh; matiga or fish madya or spiritous liquors mudra or mysterious movements and finally and primarily maithuna or sexual intercourse. Of real Buddhism in these texts there is left next to nothing. On the other hand they are most intimately allied to the Shaivito Tantras from which they are differentiated only by the external frame and by the verhal statement that they are enumeiated by the Buddha. The prominence assigned to female goddesses a loginis Dakunis and others is characteristic. It were idle to seek to meet with sense or rationality in these books. Their suthers were in all probability wizards who pursued the study practically and for the most part in search of impure objects.

Nevertheless many of these books enjoy great reputation. For instance, the Tathanataguhuaka or Degrading Guhyasamaja belengs to the nine Dharmas instructions. of the Nepaleze Buddhists. The book indeed begins with instructions on the various classes of meditation but presently deviates into exposi tion of all manner of secret floures and formula which are necessary for the latric of the Buddha and it is not satisfied with the hocus-poeus of the magical words and rites but enjoins as a means to the most elevated perfection the eating of elephant, horse and dog flesh and daily intercourse with young Chandela maidens. The Mahakalatantra is next the model of e colloguy between Shakyamuni and e goddess and it is elaimed to have been 'announced by the Buddhi.' It however contains instruction on the mystical significance of the letters of the alphabet, composing the name Mahakala or Shiva, on the means of discovering hidden treasures, acquiring kingship, getting a desired woman and even Mantras and magical rates to deprive men of reason and to subjugate or slay them The Samvarodayatantra is again, despite its form of a conversation between the Buddha and Vajrapani, more of a Shaivite than a Buddhistic text. In it the Linga cult and the worship of the Shaivite gods is expressly recommended. In the Kalacakra which is said to have been revealed by the Adibuddha we have already the mention of Mecca of Islam. In the Manjushrimulatantra Shakyamiini proclaims inter alia that four hundred years after him Nagarjina will appear (Raj Mitra Nep Buddha Lit, p 261 ff, Burnouf Introduction, p 480, Raj Mitia Nep Buddh Lit, p 172 f., Burnouf Introduction, p 479 f)

There is no 100m for doubt that all these books were written long after the times of Nagarjuna and the Mahayanasutias and the possibi-Supreme Yogiship. Lity is precluded that Nagarjuna, the founder of the Madhyamika school, could have composed also the Tantras Nevertheless he is the reputed author of five of the six sections of the Pancakrama At all events this book deals more with Yoga than with Tantile usages properly so called As its title signifies the Pancakrama is an exposition of the "five steps," the last of which is the final position of the supreme Yogi. The preliminary steps consist in the purification of the body, speech and mind so' that they acquire the "diamond" nature of the body, the speech and the mind of the Buddha. medium through which the five stages are reached comprises magical circles, magical formulæ, mysterious syllables and the worship of Mahayanistic and Tantiic goddesses. In this manner the Yogi acquires the loftiest step where all else ceases and there is absolutely no duality at all Edited with an introduction by La Vallee Poussin Etudes et Texte, Tantriques (Result de Travaux publies par la faculate de philosophie et letters, Univers te de Grand, fasc 16), Grand et Louvain, 1896. Burnouf Introductions p 497 ff. Vajra "The Diamond" plays a chief part in the mystics of the Tantras

Of such a Yogi it is said:

As towards himself so is he towords his enemy Like his wife is his mother to him like his mother is the control can to him like a Dombi (a wandering minstrel of the lowest easte) is to him a Brahman woman his skin to him is like the garment atraw is like a precious stone wine and food like exercts an abuse like a song of praise Indralike Radra day as night the phenomena as dreams the extant as the perished pain as enjoyment, son as a victous erecture heaven as hell—and so to him the bad and the good are one

If in reality a Nagariuna was the author of this section it must be another person of the same The authorship name then the founder of the Madhyamika system But as the anthor of the third section is given out to be Shakyamitra he is probably the same as the person mentioned by Taranatia as a contemperary of Devapala of Bengal about 8.0 AD and this period may well belong to the entire book When Tarano the says that during the period of the Pala dynasty in Bengal, that is from the seventh to the ninth century Yoga and magio prependerated in Buddhism we may well eredit him and the rest of the Tantras may have arisen rather in this than in an earlier age. Taranatha in his history of Bud. dhism in India gives us an edequate conception of Tantric Buddhism Here indeed we have the mention of Mahayana and Tripitaka of Buddhistic scionco and Buddhistic self sacrifice but a much more prominent part is played by Siddh; or the supernatural power acquired through Tantras and Mantres

In the Catalogue of Buddhist Sanskrit MSS in the Royal Asiatic Society by E. B. Cowell and J. Eggeling (JRAS, 1876, reprint p 28) we find the mention of Pancakra propadeshe by Srighanta. The tantra literature has no po

ay. La Vallee Poussin pular origin, but is "learned" in its wiregard Tantra and (JRAS, 1899, p 141 f) is inclined t ofs have been adduc-Tantra-Buddhism as ancient But no pron, JRAS, 1898, p 909 ed in support of this theory (See Rapsidings 1900, p 100 ff) ff) Haraprasad Shastrı (JASB, Procee fth or the sixth cenassigns the Tantra literature to the fad completed his his-Taranatha was born in 1573 al Indian and Tibetan tory in 1608 which was written with at page 189 ff actual He reports even in his time contents of the Tan. materials Barbarous like thhich it is written, and practising wizards tras, is as a rule also the Sanskrit in with me silence were it one would rather pass over this literaldely spread in Northnot for the fact that it has been so we that to it is attached ein India, Tibet and latterly in China great culture historic-importance ımgı aha published by An anthology called Subhashitas(n, 1903, p 275 ff) Bendall (Le Museorom the Madhyamika Printed Tantra contains extracts Purely magical texts and the Tantra texts published by F W. literature. are the Sadhanas pt catalogues give an Thomas (idid p 1 ff) The manuscriliterature in India In idea of the great compass of Tantra of amalgamating Bud-Tibet the Tantras were the best means _{1zards} The Tantras dhism with the analogous creed of W Some of the Sanskrit were imported into China in 1200 nke, are dealt with by tantuc MSS discovered by A O Fran Japan the Shin-gon F Kielhorn, (JRAS, 1894, 835 ff) Ianjio, Short History of sect is based on Tantra texts (B N On Tantras and the the Twelve Japanese Buddhist Sects mouf Introduction p. Tantra Buddhism in general, see Bunsmus, p 201 ff, but 465 ff, 578 f, Wassiljew Der Buddl_{m Etudes} et Materiaux, especially La Vallee Poussin Bouddhis 343 ff, 368 ff. pp 72 ff, 130 ff, and Bouddhisme, pp

CHAPTER X.

UHRIBIANITY AND BUDDHISM Resemblances and Differences

So far as Bud lhism has been a world religion a great part of the llu life t literature belongs to the world literature. We have seen in a veral places that Buddhistic fables, ancedotes, stories and legends have not only immigrated along with Bud lhism into La t Asia Lut have their manifold parallel in Luropean literatures—a circumstance however which does not estable hithat Buddhlstic stories have wandered into Lurope but that frequently the reverse has been the case. We have also seen that the legend of the Buddhla himself has many features in common with the Christian religion and that individual dieta and similies in the anitias or dialogues in the Hud ling. Tripitaka and in the Bulanjana sutras remind as more or less strikingly of passages in the Christian Gospel.

Are similarities acci is to be attached to them is of such a moment that we must once again examine it as a whole. Is it a question here of a few

The questi m however to what extent such resemblances more or less accidental similarities and harmonies which are to be explained by the fact that the legends similarities and expressions in question have spring from the same situation and religious spirit; or is it a matter of actual dependence of one literature upon the other? Does the Christian Gospel stand under the influence of the Inddhist holy write derived from the pre Christian times? Or have the later fluiddhist texts like the Lalianistara and Saddharma pundarita been influenced by the Christian Gospel? These problems have repeatedly been the subject of icsearch and have found various answers

It was especially Rudolf Seydel who believed that he had proved numerous instances of har-Seydel's mony between the life of Jesus, according hypothesis. to the Gospel, and the legend of the Buddha, so that he set up the hypothesis that the evangelists employed, along with a primitive Matthew primitive Mark, also an ancient Christian poetic Gospel which was influenced by Buddhism, and that from the latter were borrowed all those legends, similitudes, and expressions which have answering parallels in the Buddhist He considered this hypothesis to be necessary, because the similarities according to his view appear not solitary but in abundance and to constitute regular groups, in fact, a connected whole A single stick, he believed, can be easily broken but with much more difficulty a bundle of them or rather a bundle of bundles Quite true Ir, however, the stick is no stick but a phantom of a stick, it is no use, nor is a bundle of them, nor a bundle of bundles either. As a matter of fact it is not difficult to show, and has been shown repeatedly, that the majority of similarities adduced by Seydel cannot bear a more precise test.

More cautious than that of Seydel is the attitude of the Dutch scholar G. A van den Bergh van "Loans" from Eysinga towards the problem of Indian Buddhism. influence on the Christian scriptures
From the start he set aside all which can be easily explained on the ground of similarity of circumstances under which the texts arose, on the ground of the similarity of religious development, and lastly on the ground of general human nature Still according to him there are real similarities which can be accounted for only as loans, but we have not to assume literary dependence but that only, by verbal communication in the times of the Roman Caesars Indian material motives, and ideas reached the West and that a few of these features were borrowed in the structure of the legenda of the earliest Christianity Of the fifty-one parallels which Seydel believed were discovered, Borgb van Eysinga holds only nine to be worth discussing and six only out of these to be more or less to the point.

What Serdel undertook to give with the help of in sufficient material-in his time Buddhist American literature was very incompletely knownsoholar s namely, harmonics between the Buddhist researches. and Christian scriptures, has been onca again attempted on the hasis of much more exact knowledge of Pali and Sanskrit texts by the American acholar Albert J Edmunds It is not his object as he ex pressly states, to demonstrate the dependence of the Christian scriptures upon the Buddhist but only to place the two rell gions in juxtaposition so that their comparison may enable us to understand them better Novertheless, he is inclined to the view that Christianity as the more oclectic religion of the two borrowed from Buddhism and that it was especially Luke who knew the Buddhist epic. But the comprehensive contexts of the passages brought forward by Edmunds and which are comparable only half ways in both the literary circles, most clearly prove that there is no matance in which a loan on the part of the four evangelists must be assumed; that in most cases there is only similarity of thought which does not presume a literary connection; that in the best of examples we can admit only a possibility of a mutual influ ence, and that this possibility is heightened to probability in altogether very few cases. And frequently enough the passages placed in parallels by Edmunds demonstrate how much greater are the divergencies than the similarities.

Let us read for instance the parallel texts in Edmunds regarding the miraculous conception and Parallel texts. birth of Christ and of the Buddha and the dissimilarities immediately arrest our at-No doubt in both cases we have miracles But there they are, as we learn from the history of religions as well as mythology and folklore, at the birth of great men every-To the Virgin birth the Greek mythology offers a much closer parallel than the Buddhist legend Buddha was not conceived and given buth to by a maid but by a wedded queen Besides the texts touching the temptation of the Buddha by Mara, and Christ by Satan, show more divergencies than similarities and the temptation of Zoroaster by Ahriman indicates that here we have not to do with simple textual loans but at the most with historicoreligious connections of much earlier times. Likewise in the legend of the transfiguration of Jesus as compared with the report of the phosphorescent body of the Buddha in the Mahaparınıbbanasutta, I can only see a striking and highly interesting historico-religious parallel but no borrowing from the Buddhist literature

Asita and of Simeon in Luke, In spite of Legends. several divergencies, which even here are undeniable, I consider it to a certain extent probable that the Buddhist legend was known to the author of the Christian narrative. Possible also is a connection between the legend of the Buddha, who as a boy separated himself from his companions and was found in deep meditation, and the narrative of the twelve year old Jesus who instead of returning with his parents to Nazareth stopped behind in the temple of Jerusalem and engaged in a conversation with the teachers I hold likewise possible a connection between the benediction on the Lord's Mother by the woman in Luke (XI. 27f) and in the Nidanalatha And even if it is not surprising that a saint is served by an angel, still it is noteworthy that angels received the fasting Jesus and the fasting Buddha, hence here also a connectiou is possible

To the miracles of Christ two parallels have been found As Jeans fed with in the Jaiala book Miracles five leaves and two fishes five thousand men, so in a Jataka five hundred men are feasted by means of a cake which multiplies itself just as Peter walks over the water and is about to sink under neath as soon as his faith wavers so in another Jetaka a believing layman welks across a river so long as he thinks of the Buddhe with cheerful mind and begins to sink as soon as the inspiring Buddha thoughts are discarded at the sight of the waves But both these accounts occur only in the stories of the present in the Jataka commentary and from their late time of origin it is not precluded that they originally belouged to Christianity From post-Christian times is also derived the narrative of the poor maiden who bestows upon the monks her all, two copper pieces, which she had found in a heap of sweepings and is commended on that account by the Buddha eccording to whom her gift must be as highly prized as that of a wealthy person who gives away all his goods and treasures. She has not to wait long for the reward of her good deed. Soon after she is found by a passing king who falls in love with her and carries her home his queen. It is not to be doubted that the Buddhist uarrative in the form in which we know it in the Chinese translation of Ashvachosha a Eutralankara stands. as regards time, far behind the Gospel story so wonderfully beautiful in ell its sumplicity, of the two pennies of the widow Here too it is not impossible that the Buddhists may have learnt it from Christian missionaries. It is also not inconceiveble that an older and better shape of the Bud dhist legend has been lost to us. The concord in respect of such a minor detail as the "two pennies" makes it in the highest degree probable that the Buddhist and Christian stories have not arisen independently of each other

Less probable it is that the parable of the "lost son" in the Saddharmapundarika is connected with that in Luke Even Seydel says, "the smile of the Lotus has in truth nothing to do with Christianity except that a son returns in poverty, and above all the motive of comparison in each of the parallels is wholly and entirely different" The similarity between the legend of Jesus and the Samaritan woman in John, and that of Ananda and the Pariah maiden in the Divyavadana is not very great. In both the cases, moreover, we have to deal with the Buddhist texts of post-Christian times

The death of Christ has also been compared with the entry of the Buddha into nivana. Seydel has indicated that the events are accom-Resurrection and Nirvana. panied by an earthquake, while Edmunds points out that Jesus as well as the Buddha And yet the differences in both the relidie in the open air gious texts are nowhere so great. What a dissonance between the Mahaparınıbbanasutta and the XXVIIth Chapter of Matthew! Here is the moving tragedy of a martyr and a victim of fanaticism, there the tranquil passing of a sage a glorious euthanasia In the gospel of Matthew there is an earthquake and graves open in horror of the misdeed, in the Mahaparınbbanasutta the earthquake is to announce its approbation of the beautiful consummation of the complete nırvana of the Lord Less probable still in respect of the legends is the connection between the isolated expressions and similes employed by Jesus and the Buddha. It is mostly only a metter of such general similarity or such generality of thought that the same might as well occur and in feet does occur in the sacred books of all the religions as for instance in the Majikimanikaya 110 where there is a mention of the seed and the harvest of good works which is comparable to the similatude of the sower in Metthew (XII 18 ½) or in the suite of the true treasure where similar thought is expressed as in Matthew VI 19 Lay not up for your selves treasures upon the earth where meth end rust doth consume, &c. '

And when we put together the results of comparison of the four gospels with the Buddhistie texts Remits of we see that the discordances are much comparison greater than the harmonies. In the entire character itself of the legends which heer comparison there is a vast divergence. While in Buddhum all the miracles are explained by Karma by the act continu ing to operate through re birth the Christian miracles are only a manifestation of God's grace and omninciouse Very pertinently remarks Edv Lehmann: For the taste of the Indians the eccurrences in the Christian narretives have always an insufficient motive and to us Christians, the Indian narratives-even from pure neathetical standpoint-strike as elmost unsupportably well metived. ' Accordingly it is ont of the question that the Buddhist literature should have exercised direct influence on the Gospel. On the other hand it is certain that since the period of Alexander the Great and especially in the times of the Roman Cosars there , were both numerous commercial links and spiritual relation ship between India end the West so that a superficial ac quaintance with the Buddhistin ideas and solitory Buddhist legends was quite possible even probable in the aircles in which the Gospels originated. Positive proof of the know ledge of Buddhism in the West, however, we possess only from the second or third century after Christ, And this is also the period of the rise of apocryphal Gospels in which we are able to demonstrate quite a series of undoubted loans from Buddhistic literature.

Equally certain it is that one of the favourite books of Christianity in the Middle Ages, the romance of Barlaam and Josaphat, was composed by a pious Christian on the basis of the Buddhist legend with which he was acquainted, may be, through the Lalitavistara For the framework of this romance (in other respects wholly and entirely breathing a Christian spirit, is Buddhistic and the main features of the Buddhistic legend in it are reproduced, for instance, the three occasions on which the Bodhisattva went out and made his acquaintance with age, disease and death. A few of the interpolated parables are well-known in Indian literature, like the "man in the well" and in the story itself there are references to India In Eastern Iran or in Central Asia, where as we now learn from the discoveries at Khotan and Turfan by Stem, Grunwedel and Le Coq, for centuries Zoroastrians, Buddhists, Christians and Manichæans lived-in close contact with each other, a Christian monk might easily have learnt the Buddhistic legend and been inspired thereby to a poem for the propagation of the Christian doctrine This poem was, as we conjecture, composed in the sixth or seventh century in the Pahlavi language and latter translated into Arabic and Syriac Georgian and Greek translations must have been based on the Syriac text Fiom the Greek text are derived the several recensions in Arabic, Hebrew, Ethiopian, Armenian, Slav and Romanian numerous European translations and redactions Vaga has treated the material dramatically can be traced to a Latin text translated from the Greek There have been adaptations of the romance in German since 1220 In course of centuries the actors in this poem became so famihar to the Christian peoples that they were regarded as pious Christian folk who had actually lived and faught, so that finally the Catholic Church made saints of the two heroes of the narrative, Barkeam and Josephat Josephat, however, is no other than the Bodhisattva

And as in the Middle Ages so also down to our days the Indian Buddha legend has shown vita Vitality of hity and has implied poet after poet to epic and even dramatic presentments. Thus the "Light of Asia by the English poet Ed win Arnold could even in the nineteenth century arouse such enthusiasm that it went through sixty editions in England and one hundred in America and thoroughly establish ed the poet's fame

We have already seen that a Buddhist legend survives in Richard Wagner a poetry. In the last days of his life the personality of the Buddha occupied him and it is not to be wondered at that after Wagner's death the rumour was affect, no doubt without warrant that the poet had worked upon a musical drama called. Buddha

The neo-Buddhistic movement of our day has shown itself less fruitful in respect of literary creations. Apart from translations it has hardly gone much beyond anthologies catechisms and shallow propagandistic writings But if we see in this neo-Buddhism spreading in Europe and America only one of the many poths of error in which the struggle for a new philosophy has conducted us nevertheless we must admire the vitality of Buddhism and the Buddhist literary works which have inspired again and again the minds of thinkers and poets of all nations and still continue to so inspire — And I hope to have shown in this chapter that there is still a good deal hidden in Buddhist—literature which is worthy of being transferred to the literature of Europe and to be made the common property of the world literature.

CHAPTER XI

ANOUGH INDIAN NATIONAL LIFRATURE.

The history of Indian literature is the history of the mental work of at least three thousand years expressed in speech and script. Importance and extent of And the theatre of this mental operation of hundreds of years almost uninterrupted Indian literacontinuance is the country which stretches tore from the Hindukush to Cape Comorin and covers a surface of a million and a helf square miles, that is to say comprises an area comvalent to the whole of Europe minus Russia-a country which extends from the eighth to the thirty fifth degree of north latitude in other words, from hottest regions of the equator deep the The infinence which this litera the temperate gone ture exercised already in ancient days on the mental life of other nations reaches far heyond the frontiers of India down to Farther India, Tibet Chma Japan, Korea and in the south over Ceylon and the Malay Archipelago and the group of islands in the Indian and the Pacific Oceans while in the west traces of Indian mental culture are observable deep into Central Ama and east to Turkestan where burned in sandy deserts Indian manuscripts have recently been dis-

In its contents the Indian literature comprises all that the world literature includes in its wider connotation, religious and profane, epic and lyric, dramatic and didactic poetry as well as story literature and scientific treatures in prose.

covered. (See Appendix IV)

In the foreground stands religious literature, Not only the Brahmans in the Veda and the Buddhists in the Tripi take but also many others of the numerous religious sects which have appeared in India own an enormous mass of literary product,—hymns, sacrificial literates, magne charms, myths and legends and sermons, theological treatises, polemical writings, manuals of ritual and religious ordinance In this literature there are accumulated for a history of religions mestimable material which no investigator of the religious phenomenon can afford to mattentively pass by Alongside of this activity in the region of religious writings going back to thousands of years and perpetuated down to this day there have appeared ın since earliest times, heroic poems which in the course have been composed centuries into two great national epics, the Mahabharata and the Ramayana From the material of these two epics for centuries Indian poets of the Middle ages shaped their creations and there arose epic poems which are, in contrast with the national poems, designated artistic epics If, however, this artistic ministrelsy owing to its excessive artificiality hardly answer to our taste the Indian poets have bequeathed to us lyrical and dramatic compositions which in their tenderness and insight, partly also in their dramatic portrayal, challenge comparison with the finest products of modern European literature. And in one branch of fine letters, that of poetic maxims, the Indians acquired a supremacy unattained as yet by any other nation India is also the land of stories and fables The Indian collections of tales, anecdotes and prose narratives, have played no insignificant role in the history of the literature of the world In fact, the researches into the story literature, the fascinating study of folklore and the pursuit of their motifs and migrations from nation to nation, have become a science in itself as a continuance of the fundamental work of Benfey on Panchatantra, the Indian collection of fables

It is a peculiarity of Indian genius that it never drew a rigid line of demarcation between the Peculiar purely artificial products and methodical traits of Indian creations so that a differentiation between genius polite literature and scientific writing is, properly speaking, not possible in India What appears to us as a collection of stories and fables nesses for the Indian as a manual of politics or ethics. On the other hand, history and blography in India are nothing less than themes to he treated by bards as a veriety of epic poetry Besides, properly speaking a difference between the forms of poetry and prose does not exist in India Every subject can be handled in verse or in prose equally well. We find romanees which are distinguished from epics only in this that they ere devold of metrical mould. A particular predilection is ovinced since the most ancient deys for an admixture of proze and verse And for what we call strictly scientific literature India uses only partly the prose form. verse being employed in a much larger volume. This applies to works of philosophy and jurisprudence just as well es mathematics, estronomy architecture and so forth Indians, indeed, have composed their grammers and diction arles in verse and nothing more perhaps is characteristic of the Indian genius than that a voluminous epic of the artificial kind in twenty two canton has been devoted to tha express object of illustrating and emphasising rules of gram mar From early times philosophy has been et home in India. At first it appeared conjointly with religious lite rature Later on it became independent of the latter and it has always been o theme of literary labour Similarly at reedy in remote antiquity law and custom -likewise in connection with religion-bave been made the subject of legal literature composed pertly in prose and partly in verse The importance of these legal writings for comparative purisprudence and sociology is to-day fully appreciated by emment jurists and leaders of social science Centuries be fore the birth of Christ, in India was studied grammar a science in which the Indians surpassed all nations of antiquity Lexicography elso goes back to bigh antiquity. The artificial poets of India of later days sang not what was bestowed upon them by the gods but they studied the rules of grammar and searched into dictionaries for rare and effective poetic expressions They composed poetry according to the canon laid down in scientific treatises on metre and prosody From the first the Indian mind had a particular penchant for devising schemes and for pedantically scientific treatment of all possible subjects. We find accordingly in India not only a rigid and partly ancient literature on mathematics, astrology, arithmetic and geography but also music, singing, dancing, theatricals, soothsaying, sorcery, nay, even erotics reduced to a system and treated in special manuals Each individual branch of literature here enumerated in the course of centuries accumulated a mass of uncontrollably immense productions. Not the least contributions came from commentators who displayed a diligent activity on almost every province of religious literature as well as poetry and science Thus it comes about that some of the most momentous and at the same time ponderous works on grammar, philosophy and law represent merely commentaries on more ancient books On these scholia were composed further supercommentailes In India, indeed, it is not seldom that an author supplies annotations to his own works is no wonder therefore that the entire body of Indian literature is well nigh of overpowering extent, and in spite of the catalogues of Indian manuscripts which are to be found in Indian and European libraries and which contain several thousands of titles of books and names of authors, numberless works of Indian literature have perished and many names of ancient authors have either been known only by means of quotations in later writers or have been totally lost to us of Indian literature, would completely suffice to justify our interest in its vast, peculiar and ancient literature. And there is something

All these facts, the age, the wide geographical expanse, the volume and the wealth, the Aryan unity of aesthetic and still more the cultural value speech.

Aryan spirit such as has been developed in the Far East. Therefore Indian literature constitutes a necessary complement to the classics of ancient Greece and Rome for every person who would eschew a one-sided consideration of Indo. Aryan essentials True, Indian literature in its artistic It is certain value cannot be compared with that of Greece that the thought-world of India has not in the remotest degree exercised such influence on European spiritual life as Greek and Roman culture has done But should we desire to learn the origins of our own culture and should we wish to understand the most ancient Indo-Aryan civilization we must go to India where are preserved for us the most ancient writings of the Indo-Aryan people For in whichever way the problem of the antiquity of Indian literature is decided, this stands firmly established that the remotest literary monuments of India are at the same time the oldest Indo-Aryan written records in our possession But-even the intermediate influence which the literature of India has exercised on European thought is not altogether trivial. We shall see in the course of our further investigations that the story literature of Europe is by no means insignificantly indebted And as regards the literature of the Germans and to India their philosophy both of them from the beginning of the nineteenth century have been affected by Indian thought and it is highly probable that its influence will tend to intensify and develop in the course of future centuries

For a mental relationship which is deducible from the Indo-Aryan speech unity, is still clearly Impact of discernible and is nowhere more so as Indian genius between the Indian and the Teutonic races.

on German The surprising points of contact between thought. The two have often been indicated, for instance, by G Brandes and Leopold von Schroeder. Critics have before now called attention to the common predicction of both for obstract speculation and a teudency to pantheism but in many other respects also the two opproced each other in a remorkable degree. Some of the European poets here sung of the sorrows of the world. And the 'sorrows of existence' is the basic idee on which is constructed the dectrine of the Buddha. More then one poet here heweiled the tribulations and misery of the world the transitoriness and nullty of all that is terrestrial in words which forcibly remind the reader of the melancholy verses of Nikolas Lenan. When Helion 2375.

Sweet is sleep death is better.

It were best of all not to have been born he gives expression just to those sentiments beloved of the Indian philosophers who know of no effort more passionate then for a death which knows of no re birth. Even the sentimentality and the feeling for nature have identical peculia rities for the two peoples while to both the Hehrew end the Greek poesy sounds foreign. The Germans love delineation of nature pust as well as the Indians and both love to bring into close relationship the joys and sorrows of man with his neinral surroundings. In a totally different province the similarity between German and Indian fables assorts itself. We have alreedy snoken of the tendency of the In dians towards the devising of scientific schemes and we can assert with justification that the Indiens were the learned notion of entiquity Just as the Indians in the gray dawn of the remotest past philologically analysed their oldest snored scriptures and reduced linguistic phenomena to e systematic science and advanced in grammar so far that modern science of languages to this day leans on their early achievements, just in the same way the Germans of to-dey ere incontest shly leaders in the domnins of philology and science of languages. In the region of Indien philology and in the investigations of Indian literature the Germans have been pioneers. We owe it to the British that as the rulers of India they were compelled by practical necessity to the study of Indian languages and literature. Much has been done for the literature and culture of old India by eminent Frenchmen, Italians, Dutch, Danes, Americans, Russians and let it not be forgotten indigenous Indian scholars. The Germans have participated in the publication of texts, commentaries, exegesis, in the editing of dictionaries and grammars. This leads us to a brief survey of the history of beginnings of European researches into Indian linguistic archeology.

CHAPTER XII.

BEGINNINGS OF INDIAN STUDIES IN EUROPE.

The immense mass of Indian literary works which could scarcely be now controlled by a single scholar has been made accessible for research purposes in the course of a little more than a century

In the 17th and still more in the 18th century individual travellers and missionaries acquired a certain knowledge of Indian languages and made themselves familiar with some one or another book pertaining to Indian literature Their offerts, however were not sown in a fertile soil. In the year 1651 Ahraham Roger a Dutch, who had lived as a mission ary in Policat north of Madras reported on the Indian Brahmanie literature of India and published a few of the savings of Bhartribari translated into Portuguese for him by a Brahman, a collection upon which later on Herder drew for his Voices of Nations in Songs. In the year 1699 the Jesuit father Johann Ernst Hanvleden went to India and worked there for over thirty years in the Malabar mission. He himself used Indian vernsculars and his Grammatica was the first Sanskrit grammar written by a European, It has never been printed but was used by Fra Polino de St. Bartholomeo This Fra Polino-an Austrian Carmelite whose real name was J Ph Wessdin,-is undoubtedly among the most eminent evangluts who were the pioneers in the field of Indian literature He was a musionary to the Coast of Malabar from 1776-1789 and died in Rome in 1805 He wrote two Sanskrit grammars and several learned trea tues and books. His Systems Brahmanicum published in Rome in 1792 and his Travels in the East Indies displayed an extensive knowledge of India and Brahmanic literature and at the same time a deep study of Indian tongues and particularly the essentials of the Indian religion. Even his works have left few traces behind.

About this time, however, the British commenced to be interested in the languages and literature. Great Britain of India It was no less a personage than and Brahmanic Wallen Hastings, the leal founder of Butish domination in India, who gave the learning first fruitful impetus to a study of Indian literature which has since continued without interruption He recognised (this the British since have never forgotten) that the British rule in India could not be consolidated unless the rulers agreed to conciliate, as far as possible, the social and religious tenets of the indigenous people. At his suggestion, therefore, it was decided in the council responsible for the Government of India that native scholars should cooperate with judicial officials to enable British judges to take cognizance of the ordinances of Indian junisprudence in their decisions When Warren Hastings was appointed Governor-General of Bengal and was entrusted with supieme powers relating to the entire British possessions in India he had, with the help of a number of Biahmans learned in ancient Hindu law, composed a work based on old Sanskrit sources in which under the title of "Vivadai navasetu," or the "Bridge across the Ocean of Disputations," were incorporated all the important elements of Indian law on inherstance, succession and the like But when the work was accomplished there was found no one in a position to translate directly its Sanskiit text into English Recourse was therefore had to the prevailing imperial tongue of the time The Sanskiit work was first rendered into Persian and from the latter an English version was prepared by Nathaniel Brassey Halhed This translation was published at the expense of the East India Company under the name of "A Code of Gentoo Law" in 1776 (Gentoo is the Portuguese for Hindu) A German translation of this law book appeared at Hamburg in 1778.

The first Englishman to acquire a knowledge of Sanskrit was Charles Wilkins who was en-Early English couraged by Warren Hastings to study scholars with the Pandits at Benares the principal seat of Indian learning. As the first fruit of his Sanskrit studies he published in 1785 an English translation of the philosophical poem of Bhagai adgita which was thus the first Sanskrit book to be directly translated into a European language. Two years later followed a translation of the Fables of Hitopadesha and in 1795 a translation of the Shakuntala episode from the Mahabharata. For his banskrit grammar which appeared in 1808 for the first time banskrit types were cast in Europe. These were cut and prepared by himself personally. This Englishman Charles Wilkins, was also the first who laboured on Indian inscriptions and translated some of them into English.

Still more important for the development of European efforts in the vast domain of Indian litera

Jones and ture was the activity of the celebrated

Colebrooks. Orientalist Williams Jones (1740-1794) who started for India in 1783 to take up the attnation of a superior writer in Fort William. Jones had already in his younger years busied himself with Orien tal poetry and rendered into English Arabic and Persian poems. No wonder therefore that arrived in India he turn ed with enthusiasm to the study of Sanskrit and Indian lite rature Exactly a year after his arrival he became the foun der of the Asiatio Society of Bengal, which developed an extraordinarily valuable career by the publication of periodicals and especially the printing of numerous Indian texts. In 1789 he published his English translation of the celebrated drama of Shakuntala by Kalidasa. This English translation was turned into German in 1791 by Foster and kindled to the highest degree the enthusiasm of celebrities like Her der and Goethe Another work of the same poet Kalidasa, the lyric of Ritusamhara, was brought out in Calcutta in 1792 by Jones and this was the first Sanskiit text to be published in print Of still greater moment was it that Jones translated into English the most celebrated law book of Manu which commands the supreme position in Indian legal literature The translation appeared in Calcutta in 1794 and was called "Institutes of Hindu Law or the Ordinances of Manu " A German translation of this book appeared in Again, William Jones was the flist to 1797 at Wiemai aver with certainty the genealogical connection of Sanskrit with Greek and Latin and to surmise it for the German, Celtic and Persian languages He also called attention to the analogy between ancient Indian and the Giæco-Roman mythology

While the enthusiastic Jones, owing to the spirit which he brought to bear upon the treasures of Indian literature, and bringing them to light, provided a powerful stimulant, the more sober Thomas Colebrooke who continued the labours of Jones was the actual founder of Indian philology and antiquity Colebrooke had entered upon an official career as a lad of sixteen in Calcutta in 1782 without troubling himself about Sanskiit and its literature for the first eleven years of his stay in India. But when Jones died in 1784 Colebiooke had already picked up Sanskrit and undertook to translate from Sanskiit into English a digest of Indian law prepared from Sanskrit text-books on inheritance and contract under the direction of Jones This translation saw the light in 1797-98 and its exact title was "A Digest of Hindu Law of Contracts and Successions "It coveied four folio volumes Henceforward he devoted himself with indefatigable zeal to the investigation of Indian literature and he was interested in contrast to Jones so much in poetry as in the scientific works in Sanskrit We owe him accordingly not only more works on Indian law but also pioneer dissertations on the philosophy of religion.

grammar, and ancient mathematics of the Hindus, It was he who in 1805 in his celebrated essays on the Vedas supplied for the first time precise and reliable information on the aneient sacred books of the Indians. For the so-called translation of the Yasurveda which appeared under the title of Ezour Vedam, in 1778 in French and in 1779 in German, was only a literary fabrication a pious fraud which originated probably with the missionary Robert de Nobilibus. The French pect Voltairo received from the honds of an official returned from Pondicherry this supposititious translation and presented it to the Royal Library of Paris. The poet considered the book to be an ancient commentory on the Vedas which was transloted into French by a venerable Brahman hundred years old and he frequently relied upon this Ezour I cdam as a source of Indian antiquity As early how ever as 1782 Sonacrat proved the work to be sparious Colebrooke was also the editor of the imarakosha and other Indian lexicons the celebrated grammar of Panini the Fables. of Hitopadesha and the artistic poem of Kirgiariumina He was also the author of a Sanskrit grammar and studied and translated a number of inscriptions. Finally he had treasur ed an extraordinarily rich collection of Indian MSS, which is reported to have cost him £10 000 and which on his return to England he presented to the East India Company This value able mass of manuscripts is amongst the most precious treasures of the India Office Library in London. Among the Englishmen, who like Jones and Colebrooke studied Sanskrit at the close of the 18th century in India was Alex ander Hamilton He returned to Europe in 1802 and travel ling through France sojonmed at Paris for a brief while There an accident occorred disagreeable to himself but unusually favourable to the cause of science. For the hestillties interrupted only for a short period by the Peace of Amiens broke ont afresh between Fugland and France and Napoleon issued an order that all the British who were staying at the ofoutbueak the France wai m should he prohibited to return to theur home and detain-Alexander Hamilton was ed in Paris among these English detenus Now, in 1802 the German poet Friedrich Schlegel also happened to go to Paus to stay there with a few interruptions down to the year 1807, just the period covered by the involuntary sojourn of Hamilton In Geimany interest had already been awakened in the work of the A sensation was created, especially by the Eng-English lish translation of Shakuntala by Jones which was immediately one into German in 1791 Between 1795 and 1797 the productions of Jones were translated into German so also was Jones' "Digest of Hindu Law" in 1797 Nor were the works of Fra Polino de St Bartholomeo unknown in Germany It was above all the romantic school at the head of which stood the brothers Schlegel on which the literature of India exercised especial fascination. It was indeed the time when people were growing enthusiastic over foreign literatures had already with his "Voices of Nations in Songs" and his "Ideas on the History of Mankind" (1784-1791) called attention to the Otient The Romantists threw themselves heart and soul into everything connected with foreign and distant lands and were particularly partial to India As Fr Schlegel said, from India was expected nothing less than a key to the hitherto obscure history of the primitive world, and the finends of poetry hoped, since the publication of Shahuntala for many similar chaiming idylls of the Asiatic soul, instinct like ıt, with animation and love Small wonder therefore, that Fr Schlegel, when he became acquainted in Pairs with Alexander Hamilton, immediately seized the occasion to study Sanskiit with him During 1803 and 1804 he had the benefit of his instruction and the further years of his stay in Pairs he employed in study in the library there which even then possessed about two hundred Indian manuscripts. A catalogue of this was published by Haton in Paris in 1807. In collaboration with Langles he translated Hamilton's Notes from English into Frinch Fri Schlegel's great work came cut in 1809. On the language and the wisdom of the Indians in contribution to the foundation of the knowledge of antiquity. This book was written with enthusiasm and was calculated to be an inspiration. Besides it contained renderings of extracts from the Ramayina Manus law book the Bhagacadata and episode from the Vahabharata bearing on Shakintalo. These were the first direct translatten from San krit into German. All that had appeared in Germany prior to this on Indian lit rature was horrowed from English publication.

But while Friedrich Schlegel gave an impetus to Sanskrit tudies it vas his brother August W Ranskrit Sobleg I who was the first to develop ex learning and tensive activity in Germany by means of Germany the publication of the editions of texts translations and similar philological works the was more over the first profes in it sanskrit in Germany and as such was appointed to the chair f united at the university of Benn in 1919 Lille his brother in Paris who commenced his studies in 1814 he started his investigations in Part. His teacher was the French savant \ L. Chezy the first French scholar who learnt and taught Sanskrit He was also the first professor of Sanskrit at the C llege de France and had rendered service to Oriental interature as an editor and translator of Indian books. In the year 1823 appeared the first volume of the periodical. The Indian I lbrary founded and mostly written by August Schlegel It contains numerous essays on Indian philology. In the same year he unblished also a good edition of the Bhagaradgita with a Latin translation, while in the year 1829 came out the first part of the most important work of Schlegel, his edition of the Ramayana which has remained incomplete

A contempolary of August Schlegel was Flanz Bopp Born in 1791, he proceeded to Paris in 1812 to occupy himself with Oriental languages and there sat along with Schlegel at the feet of the French scholar Chézy and acquerd But while the brothers Schlegel enthused over Sanskrit India as romantic poets and regarded the study of Indian literature as a kind of "adventure," Bopp entered upon the subject throughout as a prosaic investigator and it was he who by means of his essays on the "Conjugation system of the Sanskiit language in comparison with that of Greek, Latin, Persian and German languages," which appeared in 1816, became the founder of a new science, the science of comparative philology which had such a great further before it But even researches in Indian literature Bopp made unusual contributions In his "Conjugation system" he gave as an appendix several episodes from the Ramayana and the Mahabharata in metrical rendering from the original text and a few extracts from the Veda taken over from the English translation of Colebrooke With rare fortune he seized upon the marvellous history of king Nala and his faithful consoit Damayanti out of the colossal epic of the Mahabharata and made it generally accessible by means of a critical edition accompanied by a Latin translation It was just the one out of the numerous episodes in the Mahabharata which approaches nearest to a complete whole and does not merely belong to the finest pieces in the great epic, but as one of the most fascinating efforts of Indian poetic genius is especially calculated to arouse vivid interest for Indian letters and a fondness for Sanskrit study. It has since then grown into quite a tradition at all the universities where Sanskrit is taught to select the Nala episode as the first reading text-book for the students, for whom it is eminently suitable owing to its simplicity of style. Bopp for the first time edited and translated into German quite a series of legends from the Mahabharata. His Sanskrit grammars which saw light of day in 1837, 1832, 1834 and his glossa rium Sanscritum have powerfully advanced the study of Sanskrit on the continent.

It was a piece of good fortune for the young science and for the study of Sanskrit which long thereafter was connected with it that the gifted many-sided and influential W Humboldt became enamoured of it. He started to learn Sanskrit in 1821, since as he wrote in a letter to August Schlegel, he had seen that without sound grounding in the study of Sanskrit not the least progress could be made cither in the knowledge of languages nor in that class of history which is connected with it. When Schlegel in the year 1828 indulged in a retrospect of his Indian studies, he gave prominence as a special piece of luck for the new science to the fact that it had found in Humboldt a warm friend and patron, Schlegel's edition of the Bhagaradguts had called Hum boldt s ottention to this theosophical peem. He dedicated to hun some treatuses and wrote about it at the time 1827. to Gentz. it is the most profound and loftiest yet seen by the world. And when later on in 1828 he sent to his friend. his study on the Bhagavadgita which had meanwhile been criticised by Regel, he declared that the greater the apathy betraved in Herel a indement, the greater was the value he attached to the philosophical poem of India When I read the Indian noem he wrote for the first time and ever since then my sentiment was one of perpetual gratitude for my luck, which had kept me still alive to be able to he acquainted with this book '

Another great name in German Interature connected with India was, to the good fortune of our science, a poet inspired with the romance of India This was Friedrich Ruckert, the incomparable master of the art of translation. It was he who made some of the choicest portions of Indian epical and lyrical treasures the common property of the German people

Up to 1839 it was almost exclusively the so-called classical Sanskrit literature which attracted the attention of the European scholar The drama of Shakuntala, the philosophical poem of Bhagavadgita, the law book of Manu, maxims by Bhartiihan, the fables of Hitopadesha and stray passages from the great epies, this was nearly the sum total of the principal works with which scholars were occupied and which was regarded as the stock-in-trade of Indian literature. The great and all-important region of the Indian literature, that of the Vedas, was next to unknown, and people were not yet aware of the existence of the entire great Buddhist literature

The little that up to 1830 was known of the Vedas was confined to the miserable and maceu-Dara Shukoh's rate data furnished by the early writers Persian on India Colebiooke gave the first reliable Upanishad information in the essays we noticed above on the Vedas in 1805. It took several years before a German translation of the English rendering was prepared in 1847 Comparatively the most, that people became acquainted with, was in the province of the Upanishads; the philosophical treatises belonging to the Vedas These Upanishads were translated from their original Sanskrit into Persian early in the seventh century by the ill-starred brother of Aurangzeb, Prince Mohammed Dara Shukoh, the son of the great Moghul Shah Jehan From the Persian it was rendered into Latin under the title of Upnékhat in the beginning of the nineteenth century by the Fiench scholar Angueth Duperron the founder of the revival of Parsi learn ing in India Imperfect and strewn with errors as the latter was it was important for the history of science in that the German philosopher Schelling and more particularly Scho penhauer were inspired by Indian philosophy on its basis It was not the Upanishads which we understand and cluck date to-day with all the material and our exact knowledge of the philosophical system of India at our disposal but the Unnellast the altogether faults rendering of Anguetil Du perron which Schopenhaner declare to he the issue of supreme human wisdom. And about the same time when in Germany Schopenhauer was delving into the I panisheds of the Indians for his own philosophical speculations, there was living in India one of the sanest and noblest of men ever produced by this country Ram Mohan I or the founder of Brahmo Sama, a new sect which sought to amalgamate the best in the religious of Europe with the fault of the Hindus "This Indian construed the same I pani hads a us to read in them purest belief in God and indeas used to in trult his people that the idolater of modern Indian religious was to be rejected but that in its stead Indians and not necessarily adopt Christianity but that in their own hold writ in the ancient Vedas, if they could only understand the latter was to be found a pure doctrine of monotheism. With a view to proclaim this new tenet which wa however contained in the old scriptures and propagate it by means of the sect which he had founded the sect of Brahmo Samai or the Church of God and at the same time in order to prove to the Christian theologians and missionaries whom he highly esteemed that the finest of what they believed in was already embodied in the Upanishads in the years 1816 to 1819 he ren dered into English a large number of Upanishads and issued editions of a few of them in the original texts.

But the real philological investigation of the Vedas commenced only in 1838 after the appear-Beginnings ance of the edition in Calcutta of the first ance of the edition in Calcutta of the first section of the Rigveda by Friedrich Rosen who was prevented from the completion of his task by premature death. And it was above all the great Frenchman of learning, Eugène Burnouf, who at the commencement of the forties was professor at the Collège de Flance, who gathered round him a circle of pupils, the future eminent Vedic scholars Burnouf laid the foundation of Vedic studies in Europe One of his pupils was Rudolph Roth who, with his Essay on the literature and history of the Vedas in 1846 mauginated the study of the Vedas in Germany Roth himself and a number of his disciples devoted themselves in the following years and decades with passionate zeal to the exploration of the diverse ramifications of the most ancient literature of India F Max Muller was the most celebrated pupil of Buinouf familiai to us He was initiated into the study of the Vedas by the French master at the same time with Roth Urged by Burnouf, Max Muller conceived the plan of editing the hymns of the Rigveda with the voluminous commentary of Sayana This edition, which is indispensable for any further research, appeared in 1849-1847 A second and an enlarged edition appeared in 1890-1892 But before this was completed, Thomas Aufrecht, with his handy print of the complete texts of the hymns of the Rigveda rendered signal service to this branch of Indian research

Beginnings of Vedic studies.

The same Eugène Buinouf, who rocked the ciadle of the Vedic studies, laid the foundation stone of Pali iesearch and investigation of Buddhist literature with his "Essar sur le Pali," published in collaboration with Chrieligions Lassen in 1826 and his "Introduction à l'histoire du Bouddhisme indien," still a mine of information, in 1844 The Parsis too owe the savant pioneer lahour in Avesta exegesis. He was the teacher of K R hams the father of Parsi antiquarian studies.

With the invasion of the immense province of Vedic interature and with the introduction into the writings of the Buddhists the gospel of infancy of Indian philology came to its termination. It has grown into a great science the devotees of which increase from year to year. One ofter another now saw the light of day critical editions of the most important texts and the learned of all the countries yield with each other in their attempts at interpreting them. The achievements of the last sixty years in the province of Indian literature have been described in detail in several special chapters. Here we have only to survey the principal landmarks along the path of Indology and the most import ant events in its listory.

Before all mention has to be made of a pupil of Ang Schlegel Christian Lassen who in his broad based German 'Indian Antiquary' Whiel began to appear in 1843 and comprised four thick volumes, the last appearing in 1862 strove to encompass the entire knowledge of his day about ancient India. That this work has now become antiquated is no repreach to the anthor hat only a brilliant testimony to the immense progress which our science has made in the second half of the nineteenth century.

Perhaps the greatest impetus to this advancement and probably a capital avent in the history of The great Sanskrit research was the appearance of Dictionary the Sanskrit lexicon by Otto Böntlingk and Rudolph Roth It was published by the Academy of Sciences of St Petersburg The first part camo out in 1802 and in 1875 the entire work in seven folio volumes was given to the world.

And in the same year 1852 in which the great St. Petersburg dictionary started to appear, A. We-Histories of ber made the first attempt to write a comliterature plete history of Indian literature. The second edition of the work appeared in 1876. It does not merely represent a landmark in the history of Indology but to this day, despite its shortcomings in style, which renders the book indigestible to the layman, it remains the most reliable and the most complete handbook of Indian literature possessed by us

If, however, we desire to have an idea of the almost amazing progress which research in Indian literature has made in the comparatively Catalogues of brief period of its existence, we should read Wss. the essay of Aug Schlegel, written in 1819, "on the present condition of Indian philology" in which little more than a hundred Sanskrit works are enumerated as known to the world in editions or translations Let us then cast a glance at the "Literature of the Sanskrit Language," published in 1839 at St Petersburg by Friedrich Adelung, in which not less than three hundred and fifty diverse Sanskrit works are registered Next let us compare with the latter Weber's "History of Indian Literature" which in 1852 discussed and appraised well nigh five hundred books Indian Sanskrit Furthermore, let us examine the "Catalogus Catalogorum," brought out in parts ın 1891, -1896, and 1903 by Theodor Aufrecht, which contains an alphabetical list of all the Sanskrit books and others based on the examination of all the existing catalogues of manuscripts This is truly a monumental work Aufrecht laboured for forty years over it He studied the catalogues of Sanskiit manuscripts in all the great libraries of India and Europe. And the number of the Sanskrit manuscripts noticed in this catalogue amounts to several thousands. Yet this catalogue includes neither the immense Buddhist literature nor the literary productions embedied in Indian languages other than Sanskrit Research into Buddhist literature has power fully advanced since the great English scholar T. W. Rhys Davids established in 1882 the Pali Text Society. A. Weher again with his great treatise on the sacred scriptures of the Jains in 1883 and 1885, annexed to science the new branch of texts which is not lower in antiquity to the writings of the Buddhists.

Such is the enormous mass that has gradually accumu Inted of Indian literature that now-a-days it is hardly possible for a single scholar to control the whole province. It is now some years since it was found necessary to publish in a comprehensive work a general survey of all that has been achieved in the individual branches of Indo-The plan of the work which began to appear since 1897 under the title of "Grundriss ' of Inde Arian philology and antiquity, was dexised by George Bühler, the most emi nent Sanskrit scholar of the last decades. Thirty scholars from Germany England Holland, America and last but not least, India have set to work in co-operation under Bühler, and since his death under Kielhorn, to prepare the individual volumes of this work. The appearance of this Grundries is at once the latest and the most delightful event in the development of the history of Indelogy When we survey the knowledge on ancient India and its literature brought together here in a series which is not yet completed, we can only compare it with what Lassen, only a few decades ago was in a position to give in his great work on Indian Antiquity and regard with justifiable pride the progress which the science has made in a relatively brief period.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE CHRONOLOGY OF INDIAN LITERATURE.

Considerable as has been the advancement in the study of Indian literature, its history proper remains yet in many ways obscure and unexplored In the first place, the chronology of Indian literature is shrouded in almost painful obscurity and there are yet remaining unsolved most of the connected problems for the investigator It would be convenient and desirable to group Indian literature into three or four great periods confined within stated number of years and to reduce the various literary events to one or another of these definite epochs But every attempt of this kind must prove abortive in the present condition of our knowledge, and the suggestion of hypothetical number of years would only be a blind venture which would do more harm than good It is much better to be perfectly clear regarding the fact that we have no exact chronological data whatever as regards the most ancient period of Indian literary history and only a few definite ones for the later ages It was years ago that the famous American Orientalist W D Whitney declared what has since been repeatedly stated "All the data given in the literary history of India are like ninepins to be set up again "And for the most part the dictum is true to this day Even now the views of the most eminent scholars on the age of the most important Indian literary works diverge from one another, not by years or decades but, by centuries, if not by one or two thousand years. What can be established with some certainty is at the most a species of tentative chronology We can often say, "This or that work, this or that class of literature, is older than a given other"; but on the actual age of it we can only make surmises The most reliable criterion for this relative chronology is still the language. Less trustworthy are peculiarities of style, because in India it is a matter of frequent occurrence that youn ger books imitate the diction of an older category of litera ture in order to assume an appearance of antiquity. But frequently even this relative chronology is vitiated by the circumstance that many works on Indian literature and just those which are most popular and which are accordingly of the greatest moment to us, have undergone a multiplicity of reductions and have reached our hands through many transformations. If we find, for instance in a book which is tolerably datable "extracts from the Ramaugna or the Mahabharata the first question that arises is, whether this citation refers to the particular coic as we possess it or to an older shape of it Uncertainty is intensified by the fact. that for the great majority of the books of the ancient htera ture the names of the authors are next to unknown. They have been transmitted to us as the works of principal fami hes ar schools, or monastic orders or the production is at tributed to a logendary personage of prehistoric times. When finally we come to the age where we have to deal with books of anthors of ascertained individuality the latter as a rule are quoted only by their family names which help the hite rary historian of India just as much as if an investigator of English literature were to have to struggle with names like Smith, Jones or William If, for instance an author appears under the name of Kalidasa or if the name of Kalidasa is mentioned anywhere it is by no means certain that the great poet of that name is necessarily meant. It might as well be some other Kalidasa

In this sea of uncertainty there are only a few fixed
A few dated points which may be stated here in order events.

not to frighten away the student from the research as utterly hopeless.

Now here in the first place there is the evidence of language which shows, that the hymns and the litanies the prayers and the magical formulæ in the Veda are incontestably the most ancient portion of our possession of Indian Interature, Ceitain also it is that about 500 BC, Buddhism arose in India and that it pre-supposes the entire Vedic literature as completed and closed in its main lines, so that we may affirm that the Vedic literature is, excepting for its latest ramifications, on the whole pie-Buddhistic, in other words, that it was closed prior to 500 B.C To be more accurate, the death of the Buddha is assigned with tolerable ceitainty to the year 477 B C Besides the chronology of the Buddhistic and the Jain literature is happily not so vague as the The traditions of the Buddhists and the Jams relating to the origin and the conclusion of their canonical works have been proved sufficiently reliable And the inscriptions preserved in the ruins of the temples and topes of these faiths supply us with considerable clue to the history of their literature

But the most definite data in Indian history are those which we have issued not from the Indians Extra-Indian themselves Thus the invasion of Alexanhelps. der the Great of India in 326 BC. is a positive landmark which is of importance also for the Indian literary history, especially when it is a question to decide whether in a given Indian literary production Greek influence is to be assumed Further, we learn also from the Greeks, that about 315 B C Chandragupta, the Sandrakottos of the Greek writers, successfully led a revolt against the satraps of Alexander, took possession of the throne and became the founder of the Maurya dynasty in Pataliputra, the Palibothra of the Greeks and the Patna of About the same time or a few years later it was that the Greek Megasthenes was deputed as Ambassador to the court of Chandiagupta by Seleucus. The fragments which we own of his description of India, which he called the

Indica give us a picture of the standard of the Indian civilisation of these days and afford us a clue to the chronologi cal classification of many Indian literary works. A grandson of Chondragupta was the celebrated king Ashoko who in 259 BC was erowned king and from him are derived the most ancient detable Indian inscriptions yet discovered. These inscriptions chiselled partly into rocks and portly on columns are at the same time the most encient testimony to Indian writing at our command. They show the king as a patron and protector of Buddhism who ntilesed his sovereignty extending from the northernmost border to the southernmost limit of India to spread the dectrine of the Buddles over the country and who in his edicts on rocks and pillars recounts not like other rulers his victories and deeds of glory, but exhorts his people to virinous conduct, warms them of the perils of sin and preaches love of neigh bour and tolorance These unique edicts of king Asoka are themselves valuable literary monuments hown in stone, but they are of moment also being suggestive of a literary history on account of their script, their idiom and their religious historical connections. In the year 178 BC one hundred and thirty-seven years after the coronotion of Chandra gupta the last solon of the Maurya dynasty was hurled from the throne by King Pushyamitra The mention of this Pushyamitra for instance in a drama of Kalidasa is an important indication for the determination of the age of several works in Indian literature. The same remarks holds good of the Geco-Baktrian king Menander who reigned about 144 B C. He appears under the name of Milinda in the celebrated Buddhist book Milindapanha. Next to the Greeks it is the Chinese to whom we owe some of the most important time-data in Indian literature Beginning with the first century of Christianity we hear of Buddhist missionaries going to China and translating Buddhist books into Chinese and of Indian embassies to China as well as Chineso pilgrims who visited India to pay homage to the sacred places of Buddhism Books belonging to Indian, that is Sanskiit, literature were translated into Chinese, and the Chinese supply us preeise dates as to when these renderings were achieved especially three Chinese pilgrims, whose itineraries are preserved, that give us much instructive information on Indian antiquity and literary productions. They are Ga-hien who eame to India in 399, Hiuen-Tsiang who made his great journey to India in 630-635 and I-tsing who sojourned in India during 671-695 The chronological data of the Chinese contrast with those of the Indian being remarkably precise and trustworthy As regards the Indians, the remark is only too true which was made by the Arab traveller Alberum, who in 1039 wrote a very valuable work on India, namely, "The Indians unfortunately do not pay much attention to the historical sequence of events, they are very negligent in the enumeration of the chronological succession of their Kings and when we press them for explanation they do not know what to say and are ever ready to relate fables"

Nevertheless we need not believe what is so often asserted, that the Indians have been entirely de-Indian's sense ficient in the historical sense. In India too of history. there was a historical literature and at all events we come across numerous inscriptions with exact dates which would haidly have been the ease if the Indians lacked all appreciation of history It is true that in their writing of history the Indians have never leaint to distinguish between poetry and historical veracity, that to them the events were always more important than the chronological sequence, and that in literary matters they laid no stress on the difference between the earlier and the What appears to the Indian as sound, true and correet he thrusts back to the remotest antiquity, and when he - wishes to invest with particular sanctity a given doctrine or

APPENDIX I.

CONSTITUTION OF THE BUDDHIST CANON

by,

SYLVAIN LÉVI.

All the organized religions are compelled at a certain stage of their development to constitute a Canon, that is to say, a definite collection of texts which are enjoined upon the faithful as the rule of orthodoxy and which is adduced against the adversary as indisputable authority. Judaism has the Law and the Prophets Christianity has the Gospel and Epistles Islam has its Quran The Brahmans have the Veda Buddhism has its Three Baskets, called the Tripitaka, which comprise in their entirety "the Word of the Buddha" Let us rapidly survey these Three Baskets, that of Sutras, the Vinaya, the Abhidhama The choice of the texts admitted into the canon instructs us about the spirit of the religion which expresses itself in them.

The Basket of Vinaya is the rules of the monastic life, for the use of the monks as well as the nuns From this circumstances the Vinaya is double, Ubhato Each rubric in it appears twice, one for men and one for women The secare five ın number Patimokkha, Mahavagga, Cullavagga, Suttavibhanga, Parivoro. The Patimokkha, intended to be publicly read on recurring stated days of confession, is hardly anything else but a catalogue of sins and the regulations pertaining to them The Mahavagga and the Cullavagga give the detailed code of duties, daily or Each of these prescriptions is introduced by the narrative of the events which gave rise to justify it, giving in fact the raison d'être of each rule. The narrative moves The Mahavagga opens with a piece of biosluggishly graphy of the Buddha The Cullavagga comprises the history of the councils summoned after the death of the Buddha.

The Sattavihlanga is an actual commentary on the Patimollika of which it describes the origin interprets the sense and discusses the application. The Parivara is a kind of Deateronomy recapitulation and catechism at the same time

The Basket of Satras comprises an enormous mass of sermons and instructive ancedotes introduced with the stereotyped formula This have I heard One day the Mas-" It is divided into four sec ter was residing at tions The long collection of Digha Vilava composed of the longest texts thirty four in number the Vedium Collection or Majihima Nikava which embodies texts of medium size one hundred and fifty two in number the Miscellaneous Collection or Samuutta Vikaya a kind of potpourrl in which are thrown collections of all kinds seven thousand five handred and sixty two in number the Namerical Collection or Angultara Villaya in which the texts relating to the numerical rubries are gathered together and classified in ascending order from one to eleven totalling in all niue thousand five hundred fifty soven texts

To these four collections we have to add a fifth admittedly artificial including all that which has not been thrown into any of the previous groups. It is called the Minor Collection or the Khuddaka kikuya. The works nominally attributed to the disciples of the Buddha have oven components to be incorporated without giving offence into the hody of texts reverenced as "the Word of the Buddha." The components of the Minor Collection are.—

Khuddaka patha a small group of texts partly incorporated also in other sections;

Dhammapada a treasure of utterances of the Buddha in verse:

Udana, a series of blief edifying stories each concluding with an apophthegm, Itivuttaka, small sermons introduced by a set of formula (Vuttamhetam);

Sutta Nipata, an adminable body of certainly ancient pieces and already previously grouped into sub-sections,

Vimana Vatthu and Peta Vatthu, nariatives in veise of the acts of the good and evil beings respectively, which have earned for their authors heaven or hell

'Theragatha and Theragatha, poems composed by ascetics and nuns of eminent merit,

Jataka, 547 tales of the anterior existences of the Buddha, Niddesa, commentary on the 33 pieces of the Sutta Nipata, and attributed to Shariputa, Patisambhidamagga, a series of scholastic notes on the path of sacied knowledge,

Apadana, biographies in verse of saints, male and female,

The Buddhavamsa, a history of the succession of the Buddhas,

The Cariya Pitaka, a versified narrative of the previous births of the Buddha

The third Basket is that of the Abhidharma Classed as the equal of the two other Baskets, in reality it occupies an inferior rank It consists of seven books of metaphysics Dhammasamagani, Vibhanga, Kathavatthu, Puggalapannatti Dhatukatha, Yamaka, Patthana.

out reservation to the history of the canon as traced by us so far But let us change the territory and the dogma also gets modified.

In India itself Buddhism has disappeared Only extreme north, Nepal, sees it vegetating, decrepit and moribund. The Gurkhas, the masters of the country, have adopted Brahmanism and the Nevars, subjugated and impoverished, look with indifference at the crimbling riins of centuries. The degenerated convents no longer preserve anything except fragments of the Buddhist literature The ancient canon has vanished. The church has substituted for it the nine dharmas or Laws The Pragna-parameta in 8,000 lines, the Gandavyuha, the Dashabhumishvara the Samadhiraja, the Lankavatara, the Saddharmapundarika "the Lotus of the Good Law," the Tathagata Guhyaka, the Lalitavistara and the Suvarnaprabhasa To these sacred books we have to add others which are certainly ancient, the Mahavastu, the Divyavadana &c. All these texts are written either in Sanskrit or in a language which is a neighbour of Sanskrit but different from Pali. The want of arrangement and the gaps in the Nepali collection, however rich otherwise, has injured it in the opinion of scholars who are seduced by the orderly beauty of the Pali canon. For a long time these texts were represented to us as later recensions of the original Pali, ill-understood by incompetent translators As a radical blemish in Sanskrit Buddhism we are pointed to the absence of the Vinaya in this collection. But the Mahavastu represents this Vinaya, as a part of the Vinaya of the Lokottaravadıs, comprised in the school of the Mahasanghikas Besides the Divyavadana has recently been recognised as composed to a great extent of fragments of the Vinaya of the Mula-An impartial examination has also discoversarvastīvadīs ed in other Nepalese texts independent recensions of texts admitted otherwise in the Pali canon.

Tibet converted to Buddham at the commencement of the seventh century, has an immense sacred literature, falling into two groups the Kanjur originally written Bkagyur and the Tanjur, originally written Bstangyur The Kanjur is the canon in the narrowest sense of the word. It is the word of the Buddha. The Tanjur contains the Fathers of the church, exegetic literature and the technical manuals. The Kanjur is divided into seven sections Dulva, Sher phyn, Phat-chen, Dkon hrtsegs Mdo Myan-das and Rgyud.

The Dulva, that is to say the Vinaya is an enormous compilation in 13 volumes. In fact it is the Vinaya of the School of the Mulasarvastivadis which was drawn up in Sanatrat and of which Nopal has preserved to us long ex tracts. This colosial Vinaya written with art overflows with miscellaneous matter of all kinds. The rules often have the appearance of being mere pretexts for relating long histories, heroic comic fabulous and romantic. The Tibetan Vinaya is a complete canon in itself.

The five succeeding sections are collections of Sutras The Sher phyn in 28 volumes contains all the numerous recensions of the Perfection of Wisdom (Praynaparamita); the most expanded equals in extent a hundred thousand verses The Phal-chen (Avatariata) in 6 volumes, the Dkon brizegs (Rainakuta) in 6 volumes the Myan-das (Nirvana) in two volumes are collections of Sutras grouped by the analogy of the do true of the subject treated. The fifth section, the Mdo (Sutra) in 30 volumes has absorbed all the Sutras which have not found admittance into the three other groups Finally the Regynd (Tantra) in 22 volumes is the magical literature held in such high esteem in Tibet Excepting thirty Sutras incorporated as an appendix to the last volume of the section on Mdo and which are them selves represented as translation from Pali, the texts of the Kanjur have no exact correspondence with the canon of the Pali church The Pali church claims to be the inheritor of the Elders, the Sthaviras called in Pali Theras. Its doctrine is called Theraveda. It only aims at arresting the whice of transmigration and anchoring men at the port of Nirvana. The saved are the Arhats The Tibetan collection like the Nepalese has attached itself to another doctrine which calls itself the Great Vehicle, Mahayana. The Great Vehicle takes hold of the saint in his position of Nirvana, just as the Little Vehicle, Hinayana, terminates his endless birth. It leads him, purified and rendered sublime, to a life of activity to achieve the salvation of the entire universe.

China made docile by the Buddhist apostles, since the first century of the Christian era has not ceased to absorb during more than 10 centuries with a serene impartiality, all the texts imported into it by missionaries, adventurers, pifgrims. They came from India, Ceylon, Burma, from the world of the Irarian and the Turk. The Three Baskets of China have nothing of the canon except the name. All the doctrines have found place in them. From 518 to 1737 the canon of the Buddhist books has been drawn up in China not less than 12 times. Further we have to refer to the collection of Korea which with original texts borrowed from China, was constituted in 1010 and which is transmitted to us in a unique copy preserved in Japan.

The cadre of the Chinese canon indicates its spirit It preserves the traditional division of the Three Baskets But under each rubic it opens two sections Mahayana and Hinayana, the Mahayana being at the head The Basket of the Sutras of the Mahayana reproduces in part some classics of the Tibetan Kanjur Prajna-paramita Ratnakuta, Avatamsaha, Nirvana It adds also the Mahasamnipata and finally opens a special series of Sutras remaining outside of these groups It distributes them into two sections according as they have been translated once or more than once.

The Chinese Basket of the Shtras of the Uinayana essentially consists of four collections or Agamas which are denominated the Long the Medium the Mixed the One and More Under these designations we recognise the counterpart of the four Pali Nikayas. The resemblance is really striking but it does not amount to identity For the most part it is the same texts which are found in the two diverse spheres but the arrangement and the details differ. The development of the same Sutra shows notable divergences. The transcription of proper names leads us to a Sanskrit original or at least a quast Sanskrit. Did there then exist in one of the sacred languages proper a redaction of these four collections, independent of the Pali preserved by an indigenous tradition!

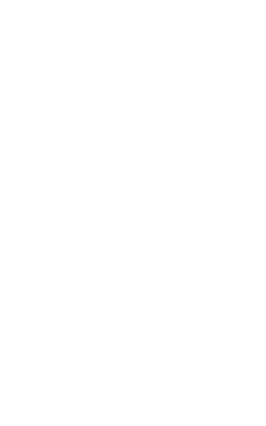

The Basket of Vinava includes in the class of the Maha yana a series of manuals on the discipline of the Bodhisattva. Thus there are as many monastic rules as thore are monas taries and philosophical and moral dissertations removed for from the Vinava and having no connection with it. class of Hinayana contains no less than five Vinayas related more or less intimately to the Pali. Here we come across in its entirety the monastic code of the Dharmacuptas the Mahishasakas the Mahasanghikas the Sarvastivadis and finally that of Mulasarvastivadis of which the Tibetan Kan jur also possesses a version and of which the Nepalese compilation has preserved fragments in the original Sanskrit language Other unconnected texts give us information on the Vinava of still other schools that of the Kashyapivas and the Sammatiyas We have here quite obviously to do in all these Vinayas with independent redactions based on a common tradition connecting the somewhat insipid Pali Vinaya with the almost epic Vinaya of the Mulasarvastivadis

The Basket of Abhidharma in its two sections offers a contrast by its richness to the dry sobriety of the Pali Abhidhamma. Here we meet, in a faithful though somewhat incomplete image, with the active intensity of philosophic throught and controversy in the diverse schools of Buddhism. Among the seven treatises of the canonical Hinayanist Abhidharma at least two remind us by their title of the answering Pali ones, the Prajnapti-shastra and the Dhatukayas, corresponding to the Puggala-pannati and Dhatuktha

In continuation of the Three Baskets the Chinese have admitted one more category analogous to the Tibetan Tanjui. It complises the Fathers of the church, Indian and Chinese

For the last twenty years the inventory of the Buddhist canon has been enriched by an important accession and which continues to enlarge it The researches and the excavations in Central India have brought to light the original texts which were believed to have irrevocably perished and rather unexpected translations. The discovery by Dutreuil de Rhins and by Petrovsky, of the two halves of a Dhammapada written in a very ancient alphabet and composed ın a Sanskııt dialect has opened a series of sensational finds Stein, Ginnwedel, Von Le Coq, Pelliot have one after another brought materials which remain yet for the most part. undeciphered But from now we possess authentic fragments of that Sanskrit Samyukta Agama which the Chinese translations led us to surmise and upto now we have three Sanskut redactions of the Dhammapada which the Pair canon used to be proud alone to have possessed annonneed quite a Buddhistic literature in Turkish transla-

The Palı canon vaunts that it was "sung" for the third time during the reign of Ashoka at the special invitation of the king Ashoka then must have had to employ Pali texts and we possess a rescript of Ashoka to the clergy of Magadha engraved in rock. In it the king selects seven texts the study of which he recommends to the monk and the layman They are Vinaya samukase Aliyavaseni, Andqatabhayani, Munigatha Moneyasute, Upatissapasine, Laghulo-rade musavadam adhigicya Bhagavata Budhena bhasite Of seven citles only the last is found in the Pali collection It is No. 61 in the Marghinianthaya. The Sanskrit canon also has it, since we meet it in the Chinese translation of the corresponding collection, which is No 14 of the Madhvama But the linguistic peculiarities of the words which occur in this simple title suffice to prove that the Sutra in question was not composed in Pali noi in Sanskiit, nor in any of the epigraphical dialects of Ashoka For the titles of the other works we have suggestions of ingenious identifications with other texts in the Pali canon, but none of the proposed identifications is satisfactory Besides, the Buddhistic monuments grouped round the reign of Ashoka, at Bharhut and Sanchi bear in criptions votive or explanatory which are drawn up in dialects none of which is Pali

The guarantee of the three councils is not more serious. The first council is a pious invention which will deceive no one. The second council remains suspended in the air without any historic connection and is supposed to be accounted for by a petty controversy about monkish discipline. Moreover all the Buddhistic schools appropriate the same story, even the Mahasanghikas against whom the second council was convened, if we credit the Pali tradition. The legend does not come to history till the time of Ashoka But the saint again who presides over the third council is entirely unknown outside of this episode. The meagie legend formed around the personality of this strange leader is too much reminiscent of the legend of another sunt named Upagupta who is delineoted in the other eccounts as the spiritual preceptor of king Ashoko. The first positive dote storts with the first century before Christ council which then fixed the sacred texts by reducing them to writing was a local convocation which at the most concerned certoin monasteries of Ceylon But the tradition of the Sarvastlyadi school places in the same period a counell summoned for the same object and of considerable importonce The king honishka, whose Scythlen hordes subjugated Northern India wanted moved either by politics or by devotion to fix the dogmo A conneil held in Kashmir settled the Sanskrit conon and prepared a commentary on the Three Beakets, A writer of genlus, Ashvoghosho lent the resources of a brilliant style to the highestions of the theolo-Whilst the Poli canon remained yet for a long time confined to the island of Ceylon, where its nowerful encodes, the Mohishusukos, held it in check, the Sanskrit conon of the Sarvastivedis propagated itself along the trade routes to Turkistan and China, and the ahlos of Hindu colonists car ried it to Indo-Chine and Indian Archipelogo Other schools, less prosperous but still living cloborated also about the same enoch their cauon in the neo-Sanskrit diolects.-- Pra krit ond Apoblioramsha

To sum up the constitution of the conou is a late event which probably occurred in the various schools at shout the same time o little before the Christian era. Without doubt its causes are to be sought in the political and economical history. The sudden diffusion of writing and specially the materials of writing gave rise to an upheaval comparable to that of the discovery of printing. But if the formation of the cauon is a late event that is not to say that certain at least of its elements are not of an ancent date. No one can yet write an exact history of the canon but we are in a position to figure to ourselves with tolerable approximation the successive stages of its elaboration

The tradition, too complacently accepted, assumes the primitive unity of the church and expresses it by the first council The facts however protest against the supposition The head of an important group arriving just at the close of the session of this council and called upon to recognise the canon fixed by it replies "The law and the discipline have been well chanted Nevertheless, I would preserve them as I have heard them myself and collected them from the mouth of the Master himself "It could not well be otherwise The personal prestige of the Buddha, ambition, and interest had brought into the community of the bietliren men from all classes Ascetics, baibers, sweepers, jostled with princes, meichants, philosophers Reduced by the death of the Master to their original inclinations, each endeavoured with perfect sincerity to suit himself to the doctrine that had been received. Against these menaces of disorder and anarchy the church had but one safeguard Every fortnight the monks, whether travelling or sojourning in a place, have to gather together by groups and hear the recitation of the fundamental rules of the order (Pratimoksha) and confess the transgressions they have committed The institution of each of the rules was connected, or it was alleged that it was connected, with an actual occurrence during the Buddha's The recital of these episodes and the biography life time of the persons concerned gave as many themes to the exercise of imagination and style Add to this, that the life in the monastery, which was constantly developing, was also always giving rise to practical problems, which had to be solved in the name of the Founder of the Order The monasteries, which were the richest and the most frequented, thus came to make collections which were perpetuated and which were growing. The wandering anchorites who were always on the move visiting cloister after cloister maintain ed a constant communication which tended to level too sharp divergences. Reduced by process of pruning to their common elements the Vinayas of all the schools conformed with out effort to a kind of archivpe which dld not represent any primitive Vinayas but which was the average of all the Vinayas.

Outside the monastic prescriptions, the literary invention of the monks was exercised on their recollections real or imaginary and on the biography of the Buddha Carried about by the same medium of intercourse the best of the literary pieces did not take long to assume concrete form bardly altered by accidents of travelling or by local taste or local idiom. In proportion as the number of these biographies multiplied the necessity was felt of classifying them. The Sanskrit and Pali texts have perpetuated the memory of one of these ancient classifications divided into 9 (Pali) or 10 (Sanskrit) rubries: Sutra Geva Vyakarana Uatha Udana Ityukta Jataka Adbhuta dharma Vaipulya (Pali Vedella) and further only in Sanskrit Aidana Avadana Upadesha The classical usago has preserved several of these denominations. The others have no doubt disappeared at the time of the constitution of the canon that their #O had been condemned to perpetual rity The itself has preserved to us one of canon the collections which had preceded it the admirable Suttampata the whole of which is to be found in Pali and evidences of which are not wanting in Sanskilt. But in its turn the Suttanipata is only a group of sub-collections which in Sanskrit preserve their individual existence like the Arthurarga Parayana etc. Several of the texts recommend ed by Ashoka in his edicts of Bhabra seem to belong to this Suttampata As is manufestly evidenced by all the canons poetry, or at least the metrical form, remained at first the indispensable apparel of the literary compositions intended to be transmitted Later on, when the invading prose was found in the art and material for writing a useful auxiliary, it became necessary to create fresh cadres.

APPENDIX IL

A Romance of Literature.

Truth is often stranger than fiction. The following romantic story is entirely based on facts It is common knowledge that some time Prefetory about the fourth Christian century Bnd dhism was introduced from India into China. A number of sacred Hindu books mostly Buddhistic but some of them containing most interesting fragments of Brahmanic literature by way of refutation, were translated into Chinese One of these books is the Suirglankara. It comprises a series of Buddhistic sermons in the guise of anecdotes and stories terminating with a moral inculcated by Buddhism. The ori ginal was in Sanskrit Along with a vast number of Sanskrit books that perished in India this book also was con sidered lost. To the credit of French philological science. the Chinese translation of it which is extent, was identified by the late lamented scholar Edonard Huber who died a pre mature death in French Cochin China about a comple of years ago 'The author of the Sanskrit book of sermons was Ashvaghosha, Being a Buddhist he was more or less com pletely ignored by Brahmanic writers except a few who mentioned him only to combat his compositions. Thanks to the late professor Cowell of Cambridge it is now established that Ashvaghosha was not only a great poet and a master of style, whose brilliant diction popularised Buddhism but was also a model and a pattern, which the better known Kalidasa was not loth to imitate

From Sylvain Lé l in JA. July August, 1909

Only twenty years ago Ashvaghosha figured as no more than a memory in the history of Sanskirt literature. The progress of our studies has suddenly brought him to the front in the premier rank among the masters of Hindu style and thought Hodgson, who discovered in Nepal the remnants of a Sanskrit Buddhist literature; was acquainted since 1829 with the work of Ashvaghosha called the Vanasuci or the Diamond Needle, He prepared an English translation of it with the help of an educated Indian, which he published in 1831. It appeared in the Transactions of the Royal Asiatic Society under the title of Disputation respecting Caste, by a Buddhist Hodgson had vainly searched for information on the age and the country of the All that people knew about him in Nepal was that he was a Mahapandit and that he wrote, besides this little tract, two Buddhist works of greater compass, the Buddhacanta Kavya and the Nandi-Mukhasughosa Avadana, both highly reputed, and other works In 1839, Lancelot Wilkinson, the British Agent at Bhopal, printed the Sanskrit text of the Van asuci enriched at the same time with an amusing addition It was called the Wuna Soochi or Refutation of the Argument upon which the Brahmanic institution of easte is founded by the learned Boodhist! Ashwa Ghosha, also the Tunku, by Soobaji Bapoo, being a reply to the Wuji a Soochi in 1839 Indignant at the attacks by Ashvaghosha against the system of eastes, the Brahman Soobaji Bapoo in the service of Wilkinson could not bring himself to consent to attend to the Buddhist text except on condition of adding a refutation of it Ashvaghosha might well be proud of it The point of the Diamond Needle which he flattered himself he had prepared was by no means dulled by the attack of the offended Brahman. Thus the violent Buddhist polemist who had so frequently and so cruelly humiliated the pride of the Brahman oute more enters the scene after centuries of si lance in the shock of religious controversy.

The outraged Pandit.

Burnouf to whom Hodgson had generously handed over

Buddhist and Brahmanio controversy along with other manuscripts the copy of Vajra suo: and the Buddha-carita indicated in his Introduction to the History of Indian Buddhism the interest of these two works. He proposed himself to revert to the question of the identity of the author later on. Chinese Buddhistic documents analysed by Rémusat had meanwhile taught that one of the patriarchs of the Buddhist Church the twelfth since the death of Shakvamuni had borne the name of Ashvaghosha. With his strong commonsense Burnouf declined to see in one single personage the patriarch and the author on the faith of a resemblance of names. He was inclined rather to consider the two productions as the work of an ascetic or religious writer of more modern times. Next to Burnouf the Vagrasucviad the good fortune to interest another In liament of equal erudition. Albrecht Weber In a memoir submitted to the Berlin Academy in 1859 Weber pointed to a Brahmanic recension of the Vajrague: It was classed in the respectable category of Upanuhads and attributed to the most fortunate and most flerce adversary of the moribund Buddhism of those days the great Shankara Acharya. Weher believed himself justified in affirming the priority of the Brahmanio recension. Ashvaghosha had carried the war into the terri tory chosen by the advocates of the Brahmanic institution of castes. In an appendix to his memoir Weber grouped together valuable information on the patriarch Ashvaghosha. extracted from Tibetan and Chinese sources which had been communicated to him by the learned Schiefner The figure of Ashvaghosha began to appear in more precise lineaments. He now emerges as a doctor, musician, stylist and an ingenious controvertialist Above all Ashvaghosha seemed to range himself among the entourage of another no less enigmatical celebrity, the great king Kanishka, the barbarous ruler who subjugated India about the beginning of the Christian era and who so profoundly affected the historic destines of the country

In 1860 an anonymous German translation, which was in reality made by Benfey, rendered accessible to Indianists the admirable work of Chinese aid. the Russian scholar Wassilieff on Buddhism As familiar with the doctrines, as with the languages of China and Tibet, Wassilieff was able to write vigorously on the influence of Ashvaghosha on Buddhist philosophy In 1869 the History of Buddhism in India by the Tibetan Pandit Taranath, translated from the Tibetan by Schiefner, enriched the biography of Ashvaghosha with details which were, however, of a legendary character But it confirmed the literary importance of the eelebrated doctor The-Tibetan tradition, faithful heir to the Hindu tradition, recognised in Ashvaghosha an exceptional personage endowed with such varied gifts that the European critic preferred to divide him into several persons bearing the same name It is to the English scholar Beal that belongs the honour of resuscitating the literary glory of Ashvaghosha Beal himself has suffered real injustice Pioneer in bringing to light the immense collection which is incollectly called the Chinese Tripitaka, he succeeded in extracting from it a mass of facts, documents, abstracts, and legends, by which have profited the science of archæology, history and Indian literature and the whole of which has not been to this day airanged sufficiently systematically to attract the attention it deserves Chinese experts have ignored the labours of Beal because he lahoused with reference to Indian antiquities. The Indianista on the other hand have looked upon him with suspicion be cause he looked for anthentiention at the hands of Sinologists alone People have pointed out his mistakes and blunders. But those only who have tackled Buddhist Chinese know the difficulties which the best of schulars have to encounter They were rather amazed let at he said to lical a honour to see that without the knowledge of banskrit and with ont the help of another Indianist he had a mmitted so few thore all they admire the surety of his grasp which directed his choice in the Chinese chaos, He was only offierally called upon to classify the collection of Chinese Bud dhism in the India Office and he was struck in the interest of the book Sutralankara and its author Ashyachosha singled out its merits and even tran lated several of its stories in a brief series of lectures delivered at the London University in 1840 A little leter he published in the Sacred Books of the Fast (volume XIX) a translation from the Chinese version of the Sonskrit Buddha carifa Burnonf at the very beginning of the studies which he founded was mistaken as regards the value of the Sanskrit original But as soon as new theories on the development of Sanskrit literature and the formation of the Buddhist legends were elaborated the culc of Ashvachosha on the life of the Buddha did not take long in attracting attention. Fresh indexes came in a little later, to corroborate the attribution of the work to the great Ashvaghosha which had remained so doubtful in Burnouf's judgment

A Japanese scholar whom Sylvain Lévi considers it an honour to count among his pupils Rayan on Fujishima translated in the Journal teatique 1888 two chapters dealing with hymns end the stete of Buddhism in Indie from the memoir of I tsing The Chinese pilgrim I tsing had passed twenty-five years in western countries from 671 to 695, passionately occupied in study, especially the religious discipline of the school of Buddhism to which he belonged, viz, the Mula-Sarvastivadis His testimony deserves our confidence I-tsing knows only one Ashvaghosha, whom he classes, as does also Hiuen-tsiang, another renowed Chinese traveller, among the Suns of the World alone with Nagarjuna and Deva This Ashvaghosha is the author of "numerous hymns, the Sutralankara, and of the poem on the life of the Buddha". I-tsing even gives a summarised analysis of this poem and records that it is studied everywhere in the Five Indias as well as in the Southern Seas (Indo-Asia), because to read Ashvaghosha is to be at once educated, instructed and delighted Now how was a Western scholar to resist such a tempting promise? Here was a unique opportunity for research, Sylvain Lévi knew it was the eve of a momentous literary discovery

The National Library of Pairs possesses a manuscript of the Buddha-carita Sylvain Lévi copied it and prepared an able edition and translation of it, publishing as a specimen the first canto in the Journal Asiatique Subsequently he learned that an English scholar of repute, Cowell, professor at the University of Cambridge, had commenced to print in the Anecdota Oxomensia a complete edition of the same text With rare chivalry Sylvain Lévi effaced himself before the English scholar. The entire text appeared in England in 1893, soon followed by an English translation. Cowell familiar alike with the classics of India had no hesitation in recognising in Ashvaghosha a precursor and even a model of Kahdasa. He suggested striking similarities to prove that the Ennius of India as he called him had more than once lent his treasures to Virgil. He further established that the authentic work of Ashvaghosha stopped with the fourteenth canto and that a later compilator has clumnly fabricated the last three songs with a view to giving a kind of integrity to the mutilated poem. Like the Vojraruci the Buddha-carito hecamo soon the object of close study on the part of the most eminent Indianists, Bühler kielhern Boht lingk Leumann, Lilders who exercised their ingenuity on the restoration of the corrupted text

The fundamental problem of Hindu chronology led the great French scholar Sylvain Lévi a little In search of later to the Suiralonkara. In his quest of the treasure doorments on the Indo-Seythian king Kanishka he came upon in the Chinese version two stories which extelled the orthodoxy and the piety of this great king (Journal Asiatione 1896-97) Mastered by the beauty of the work in the Chinese rendering Lavi did not despair to recover the original Sanskrit in Nepal and he act out on a long and costly voyage from Paris in search of this lost treasure of India His great efforts, however ended only in the discovery in the Himalayan Valley of another work bearing the same name of a much later date and of an altogether different nature Next the indefatigable scholar proceeded to Japan. Here he found no Suiralankara in Sans krit but was surprised to see a fresh work of Ashvaghosha which was till then unknown in Europe namely the Mahayana Shraddhotpada widely read in the schools and monasteries of Japan where it passed for the historic basis of the doctrme of the Great Vehicle Under the guidance of emi nent Buddhist priests of Japan, Sylvain Levi studied it comparing with the two Chinese versions and he prepared a French translation of the whole which he brought to Europe There he had no opportunity of printing it yet. Meanwhile a Japanese scholar Teitara Suzuki, of the Seminary of Kyoto. drawn to America by the movement of neo-Buddhism, published in 1900 at Chicago, under the patronage of Dr. Paul Karus, a faithful translation of this Japanese rendering of the Shraddhotpada. In this tract the polemist of the Vajrasuci, the story-teller of the Sutralankara, and the poet of the Buddhq-carita, reveals himself to us in a fresh capacity. Ashvaghosha here is a profound metaphysician, the bold originator of a doctrine called into being for the regeneration of Buddhism.

Such a great man could not possibly traverse the stage of this world without leaving in the memory of man unforgettable traces. Shorn of fantastic ornamentation and reduced to its essential lineaments the traditional biography of Ashvaghosha may be summed up thus Ashvaghosha appeared a hundred years after the Nu vana of the Buddha according to one Life of Ashavaghosha. Chinese authority, three hundred years after it, according to another, and five or six hundred years after it, according to two other Chinese sources One source makes it as late as eight hundred even His birthplace seems to have been Gangetic India, the ancient district of Saketa or Ayodhya in the Kingdom of Shravasti According to the colophon to the Tibetan veision of the Buddha-carita, his birthplace was Pataliputra of Benares As regards his lineage he was born in a Brahman family, acquiring all the specific education of his caste as well as instruction in general literary arts. According to Hiuentsiang his knowledge comprised all that was known musician he invented melodies which were so moving, that they had to be proscribed by the government of the day As a dialectician he triumphed over all his adversaries A zealous devotee of the Brahmanic gods, especially Maheshvara, he was converted to Buddhism by Parshva who especially came down from Northern India to win him over to the Buddhist faith. According to others it was Purna, otherwise known as Punyovashas A third source oscribes the honour of his conversion to Arradeva Now his fame extended to the limits of India. The King Kanishka pushed his arms as far as Saketa to carry away with him the matchless doctor Ashvaghosha thus became his spiritual adviser and the physician of his soul. If we follow the later version, he refused to repair to the court of the Indo-Seythian himself sending him one of his disciples instead.

The literary remains of Ashvaghesha ore preserved partly in original Sanskrit partly in Chinese and northy in Tibetan translation. In Sanakrat we have Buddha-carata which was translated into Chinese between 414 and 421 hr Dharmarakaha Wo have also the Vairasuc; which was translated into Chinese between 973 and 981 hy Fa-hien. In passing the Chinese translation describes the Varrasuci as a work of Dharmskirti. The ascription is not improbable. Dharms kirti like Ashvaghosha, had received first his Brahmanic education. The Tibeton translation has a special interest for Indians in that it has preserved the memory of the important religious controversy against Shankaracharyo. The Upanishad placed under the name of Shankara marks a phase in this religious struggle. It is possible that Dhar makirti published o new edition revised and completed, of the treatise originally composed by Ashvaghosha. The prohlem is highly important for the literary history of India. hecause Vagrasuce cites passages from Manu and the Mahabharata We can imagine the important consequences of discovering if we can the authentio text of Ashvaghosha in the original Sanskrit.

The works of Asivaghosha which remain to us both in Chinese and Tibetan translations are the Gurupancashatuka the Dashakushala reverence for Sanskrit texts ingly enrious Ghantstotra which owing most probably to its secret character was not translated but phonetically transcribed in Chinese character was not translated but phonetically transcribed in Chinese charactery.

ters. The complete Tibetan title of the Gurupancashatika indieates the Tantile chalacter of this work which is evident from its introductory stanzas Besides, the whole work is replete with reference to the mystical symbols and doctimes of Tantra, the Vana Mandala, and Abhisheka Chinese version is presented to us as a simple small compilation by the Bodhisattva Ashvaghosha In fact, in the age of Hiuen-tsiang the reputation of Ashvaghosha as a magician was established The Tibetan Tanjui in addition to this eontains two tracts which obviously form two halves of a single work, the Sanskiit title of which must have been Samvatibodnicittabhavai nandpadeshasamyi aha and the Shokavınodanaashtakshanakata The Chinese have preserved several other works of Ashvaghósha translated by Para-Among these the Mahayanashraddhortadashastra, translated first by Paramartha in 553 and then again by Shikshanada between 695 and 700, deserves mention Finally we have in Chinese the celebrated Sutralankarashastra translated from Sanskrit by Kumaraziva about 405 Besides these we have other productions of Ashvaghosha of minor import and doubtful authenticity. Such are the hymns in 150 verses called Shatapancashatika-Namastotia, which is attributed by the Tibetan collection of Tanjui to Ashvaghosha, but which Yi-tsing, the author of the Chinese translation, expressly ascribes to Matriceta In his memoirs Yi-tsing mentions Ashvaghosha and Matriceta as two entirely different personages The celebrated hymn was translated by him from Sanskrit into Chinese at Nalanda, the centie of Buddhistic learning The Nandimukhashvaghosha Avadana, imputed by Hodgson to the poet Ashvaghosha, has nothing in common with him, except the name of one of the personages, a devotee of the goddess Vasundhara,

(

The veriety of the classes of literature cultivated hy Ashvaghosha is perfectly in keeping with the tradition which makes of this anthor Was he a king? a contemporary of the king Kanishke As regards the question of the relation between the times of Ashvachosha and Kanishka It is not without interest to show that the executions at Sarnath have brought to light two documents assued by a king Ashvaghasha. One of these is engraved just on the pullar which hears the edict of Ashoka and is placed immediately after the edict. The other is a simple fragment of a stele. Vogel who has published the two inscriptions unlers from the paleographic and linguistic characters that this Ashvarhosha Raja is a contemporary of Huyishka who succeeded hamishka We cannot think of an identity but the name was current in the Indo Seythian period and the form of the name furnishes a chronological index too often neglected in India Cunningham found at Kosam the site of the ancient Kaushamhl a coin of Ashya ghosha, and Vincent Smith has described another in the collection of the Asiatic Society of Bengel on the reverse of which the name of the king is inscribed in the ancient Brah mi characters, and on the obverse occurs the bull

Ashvaghosha therefore must have appeared at one of those critical periods when there occur political economical and social transformation and upheaval in the ideas cur rently received and men receive new aspirations new formaties and new tests. The invasion of Alexander confined to the basin of the Indus, sufficed to create by a counter-stroke an imperial India under the secretor of Mauryas on the rums of the ancient principalities. The invasion of the Sevthian hordes, the intrusion of Chinese Greek and Parthian edgen turers carried to the heart of Brahmanic India unknown cults rites and usages. Buddhism operated upon by contrary forces must have been cleaved into two halves. One section, faithful to the ideal, common to Hindu asceticism, took refuge in the pursuit of personal salvation. The other attracted by the promise of an apostolate, which might extend to the limits of the world, desire an open, active, instructed, and so to say, secular church The title itself of the Sutralankara of Ashvaghosha sounds as a programme, and the programme of a revolution Would not the old patriarchs of the past have shuddered at the idea of embellishing a Sutra, of remodelling the work of the Master who "has well said all that he has said"? Ashoka proclaims and perpetuates this belief in the perfection of the Buddha's speech in the Bhabra edict Centuries after Ashvaghosha, Asanga had still more an excuse to adopt the bold expression in his Mahayana Sutralankara and in his Yogacaryabhumi-shastra There is no question here of equivocation Alankara denotes the flowers of thetotic which India has cultivated with scientific thoroughness and which it has catalogued with the passion of an amateur devoted to the tulips The Sutralankara is the Sutras or Buddhist doctimal discourses placed in a literary form It is, as we should say, the Bible for the ordinary people In this attempt, which was bound to have scandalized the simple souls of the monks, Ashvaghosha acquired such reputation that the church ended by soliciting his assistance. The biography of Vasubandhu reports that the president of the council convoked by Kanishka sent envoys to find out Ashvaghosha, so that he might embellish the Vibhasha or commentary on Buddhist Gospel submitted to the deliberations of the Holy Synod At that time Ashvaghosha was living in Kashmii and when the import of the principles of the commentary was fixed he turned it section by section into literary shape. The composition was completed at the end of twelve years The literary ments of the Sutralanhara justify the flattering encomium. They suffice to guarantee the authenticity of the work. Through two successive translations into two such diverse languages as Chinese and French so far removed from the Hindu genus the Sutralonkaru preserves its imperishable qualities the norrativo art the vigorous imagination the lyrical power and the supple ness of style. To describe "Lahvaghesha in worthy terms we have only to horrow the beautiful words which he lends to a Bhikshu in the presence of the emperor Ashoka:

When I speek of the good nets of the Buddha the crowd listen to me with jor. Their faces been with happiness. Exalting the virtues of the Buddha I have destroyed the heretics. In the front of all men I have expounded the true poth the joy universal. As in the full antiumnal moon all delight in me. To exait the virtues of the Buddha all the centuries are not sufficient. But I will not stop doing it till my tongue turns dry. For the art of speaking well is my father and I regard elequence as my mother.

It was a daugerous undertaking. The literature of instruction horders on the nauscating and His method Ashvaghosha wanted to instruct at all and themes costs. He did not attempt either to sur prise the conscience or to disguise the lesson. This is his process. At first he proposes a moral theme He illustrates it by a story If necessory he adds another moral and finolly the conclusion. The truths which he in culentes run in a narrow circle. They relate to the power of previous acts or Larma the importance of charity the res neet for observances the vanity of the world the errors of heresies the perfection of the Buddha and the sonetity of the But Ashvaghosha was not afraid of rehearsing the same themes. Suro of his art and sustained by an ordent faith he renewed himself without effort. Take only the stanzas on death which ore strewn about in profusion over the book. It is doubtful whether a Tertullian or a Bossuet could have spoken with greater grandeur or with a more noble realism If it is the moral which above all counts for Ashvaghosha, he is too much of an artist to sacrifice the narrative, He chooses his subjects in every direction. ti eats of all the strata of tradition and every class of society. Sometimes the Buddha himself is a hero of his story Sometimes it is one of his disciples, or a simple monk, or an outcast chandala, or a courtesan, or a servant, or a robber, or an emperor How can one read without emotion the conversion of Niti, the scavenger, in the 43rd story? He sees the Buddha coming into a street in the town of Shravasti, and seized with shame at the sight of his superhuman majesty, flies from street to street and everywhere the Buddha appears before him collected and serene! At last he is caught in a blind alley Here the Buddha calls him by his name Could the Buddha call by his name a vile creature like himself? Could it not be that there was another person of the same name with himself? Perhaps the Buddha called the other one. His doubts are set at rest by the Master himself calling upon him to enter religious life, which he does, and the scene ends with the powerful king Prasenajit prostrating himself, at the feet of the Buddha and the lowly sweeper, the new convert to Buddhism Equally powerful diamatic effect is produced by the 20th story Frightened and menaced by the success of a Buddhist preacher who captivated crowds and who preached against the joys of the world, "a daughter of Joy" goes with a sumptuous retinue to exercise her charms upon an assembly that had gathered together to hear an exposition of the Law At her sight the attention of the listeners re-They waver The preacher, the master of the law, espies the courtesan No sooner does his glance fall on her, than the skin and the flesh of the woman drop from her There remain only white bones and discovered intestines. Disgust seizes hold of the spectators The skeleton joins its ghastly hands to implore pardon. The lesson goes home to the heart of the sudlence, and the fallen waman is converted. On another occasion in the 40th story a robber finishes by blessing the Law He was passing by the door of a Bhikshu. He knocks of the door The Bhilishu does not open it. Pass thy hand he shouts to him through this small hole and I will give von something The robber puts his unsuspect ing hand through. The Blukshn cotches hold of it and ties it to a post takes a stick and starts vigorously belahouring the thief With the first blow he repeats the first Buddhist formula refuge in the Buddho The robber hastens to repeat the formula similarly refuge in the Law ond refuge in the community. Then the thief thinks within himself How mony farmules of refuge ore there with this holy man! If there are many I shall not be oble to see any more this India Assuredly it will mean the end of my life ' When the Bhikshu is satisfied that the transgressor has repented he initiates him. The perfect One the sublime One is really omniscient. If he had taught four fermulas of Refuce to his disciples that would have dene for me. But the Buddha probably foresaw my case and it was to provent my death that he has taught his desciples three refuges and not four ' Wa see that the ardonr of faith did not exclude hu meur from the mennatery of the Buddhist,

We have upto now spoken only of the morits of the contents of the translated work of Ashva Authorship ghosha. A fortunate accident enables us to oppreciate at least to some extent the shope of the Sanskrit original. Naw wa have a large collection of Buddhist tales preserved in Sanskrit. It was discovered in Nepal It is called the Divyavadana Huber has been oble to trace the origins of three at the stories in our Chinese translation of the Sutralankara to this Sanskrit Divyavadana. All the three stories have for their hero either Ashoka or his spiritual adviser Upagupta They have found admittance into the Divyavadana through the Ashokavadana which embodied all the stories of the Ashoka cycle These fragments in the original Sanskrit sufficiently establish that "the style and the versification of the Sutralankara are not unworthy of the author who was the first to compose a Mahakavya" Our investigations might proceed further in this direction, if it was necessary to confirm the authorship of the Sutralankara. But Ashvaghosha has taken the care to put his signature, so to say, to his handswork after the Hindu fashion The Sutralankara twice cites the Buddha-carita In the 43rd story Ashvaghosha represents the Buddha in one of his begging rounds in Shra-Here Ashvaghosha cannot resist the temptation of recalling a similar scene touching the entrance of the Buddha into Rajagriha, "as has been related in the Buddhacarita'' The descriptions in the story and in the Buddhacarita correspond in detail

In the forty-seventh story, the subject of which is the conversion of Upali, Ashvaghosha again begins by recalling without apparent leason, the conversion of the three Kashyapas and their companions, about a thousand people, who followed the Buddha to Kapilavastu "as has been related at length in the Buddhacarita". The reference has no justification except as a pretext to bring in the quotation For the Buddhacarita relates in fact at length the conversion of the Kashyapas and the arrival of the Master with a following of one thousand men at his natal city. A third time the author follows his own Infe of the Buddha, which we know in the original Sanskiit as the Buddhacarita and which in the Chinese is called Fo-pen-hing. The occasion was the lamentation of Sudatta when the Buddha is about to leave Shravast. The Chinese version of the Buddhacarsta is the only one which could be used with reference to this part of the Buddha's career But it has nothing in connection with this episode. It is to be noted here that the translator of the Chinese rendering Kumarajia in referring to the Life of the Buddha here does not use the title Po-pen hing which he had employed in the two other references we mentioned above Evidently he has probably in mind another Sanskrit work dealing with the life of the Buddha which also was translated into Chinese.

With Ashvaghosha begins the list of the literary writers of India. The only names of authors which to our knowledge preceded him are connected with technical works. And now of them permits of being assigned even an approximately correct date. Hence we can measure the importance of his work, the Sutralankara as the first chronological landmark along with the sister compilation of the Buddhacarsta in the nebulous choos of the literary history of India. The least reliable data which we can extract from them are of inestim able value. Some of the events and facts which we can thus establish with certainty are the following

The geographical horizon of the Sutralankara embraces the whole of India since it stretches as far as Ceylon, but it is the north western India which alone is placed in full light. In the Gangetic province the author mentions Patalliputra and Mathura. But in the basin of the India he mentions Shakala Takshashila Avanti Ashmaka Gandhara and Pushkalavati Two other names are hard to restore to their original shapes from the Chinese translation. The country of Ki pin, which has so often embarrassed Indologists because it answers at once to Kashmir and to the country of Kapisha, permits of being localised in our hook with some chance of certainty For in the seventy-sixth story the Vihara or the monastery of Revata is situated in this territory. Now the Sanskrit text of the Mahapramaparamita Shastra which passes for a compilation of the patriarch Nagarjuna, and which was translated from Sanskrit into Chinese between 402 and 405 by Kumarajiva, gives the following description of this monastery.

"The Buddha Shakyamuni resided in Jambudvipa. He was born in the country Kippi-lo He travelled much about the six great cities of eastern India Once upon a time, he started from here for southern India He lived in the house of the house-holder Kotikarna who received his homage. Once he proceeded for a short time to northern India to the country of the Yuetche to subjugate the King Apalala and finally he went to the west of the Yuetche to conquer the Rakshası The Buddha here passed the night in a cave, and to this day the shadow of the Buddha is preserved here If you enter into it to have a look you see nothing When you come out of the hole and are at a distance from it you see brilliant signs, as if the Buddha himself were there He proceeded wishing to visit the King of Ki-pin on the mount of the Rishi Revata He lived there for a time He mastered the Rishi Said the Rishi 'I am happy at your arrival. I wish that the Buddha may give me a hair and nail of his in order to raise a stupa over it for worshipping ' These have been preserved to this day "

The Chinese author here adds a note to the effect that at the foot of the mountain is situated the monastery and reproduces what he calls the exact pronunciation

١

From-the accounts of the Chinese pilgrims who visited India we learn of the miracles performed by the Buddha in the countries beyond the Indus These are recorded in the Vinaya or the disciplinary code of the Mula Sarayastivadis in the section devoted to medicinal herbs. The Divyaradana, one of the important San Litt Huddhist texts twice refers to them in the chisodes belonging to the cycle of Ashoka first in the clossic story of Lam impradana and secondly in th still more celebrated account which has much more of his tory than legend of Prince kunala. In Chineso we have several versions and they reproduce fastifully the catalogue of the miraculous conversions. One of these which dates from 281-306 fixes also the locality of the occurrence:

The Bhagavat enhingated and converted the Naga Apalala in Udvana the head of the Brahmacharis in hipin; Chandala in hien to-wei (which we are unable to trace to the Sanskrit original) and Gopala in Gandhara ' In fact we know from the accounts of the Chinese Voyagers that the Dragon Analala lived near the source of the Svat and that the cavern of the shadow of the Buddha which was a witness to the victory of the Buddha over Gonala was in the neighbourhood of Nagarahara near modern Jalalahad to the west of the confinence of the Syat and the Kahnland The third stage therefore has to be looked for in the continnation of the some direction that is in the country of Kanisha According to Iliuen tsiang by the side of the shadow cavern there was a stupy enclosing the hair and nails of the Tatathogata a frequent appellation of the Buddha. The Lunalayadona mentions mount Revataka alongsule of Mahayana which is skirted by the Indus on its right hank below Attok.

The unidentified kingdom of Slubo to the scene of Story 79 takes us to the same region. It was there that according to the narrative of the traveller habiten. The Shill purchosed a dove at the price of his own flesh. The touching occurrence is reconnted at length in the 6th Story and we know by the rescarches of Sir Aurel Stein that thus is the country which corresponds to the modern Bunner. A further addition to our knowledge of ancient geography is furnished by Story 45. The Chinese Han is undoubtedly the Sanskrit China which takes us to the north of the Himalayas, the tracts subject to Chinese influences. Similarly the Ta-tsin of Story 90 continues the geographical horizon of ancient India towards Hellenic Asia, Ta-tsin being the translation of the Sanskrit Yavana of the Indians. Is Ashvaghosha was a native of Central India there is no doubt that at the time when he composed his Sutralankara he was living on the confines of North Western India.

The personages of the Sutralankara are most frequently anonymous They are Brahmans, ascetics, The personæ monks, merchants, painters, washermen, iron-smiths and so on, giving a of the Story clue to the inner life of the great Indian Book. public, as it lived and died in those days, about whom we hear so little in the voluminous religious books of the Brahmans Sometimes in our collection of sermons the Buddha and his disciples are brought on the scene Some of the heroes are easily identifiable as historical personages Ashoka, the great Maurya emperor, is the hero of He is referred to in a fourth 'His spiritual three tales adviser Upagupta, one of the patriarchs of Buddhism, is the hero of another story Both the ruler and his guide are placed definitely a hundred years after the Buddha Upagupta became a monk "a hundred years after the disappearance of the Buddha "Elsewhere we are told that a master of the Law, who had lived in the time of Buddha Kashyapa, reappeared "a hundred years after the Parini vana of the Buddha Shakyamuni under the leigh of King Ashoka "This interval of one century we find to be also fixed by a prophecy occurring in the Vinaya or the disciplinary code of the Mula Sarvastivada in which we are told that Ashoka must take birth a hundied years after the Parinii vana, Kanlahka himself is the hero of two of the stories (14 and 31) In these he plays an instructive and honourable part, In the first be eddresses a lofty lesson of charity to his minister Devadharma. In the second deceived by his picty he salutes what he considers to be a stupe of the Buddha but in reality pays homego to a Jain one which immediately breaks to pieces because it did not deserve the bomage of a king " The first enlande takes place when Kanishka proceeds to the city which bears his name the city of Kansahkanura founded by the Indo-Scythian king in Kachmir To this day it bears the name in a scarcely altered form Kanapore. It is situated to the south west of Lake Woollar in the Baramula defile (Stein, Raja Tarangini vol. II p 22) The presence of Kanishka in the Sutralankara does not seem to contradict the unanimous tradition which attaches Ashvaghosha to the court of Kanishka It is permissible to recognise in these two stories a delicate homage which is by no means flattery addressed by the Buddhist doctor to the protector of his Story 15 is founded on the traditional avance of church. King Nanda, who ruled over Gangetic India at the time of the invasion of Alexander and who preceded the Maurya dynasty. He had for his minister Vararuci whom we find in the introduction to the Brikatkatha. It is not without in interest for literary lustory to see the tradition firing the epoch of Ashvachosha. Vararuel is in fact one of the great names of the literary tradition of India. He is the reputed author of a number of books of diverse classes, but espec ially of a grammar of the Prakrit languages called Prakrita-The Bribatkatha identifies him with Katvayana and mixes up in his adventures two other personages con nected with ancient Hindu grammar Vyadi and Panini The Tibetan Tanjur preserves a collection of a hundred stangas called the Shatagatha under the name of Vararuci. Finally Sylvain Lévi has found in the Mahayanavatarashastra, which was translated into Chinese between 397 and 439, several stanzas of a Buddhacarıta as composed by the Bhikshu Vaia-By the way, these stanzas refer to a transcendent Mahayana One of them tells us that all the Shakyas, including not only disciples like Ananda and Animiddha, but the inveterate enemy of the Buddha, Devadatta, are everyone of them Bodhisattvas Another stanza speaks of the two kinds of avidya or ignorance, the one mundane and the other supermundane Our anthologies quote a dozen of the stanzas as the work of Vararuci, and the Mahabhashya mentions a poem by Vararuci, Vararucha Kavya (Panini 4, 3, 101) It is most significant to find in this story of the Sutralanhara, that Vararuci addresses these stanzas to the King Nanda, which have a great resemblance to the style of Ashvaghosha, with his favourite regular refrain. The princes nhentioned in our are Induvarma and story-book which remain unidentified Suryavaima of Avanti, with their minister's Baudhayanamitra, Sudravaima of Shakala, Vallabha of Mathura, and a prince whose name cannot be successfully retraced from the Chinese to the original Sanskrit, a prince who belonged to Takshashila, which the Greeks called Taxila, the spot marked by to-day's village of Sarai-kala, one hour's journey from Rawalpındı, which has yielded to the archæ logical excavators magnificent specimens of Græco-Buddhistic art

The social condition of India, as represented in the Sutralankara, had attained a high standThe grade of aird of civilisation. Their examples was intense civilisation. Intellectual activity throughout the country. The great Brahmanic epics were already known. Ashvaghosha's other work the Buddhacarita, is also familiar with both the Ramayana and the Mahabharata. There are references to the Kings Nahusha, Yayati, Sagara, Dilipa. The edifying importance of this Brahmanic.

beens seems to be taken as admitted A simple headman of an Indian village in what are Central Provinces listens to the recital of the Mahabharata and the Ramayana delivered by the Brahmans Attracted by their promise which guarantees the heaven to the brave who die in the battle as well as to the pions men who harn themselves he prepares at once to mount a burning pile of wood. Fortunately for him a Bud dhist Bhilishn turns up and demonstrates to him the futility of the promise of the Brahmans and eventually succeeds in converting him to Buddhism. The philosophical dectrines of the Samkhyo and the Vaisheshika schools have already been constituted in their monuols. Ashvachosha combats these Brahmanicol dogmos with incisive vigour He attocks the gods of the Brahmans and exposes their weoknesses with remorseless vicour. He shows them up as violent and cruel, Their power is only due to their good karma. The tradition that Ashvaghosha himself was a worshipper of Mahesha and latteris turned a Buddhist is derived probably from the first story in the collection in which an adherent of the sect of Maliesha renounces it for Buddhism. Among the religi ous sects of non Buddbistic persuasion are the Nirgranthus or Jaines the adversaries whom Ashvaghesha detests with greater virulence then Brahmans. In one story the King hanishka is made to be enraged against the Jaina rivals of the Buddhists From the inscriptions at Mathura we learn that the Jainas were fleurishing under the Indo-Seythian kings The number of the sects which were considered here tic attests the religious activities of the times. Ashvaghosha enumerates quite u number of them. The ernate diction which Ashvaghosho was the first to venture to apply to the otherwise insipid sutras of the Buddhists, no doubt flourished amongst the non Buddhistic ereeds. In one place the king Ashoka is made to say: 'The hereties are able expenents of a literary adernment and rhetoric The Brahmans still leve to reserve the monopoly of grammar and writing, but already "the other castes also possess the science" Literature seems to have entered into daily life "The teaching of the Buddha has spread through writing over the world" It is most remarkable, that the civilisation of India could boast of the use of palimpsests. One of the most charming stories mentions them. Up to now we had no other indication from any source whatever, that the Hindus, like the Greeks, used this material for writing. This is an indication, which will have to be reckoned with in our study of ancient manuscripts of India.

The arts were fully flourishing at the period Comedians are frequently mentioned. In one story a The Arts. pathetic instance of a painter's piety is afforded He belonged to Pushkalavatı and had gone on business to the country of Ashmaka, where he was decorating a monastery In one story we meet with an inebriated aitist who, on coming to his senses, destroys the lamentable production of his hour of drunkenness and proceeds to produce some excellent work. In one place the king Shibi, who had disfigured and mutilated himself with his own hands to offer the members of his own body in charity, is compared to a beautiful statue disfigured by rain In another place we have an exhaustive catalogue of the number of sciences, which an accomplished heir to the thione was expected to possess The list differs from the sixty-four classical arts mentioned in another place. It is of particular interest and may be reproduced in full

"The Veda, archery, medicine, sacrifices, astronomy, grammar, the origin of writing, the performance of sacrifices eloquence, thetoric, the art of love, interest, purity of families, the ten names, computation, chess, dice, the study of origins, music and song, the art of playing on the conch, dancing and laughter the art of the prestidicitarian educa tion, the making of garlands of flowers massage the science of precious stones and valuable materials for clothing silk scaling wearing wax with strategy sewing sculpture painting literature arrangement of garlands interpretation of dreams interpretation of the flight of birds horoscopes of boxs and cirls the training of elephants the art of playing on the tambourine, the rules of battle prray the domesticat ing of horses the carrying of lance immplier running and fording n river "

Whatever the interest of the Sutralantara in connection Vindication of a neglected School ment that it is of capital importance. The study of Buddhom is even to this day un consciously retinted by the rivalry of two traditions that of the north and of the south the one founded on Sanskeit quasi-Sanskeit, Chinese and Tibetan texts the other based on the Pah texts. The genins of Burnoul knew how to maintain an conflibrium between the two competitors. Since his days all monner of factors have conspired to di turb the equipoise of worths resistance I all orthodoxy has usurned the science of Buddhism, Coylon, the cradle of I all has been regarded as the authorito heir to the Master e doctrino disfigured by the rival tradition. The worl of Ashvaghesha brings forward fresh information for a process of revision of our judgment. Expressly inspired by the original sutras nonrished by the words of the Buddha which he quotes on every page he places before as in full light the condition of the Buddhist canon at the court of the barbaran prince under whose auspices the text of the northern capon is alleged to have been settled about the beginning of the Christian era. It is therefore proper that we should analyse one by one the stories in this collection of sermons for the purposes of our enquiry with its title it is as a linddhistic does

With the invocation, with which according to the Buddhistic usage he opens his Sutralankara, Preserved in Ashvaghosha makes his profession of faith.

China though Like all the Buddhists, in the first place he lost in India.

adores the Three Jewels, viz, the Buddha, the Law and the Community addresses his homage to the assembly of the Sa-po-che-po, which is the transcription in Chinese symbols of the Hindu term Sarvastivadi, which means "those who believe in the existence of everything" This transcription differs somewhat from the more usual and more correct one have to remember that the monk who translated the original Šanskrit into the Chinese, Kumarajiva, was an inhabitant of Karashai, in Chinese Turkestan, and that he had never been to India so that his Sanskiit pronunciation was natuially not of the best Sylvain Lévi carefully explains the piocess by which the Indian, Central Asian and Chinese Buddhists evolved a system of transliteration of Hindu names in the terms of the Chinese symbols The Sarvastivadi school was one of the most prosperous in the world of Buddhism It was powerful throughout India, but the Chinese pilgrims found it equally flourishing in Central Asia and in the Indian Archipelago The Vinaya, or the disciplinary code of this school, which is generally known as the Vinaya of the Ten Recitations, was translated into Chinese as early as 404. The translator was just our Kumarajiva who had a collaborator in Punyatara We may note in passing, that another branch of the same school, which was called the primæval Sarvastivadis, Arya-mula-Sarvastivadis, possessed an Vinaya in Sanskiit, which was translated into Chinese under the direction of the famous I-tsing between 703 and 710 and a century later into Tibetan It is a noteworthy coincidence in the history of Buddhistic researches, that Edouard Huber and Sylvain Lévi, both French scholars, at one and the same time, working independently, discovered fra gments of this Vinaya in their original form in the Sanskrit Divisavadana.

Ashvagbosha mentions some of his illustrious pre decessors and pays bomage to them along His renowned with the Servestivadi samaha He invokes the Bhikshus kon na and Parshava, tho predecessors masters of the sastras Mi tche " Svivsin Lévi corrects this translation of Huher's and brings to light some of the renowned among Ashvaghosha's predecessors The Chinese symbols Fon na might represent the Sanskrit Purns the fuller transcription of which in Chinese is Fou louns It frequently occurs in the name of Purns Mastrayans putra. Further the same symbols in the same Sutralankara serve to transcribe the name in an authentic and incontesti ble manner, of the disciple Purns (p. 325) Now Purns is not an unknown personage Both the Sanakrat and the Tibe tan tradition regard Purns as the anthor of the Dhatukaya pada, one of the seven classics of the Abbidharma of the Sarvastivadia. The work was translated into Chinese by Hiuen tsiang who attributes it to Vosumitra the president of the Council convoked by Kanisbka (Takakusu, p 75, 108) This substitution is significant. For thus Purna enters into the group of the doctors patronised by the Indo-Scythian On the other hand the learned Tibotan Bu-ston school mentions Purnica assusted by Vasumitra and five hundred arhais at the head of the redactors of the canon fixed by the Council of Kanishka (Schiefner p 298) Purnika is another form of the name Purna. The two doctors, therefore again come in contact. But Wassilieff who translated this passage from Bu-ston added in parentbesis next after the name of Purnika (Parahvika) Sylvam Lévi not baving the text of Bu-ston is unable to state whether Bu-ston or Wassilieff is responsible for this. However, this time again we meet Purna and Parshva associated as in the Sutralankara Huen-tsiang mentions in Kashmir a convent where Puina, the master of the Sastias, composed a commentary on the Vibhishasastia The Vibhishasastia was the principal work of the Council of Kanishka It was for the editing of it that Ashvaghosha was officially requisitioned We are still in the same circle of authors and their works, but we might go further and take a more decisive step. A learned Chinese m a compilation of about 520 drew up two lists slightly divergent representing the filiation of the Sarvastivadi doc-Ashvaghosha figures in both In one list he occurs trine List No 1 has Katyayana, Vasumitra, Krishna, Parshva, Ashvaghosha, Kumarata, Vua, Ghosha, Purna, Ashvaghosha List No 2 comprises Katyayana, Vasumitra, Krishna, Paishva, Ashvaghosha, Ghosha, Purna

Thus we meet with Purna in the authentic tradition of the Sarvastivadis alongside of Ashvaghosha, either as the second successor of the first Ashvaghosha or as the predecessor of the second And he occurs again in a similar disguise, which has thrown sinologists off the scent. Since the beginning of Chinese and Buddhist studies Rémusat drew up a list of thirty-three primæval patriarchs which he had abstracted from a Japanese cyclopædia (Melanges asiatiques 1,113).

This list having become classical has been reproduced by Lassen in his Indian Antiquity (vol 2, supplement 2). Since then the Sanskit transcriptions of Chinese names communicated by Stanislaus Julien to Lassen have been regarded as authoritative. The best of the Sanskit-Chinese scholars Eitel, Edkins, Nanjio have tamely copied them This' list has Parshvika, Punyayashas, Ashvaghosha.

The original Chinese from which Inlien restored Pun yaynahas is Fou na yache This is in fact the name of tho eleventh naturarch mentioned in a history of Buddhism written in 131. But we have a list of patriarche of a much more ancient tlate in a San hrit work translated into Chinese in 472. Here the person placed between I arshva and Ashva chosha is Fon na-che In this Fou na is quite positive The transcription proposed by Inlien is inadmisable Punya rashas will not do The correct restoration is I arms which is a customary abbreviation of a type known in grammar as Now hoth Bhimayat of either Purnasha or Purnayasha the Chinese works just mentioned attribute the conversion of Ashvarhosha to Purna while the biography of Ashvarhosha ascribes it to Parshya. Once more we find I urns and Parshys in close association inst as in the invocation in the butralankara. They are so closely affect in fact that one of them is substituted for the other Parahva or Parshvika is better known There is na equi vocation regarding his personality Both the Chinese Hinen taking and the Tibetan Taranath aftert the preponderating influence which he exercised on hanishka and the part which he took in the convecation of the Conneil as well as in the compilation of the works He was a native of Gandhara The convent huilt for him by hanishka where he resided in Kashmir was shown to the pilgrim—It had a commemoration tablet. He frequently bears the title of Bhikshi which is also attached to his name in the Sutralankora—Further he is also styled the Elder as in the biography of Ashraphesha

As regards Mitche, Sylvain Levi again differs from Hinber According to the former it is derived from the Sauskrit Mecha Ho is designated as the sixth patriarch. Lassen on the anthority of Julien establishes the hypothetical Sauskrit name Micchaka hat this ward is not known in Sanskrit Wassilieff has corrected the transcription in Mechaka, Mecha ka is the piedecessor of Vasumitra, the president of the Council of Kanishka, and Vasumitra is separated from Parshva by two patriarchs, namely, Buddha Nandi and Buddha Mitra. In the lists of the Sarvastivadi filiation Mechaka occupies quite a different rank. In both the lists Mechaka floats in the neighbourhood of Ashvaghosha. Thus the name is proved to be Mechaka and the invocation may be established to be addressed to Purna, Parshva, and Mechaka, the masters of the Sastias. These three predecessors of Ashvaghosha are all of them glorious adepts of the Sarvastivadi school. Reverence to them shown by Ashvaghosha further evinces, that the author of the Sutralankara was an adherent of the same school.

MOST ANCIENT BUDDHIST RECORDS By M WESTERRY

The Pali Canon The Lamp-port of Indian Chronological

Tipitaka, the Pali canon of the Buddhists, most of the speeches and maxims are put in the mouth of the Buddha himself It is also precisely and circumstantially related, where and on what occasion the Master held a particular dialogue or made a certain speech How much of all these is traceable to the Buddha himself, will perhaps never be definitely determined, for Gautama Buddha left behind as little in the shape of written record as did the Brahmanic sages Yajnavalkya, Shandilya or Shannaka But just as the speeches and dicta of these wise men have been to a great extent actually embodied as tradition in the Upanishads, so also undoubtedly many of the discourses and utterances of the Buddha were accurately preserved in their memory by the disciples and bequeathed to posterity Deliverances like the celebrated sermon at Benares on the "four noble truths" and the "noble eight-fold path," which occur not only in many places in the Pali canon, but also in Buddhist texts, composed in Sanskrit in self-same words, much of the parting exhortation delivered by the Master to his disciples preserved in the Mahapar inibbanasutta, many of the verses and brief dicta in the Dhammapada, in the Udana, in the Itwuttika and in more or less similar Sanskrit texts of Nepal as well as in Tibetan and Chinese translations, these we can look upon as emanating from the Buddha himself, without exposing ourselves to the charge of undue credulity Gautama Buddha not only preached his new doctrine of sorrow and the end of sorrow, but founded a regular Order He gathered round himself a body of monks who led a holy, life in sense taught by the Master and according to settled prescriptions in the hope of reaching the end of all sorrows, the coveted Nuvana Accordingly many of the rules and ordinances enacted for this order of monks, for instance, the ten prohibitions for the mendicant friars technically called the dasasila, and probably also the well-known confessional litany, the Patimokkha, are derived directly from the Buddha.

From the age of the Buddha, therefore no written record has reached us appertaning to the Buddhist literature known to us. On the other hand individual texts incorporated in this literature may with justification be regarded as the word of the Buddha. Moreover among the earliest disciples of the Buddha there were doubtless several eminent leaders, and many of the discourses, dieta and poems embalmed in our collection probably had for their author some one or other of these prime acolytes.

Almost the entire oldest literature of the Buddhists consists of collections of disconress or dialogues, of dieta, of sones of stories and of a disciplinary code. And the Pali Tipitaka is nothing hat an enormous cornus of these collections. It is manifest that such collected records can represent only the close of a literary activity spread over a long anterior period and that the components must necessarily be assigned to diverse periods of time. According to the Buddhust tradition one such final reduction of Buddhist records took place at a very early period in the history of Buddhism Indeed it is reported that a few weeks after the decease of the Buddha in the city of Rajagrilla modern Raigir one of the personal disciples of the Buddha sum moned together an essembly of monks known as the first Buddhist Council with view to establish a canon of the religion (dhomma) and the disciplinary code (vinaya) Now organist the trustworthiness of this report in its carliest shape. as descended to us in the Tipitaka itself speaks the circum stance that it makes too gross a demand on our credulity In a word we are asked to believe that the two great sections of the Tipitaka relating to the doctrine and discipline of the Buddha entitled the Suttapitaka and the Vinayapitaka were composed essentially in the form and shape as we find them to-day in our Pall canon shortly after the demise of the Buddha,-a propontion impossible in itself Nevertheless we have no right to assume that this tradition rests on no basis whatever Probably it is reared on a reminiscence of the not unlikely fact, that the elders of the faith gathered together soon after the passing of the Master with a view to unity on the main points of his doctrine and discipline But for a composition of a canon of the sacred texts of the kind of our Tipitaka immediately after the death of the Buddha the period elapsed was certainly too brief.

More credible is the tradition regarding the second Council, which is reported to have taken place a hundred years after the death of the Buddha at Vesali To follow our most ancient account, the only object of this assembly was to condemn the ten errors which had crept into the disciplinary code It is only in later reports of the Council that we are told, that a revision of the doctrine was accomplished at a session, which was held for eight months If we rely on the older report we must assume it as a historical fact, that about a hundred years after the decease of the Buddha a schism had arisen, which had occasioned so much perturbation, that a large council of monks had to be convened to arrive at a decision as regards the legality of certain dis-This, however, presumes, that at that early puted points date there were already established definite regulations for the solution of questions of this nature and those could only be a canon of rescripts for the conduct of life of the monks of a character and nature corresponding to those of the Vinavapitaka now extant Thus, in the course of the first century after the Buddha there must have been built up at least a fundamental basis for the text of regular canon, if not a canon itself. An actual canon of the sacred texts was probably established only at the third conneil, which was summoned at the time of the celebrated king Ashoka, to follow the account of the Ceylonese chroniclers, whose narrative, if embellished with legends, is in the main entirely deserving of credence. That, as these chronicles relate, at the time the Buddhist Order had already split into numerous seets which necessitated an established canon for the orthodox believers, that is to say for those who wanted to pass for adherents of the original doctrino-this is antecedently and sufficiently prohable. Not less likely is it that this re action took place at the time of king Ashoka the greatest of patrons and adherents of the Buddhist Order Ashoka him self turns egainst the schismation in one of his rock ediets. He must, therefore have found it incumbent on himself to determine what was the reel rebeion of the Buddha, On the other hand however he was so impartial,-tolerance of other creeds he especially enjoins in his other edicts-that he did not summon the council for the establishment of the canon himself but left it to the spirituel leaders. According ly to follow the tradition it was not the king but the learn ed and venerated monk Tissa Moreliantte who in 236 after the deeth of the Buddhe cailed an assembly of a thensand monks et the city of Pataliputra modern Petne to fix a canon of the texts of the pristine religion. Now the true religion was for him one represented by the Theravada which is to say the doctrine of the elders, the immediate disciples of the Buddha -the school to which the sect of the Vibharievadis professed to adhere. Tissa who was the president of the council was a member of this sect and it was his canon which in the sessions lasting for nine months was determined at the council of Pataliputra. Credible likewise is the tradition that the same Tissa composed and incorporated with the canon the hook of Katharatthu in which the heretical dectrines of the period are repudlated.

Again it was Tissa at least if we give credence to the chronicles of Ceylon who sent out the first missionaries to the north and south and peved the way for the propegation of Buddhism in foreign lands. A pupil of Tissa was the great Mahinda, the younger brother, or according to another tradition, the son of Ashoka, who brought to Ceylon Buddhism and the Buddhist texts from Noithern India We can easily understand that legends grew lound the person of this apostle to Ceylon Should we, however, decline to believe the chroniclers, who assert that Mahinda and the monks who accompanied him flew straight from India to Ceylon in the air like flamingoes, we need not reject the tradition en bloc, but must assume that at the root of the many legends lay the historical fact that Mahinda actually was the introducer of Buddhism into Ceylon and that emigrating into the island he brought with him the texts of the canon These texts were, and this sounds entirely trustworthy, at first only orally communicated and were not committed to writing till in the first Christian century under the Singalese king Vattagamini

Now according to the view of the Buddhists of Ceylon the canon which was composed at the third council imported by Mahinda to Ceylon and committed to record under Vattagamani was identical with our Pali canon or the Tipitaka, which we possess to this day. This Tipitaka, the term means thie ee baskets consists of what are called the three pitakas or "baskets," namely

- 1 Vinayapitaka, the basket of ecclesiastical discipline This section consists of that which relates to the monastic order (Sangha), the regulations of the order, prescriptions for the daily life of the monks and nuns and the like
- 2 Suttapitaka, "the basket of Suttas". The Pali word sutta corresponds to the Sanskrit sutia, but among the Buddhists it lost its ancient connotation of "brief rules" and here it is equivalent to doctrinal text or doctrinal exposition. Every one of the larger or smaller expositions, often in the form of a dialogue on one or more aspects of the religion, Dhemma is designated sutto This Suttapitaka consists of five nikayas that is to ear, large groups of such suttas

3 Abhidhammapitala basket of scholastics.' The texts comprised in this section treat as well as those of the Suttapitala of the religion Dhamma But they do so in a more scholastic method and the form or dry enumerations, and divisions which here principally reference to the psychological basis of Buddhat ethics.

The Kalawatthe ascribed by tradition to Thea is found in our Pall canon as a section of the Abhidammani ha. But the latter is domested by the youngest component of our Tigitat in it repeatedly presuppases the texts of the Suit pit ha as well known. Besides the more ancient texts, for invision, in the reports regarding the Council of Ralgerian speak invariably only of Dalaman and Timpa and network and Abhidamman. It was, therefore, per se quite conceivable that the members of the third Council, when they prepared a codes of the existing texts, relegated to the end the texts of Abhida man pitaba as those which were composed the last and added to them as a supplement the work of Thea.

Nevertheless we cannot concede it offhaud to the believing Buddhists of Ceylon that the canon esteblished at the third Council is quite the same as the one new before us in the Pali Tipitaka.

In the first place the lenguage of the Tipitaka is scarcely the same as that of the canon of the third century BC. The latter could only he the Magadhi the dialect of the province of Megadha, modern Behar. It was the home tongue of the Buddha who doubtless first preached in this idom. Likewise the monks who fixed the canon in Pataliputra the cepital of Magadhi employed the Magadhi idiom. Traces of this Magadhi canon can still be perceived in our Pali corpus. But Pali, the ecclesiastical language of the Buddhists of Ceylon, Slam and Burme is designated by the latter themselves as Magadhi, although it essentially differs from the latter which is otherwise known to us from inscriptions, literary works, and grammars. At any rate, it corresponds equally little with any other dialect known to us Palı is just a language of literature which has been exclusively employed as such only by the Buddhists and has spring like every literature language more or less from an admixture of seve-Obviously such a literary tongue, although it represents a kind of compromise between diverse vernaculars, is ultimately derived from one definite dialect this the Magadhi can very well be, so that the tradition which makes Pali and Magadhi synonymous is not to be accepted literally, but at the same time it lests on a historical basis' In the early period of Buddhism very little weight was attached to the linguistic form of texts. The tradition has handed down to us the wording of the Buddha that he was concerned only with the sense and not with the phraseology and in the Vinayapitaka the Buddha declines to have his word translated into a uniform sacred tongue like the Sanskiit On the contiary he holds it necessary that each one should learn the holy word in the exposition composed in his own tongue The literary language, Pali, could accordingly have developed only gradually and was probably fixed only when it was reduced to writing in Ceylon under Vattagamını The monks of Ceylon at all events attached importance to the conserving of the texts in the language once for all determined and to transmit the same to posterity And as regards the language, these monks have with rare fidelity preserved for, and bequeathed to, us the contents of the texts of the Tipitala recorded in the Pali tongue for the last two thousand years But prior to this being given a definite shape in Pali and its arrival in Ceylon, it is possible that it was subjected to alteration even as regards its contents Both as regards the language and the contents, therefore, our Pah Tipitaka approaches very near to the canon established under Ashoka but is not Intter For TEC mnet identical with the third afea in the period from the first century B C when the commitment the to writing took place and possibly at a still later date tho texts underwent transformation and possibly commentaries have invaded the texts and got mixed up with the latter The original cornus as well as the components have probably whom since then in volume Centuries have indeed not passed over them without leaving a mark. And it is only in this way that we can explain the numerous contradic tions in the body of the canon as well as the repeated occur rence of older and rounger tradition in inxtaposition and the frequent appearance of the same texts in more than one collection.

With these reservations and limitations however we can affirm that the body of our Politipitals as a whole can not be so very divergent from the Magadhi canou of the third century BC. For this above all we have a warrant in the inscriptions of the king Ashoka. It is not only that his edicts preach the same spirit as the oldest of the Sutlas in our Pall canon, but in them there are verbal echoes of the texts of our canon and quotations which with trifling divergence are to be found in our texts. There is still something more. In the edict of Bairat or Bhahra dating from 249 B.C., the king asys to the monks of Magadha.

All that the Buddho the Lord has spoken he has spoken well '

Ho proceeds to especially recommend for their study seven texts of which he mentions titles. These texts partly hear the same title and are partly referable to similar headings in our Suttopitals.

From the second century BC and partly from the period of Ashoka himself date moreover the celebrated stupas or Topes of Bharhut and Sanchi, the stone sculptures of which are embellished with valuable reliefs and inscrip-On the reliefs we find representations of Buddhist legends and stories, the titles of most of which are also there subscribed And these titles leave no doubt whatever that the reliefs represent illustrations to the Book of Jataka or the history of the previous births of the Buddha, which forms a section of the Tipitaka On the monuments of Sanchi, however, we find votive tablets in which monks are assigned the distinction of Panchanikayika or the master of the five Nikayas, Patika, or the master of the Pitakas, and Dhammakathika the preacher of religion and to a nun is applied the designation of Suttatikini, which means one who knows or teaches the suttas It follows therefore, that about the middle of the third century BC there was a corpus of Buddhist texts which was designated Pitakas and divided into five nikayas, that there were suttas in which the Dhamma or the religion of the Buddha was promulgated, that many of these suttas coincided with those in our Tipitaka, that besides Jatakas exactly of the kind perpetuated in our Tipitaka appertained to the Buddhist literature as a component, in brief, that in the time of king Ashoka there must have existed a Buddhist canon which, at least so far as the Suttapitala is concerned, could not have been dissimilar to our Pali canon

The most ancient literary testimony of the existence of the three baskets or a triad of pitakas (pitakattyam) and of the nikayas is to be found for the first time in the Milindapanha, a work the genuine portion of which may be surmised to belong to the commencement of the first Christian century. But the entire remaining Buddhist literature outside the Pali canon in our possession shows that the texts incorporated in the latter reach back to an age of great antiquity not widely separated from the age of the Buddha himself and may be regarded at all events as the most genuine evidence of the original doctrine of the Buddha and of Buddhism of the first two centuries after the passing away of the Buddha

This is demonstrated in the first place by the non-canonic Pali literature which comprises the dialogue of Milinda panka the chronicles of Ceylon called Diparanta and Vaharansa and a rich literature of scholastic commentaries related to the Tipitala. All these hooks pre-suppose the existence of the Tipitala at least in the first Christian century.

But the Buddhut ban krit literature allo witnesses to the antiquity and the authenticity of the I ali tradition. To this belonged a literature of diverse varieties and differ ent seets composed partly in classical banskrit and partly in mixed Sanskrit. One of these sects had also a canon of its own in Sanskrit of which most recently fragments have been made known. It is seen that this canon has not been translated from Pall, but that it most brilliantly corroborates the authenticity of the I all canon. For notwithstanding numerous deviations in the texts and in the arrangement, there is such an amount of verbal agreement between the Sanskrit and Pals canons that we are compelled to assume a unity of tradition underlying both the records. But oven Sanskrit works of the Buddhists of Nepal as well as the books of various Buddhist sects known to us only from Tibetan and Chances versions enable us not only to determine a common stock οf doctrine also of the original texts which are in necord with the tradition of the Pali canon in all essentials. The more this Rud dhist Sanskrit literature becomes available to us and the more deeply we institute comparisons between it and the Pali canon, the more it becomes evident that Oldenberg is only right when he claims that "the Pali replica, which is naturally not immaculately correct, must, however, be adjudged as eminently good " Moreover, no canon and no Buddhist text has come down to us from antiquity as remote as that of the Pali canon, of the first Christian century before Christ, in which the great Buddhist king Ashoka is yet nowhere In language, style and contents the Palı texts are in harmonious continuation of the Upanishads, while the Buddhist Sanskiit literature much rather reminds us of the Pulanas Finally, the fact that in these traditional texts committed to writing in Ceylon there is no allusion to the island further confirms it that therein we have to deal with "no canon of the Buddhists of Ceylon" but a canon of that Buddhist sect of India which has in fact preserved the most of ancient Buddhism, and this doctrine can with some justice be designated as the Theravada or the teaching of the first disciples of the Buddha But not only as a source of our knowledge of Buddhism, but also, and this appeals to us directly from a purely literary standpoint the Pali texts surpass all other evidences of Buddhist literature, and this will be manifest only from a survey of these writings

APPENDIX IV

BUDDHIST DRAMA

BY M. WINTERNITZ.

According to the Hajjkimarila section, a certain ancient tract in the Buddhist canon, which is preserved in the Brahmajalasuita and in the Tovijjasuita of the Dighanikaya the Buddhist monks were forbidden to participate in all varieties of public entertainments including dancing sing ing recitation, animal fights and similar shows. Here is also interdicted the pakkha by which generally a dramatic performance is understood. It is doubtful, however whether pekkha, which is the Sanskrit preksha, actually indicated a dramatic performance. In the Vinauapitaka also (Suttavi bhanga to Sanghadisesa 18 Cullavagga 1, 18 1 2) the en joyment of dances sport and music is forbidden to the monks, although there is no reference to theatrical perform ances Accordingly it is at best questionable, whether at the period when the Buddhist asnon was compiled there al ready existed a theatre and the exhibition of dramatic pieces was carried ont

(The Natas who are frequently mentioned in our Jataka Book are wandering ministrels and dancers and not dramatic performers Jataka No 212 291 432 Fick, Soual Division in North Eastern India in Buddha a time p 188)

In the Jatakas as well as in the Sagathavagga of the Samyuttanikaya, in the Suttanipata, and in the Thera and Therigathas there is not an imagnificant number of ballads in the form of dialogues. They comist partly of gathas and partly of a combination of gathas and brief prose passages. The best known examples are the Padhanarutta and the Pabajjarutta in the Suttanipaia (Windisch, Mars and Buddha, p 1 and p 245) But versification of entirely similar kind is represented by the poems in the Marasamyutta and Bhikkhunisamyatta, the Chaddanta Jataka (No 514), the Ummadanti Jataka (No 527), the Mahajanaka Jataka (No. 539), the Candakinnala Jataka (No. 485), the ballads of the robber chieftain Angulmala in the Theragatha (866 ff) and also in Majjhimanikaya (86), the ballads of the nun Sundarı in the Therigatha (312 ff) and many others All these poems are uncommonly dramatic Leon Feer calls the Chaddanta Jataka a veritable drama (JA 5 p 47) and I have myself said of the Ummadanti Jataka, that we might as well designate it a small diama (my history of Indian Literature ii p 114) However, to my mind, there is nothing which would justify our classing this species of poems as "small dramas," as is done by J Charpentier in consonance with the theories of L von Schroeder and J. Hertel (WZKM 23, 33) It is quite possible, perhaps probable, that these varieties were sung to the accompaniment of a string instrument, but that they were executed as real dramas and that in their dramatic performance action and imitation were brought into play,- for this we have no evidence in the entire Buddhist tradition

On the other hand, it is conceivable that there are such dialogues, epic and lyrical poems to which nothing was wanting to make them dramas except the action, and a real theatre may easily take its rise here. Nevertheless we have the first positive testimony to the existence of Buddhist dramas in the Avadanashataka, which belongs to the second Christian century. In Avadana No 75 it is actually related, how actors performed a Baudhamnatakam before a king, in which the director (natacarya) appeared in the costume of the Buddha Sylvain Lévi long ago called attention to this passage as well as to the performance of Buddhistic dramas in the present times in Tibet, China, Ceylon and Burma. (Le Théatre Indien p 319) In Burma of to-day as a solemn preliminary to the initiation of a Buddhist novice the Vesan tarajataka is performed as a theatrical piece and the initia tion itself is a formal drama

We have preserved to us a complete Buddhist drama in the original Sanskrit which dates from the seventh century It is the drama of Nagananda ascribed to king Shri Harsha During the same period was issued the drama of Lokananda by the poet and grammarian Candragomi of which we have only the Tiletan translation. Perhaps it is identical with the adaptation of the Vishvantara Jataka mentioned by I tsing (Sylvain Levi, Bakk to 1903 p 41; I thing a Record of the Buddhist Religion translated by Takakusu p 164) We can only conjecture that in a much earlier age Buddhist legends were turned into dramatic pieces. When I taking (p. 165). immediately after the mention of the dramatic poems of Shiladitya (Shri Harsha) and of Candragomi coes on to say : Ashvagosha also wrote lyrical poems we are to under stand thereby similar lyncal dramatic pieces. That appears at least to be so from the context At any rate in the Sutralankara of Ashvanhosha, in the piece relating to Mara who appears in the costume of the Buddha and like a consum mate artist represents the Buddha so true to life, that the holy Upagupta sinks down in adoration before him, we have a noem which is so uncommonly dramatio that it is evidently a recapitulation of a drama Ed. Huher (BEFEO 1904 p 414) has established that this poem which is to be found in the Dieyaradana (p. 358) and which has been translated by Winduch (Mara und Buddha, p 161) originally helonged to the Sutralankara of Ashvaghosha. From this we can surmise that in Ashvaghesha's time a species of dramatic poems must have flourished. This conjecture is turned into proved fact by the discovery which Lüders has made. It is now demonstrated that not only a variety of dramatic poesy. but actual dramas, which in their technique hardly differed from those of Kalidasa, used to be performed in the second century Among the valuable manuscript treasures recovered from Turfan there is a palm léaf, which no paleographical grounds seems to belong to the Kushana period Luders, to whom belongs the credit of bringing it to light, is inclined to agree with Fleet and Franke that the Vikrama era of 57 BC was founded by Kanishka If we admit even the second century as the time of Kanishka which would seem to be more accurate then the Luders' Fragments are the oldest Indian manuscripts yet discovered If they are of extraordinary importance on that score, they are almost of epochmaking significance in virtue of their contents in the literraiy history of India For they contain fragments of a regular Indian diama Ludeis has separated pieces of two different dramas In the first appear three allegorical figures Buddhi, Dhriti, Kirti, which remind us of the Prabodhacandrodya of Krishnamishra and the Buddha himself appears surrounded by a bulliant halo (plabhamandalena diptena). Now since the halo was first introduced into India by Greek artists (Foucher, JA 1903 p 298 and L'art giéco-bouddhique du Gandhara p 622), this drama must appertain to the age of the Gandhara art, which synchronises with the first Christian century, and must have therefore flourished at the latter age, (Grunwedel, Buddhist Art in India, German edition, p 81, Foucher, ibid, p 49).

The second drama is in such a fragmentary condition that it does not permit of its being completely identified But it is of vast importance on account of the persone, among whom we notice Vidushaka and other typical figures that remind us of the Mricchakatika That the technique of the drama had completely developed is shown by the division into acts which are preceded by a prelude by the co-mingling of prose and verse, the latter in the meter of classical Sauskrit and the alternation of Sauskrit with Prakrit. Idders has devoted a penetrating examination to the Prakrit of the fragments, which leads to the conclusion important to the history of Indian languages that here alongude of Sauskrit stand three dialects which are of the same phonetic stage as Pall and the vernaculars used in the older inscriptions and which may be regarded as the precursors of the well known three Prakrit idioms, Magadhi, Ardhemagedhi, and Shau raseni. Thus the language likewise testifies here to an older stratum of the classical drama. On the other hand, so far as we can judge from the fragments the technique of the scenie art is so developed thet we cannot regard them as the beginnings of dramatic composition, but must assume a preceding course of tolerably long evolution.

As regards he authors of the drama, Lüders surmises thet they helong to the circle of which the propelling centre was Ashvaghosha. This conjecture has been epparently confirmed. Hardly had the surmise been in print when Lüders discovered three passages in the palm leaves of Turfan in which he came across the fragment of a drama hy Ashvaghesha. It represents fortunately the concluding portion of a nine act drama with its colophon which beers the titic of Sharputrapralarana and which exhibits the name of the anthor Ashvagosha in an unequivocal way Ashvaghesha, who is known as the prominent poet among the Buddhlsts here works into a drama the legand of the initiation into the order of Shariputra and Mandgalyayana,—a legend which is already so heautifully related in the Mahavagga of the Vinayupitaka.

APPENDIX V.

TREASURE TROVE OF ANCIENT LITERATURES.

I The discovery Scientific expeditions

The country of East Turkestan has been one of eternal unrest since the beginning of the second century before Historical notices, especially by the Chinese, supplemented by our finds, show that it had as guests, one after another, Indian clans, Tokharians, Huns, Scythians, East Iranians, Tibetans, Turks, the people of Kinghiz and Mongols. The picture of the country, as it was in the seventh century, that is, at a time when the majority of the MSS now discovered were written, is drawn for us by Hiuentsiang He went on a pilgimage to India in 629 His object was to see the cities between which the Founder of his faith travelled, and to acquire some of the holy books. He chose the northern route and passed through Chotjo, the capital of modern Turfan On his return he traversed Kashgar, Yarkand, and Khotan On the eastern confines of Khotan begins the desert, where the sand is kept shifting by the perpetual movement of the wind The only landmarks visible are the whitened bones of pack-animals ' Hereabout lay the ancient kingdom of Tokhara already in ruins and beyond was the silence of death Flourishing life was, however, visible towards Khotan All along, Buddhism was the dominant religion Many thousands of monks lived in the monasteries of the countries, the northern side belong ing to the school of the Sarvastivadis, Yarkand and Khotan being Mahayanists The Chinese traveller has noted for us the various characteristics of the people who had nothing in common, except their religion. They were various as regards dress customs, manners languages and modes of writing. The last was horrowed no doubt from India in each case. A new period of culture began for the country with the appearance of the Turkish clan of the Uigurs, They absorbed the inhabitants and united them into a people known to this day by their name. East Turkestan in the matter of religion was only a province of India. Then side by side with Buddhism appeared Nestorian Christianity and Manicha ism The ruler of Turfan was the first to cm brace it Soon after came upon the scene a new arrival which showed itself to be stronger than Buddhism Christianity or the doctrine of Manes. The first conversions to Islam took place in Kashgar and the first Islamic dynastics took their The older faiths continued their existence but rise there there was no stemming the tide of Islam. From the four teenth century onwards Turkestan became definitely Muhammadan. China acquired the country in 1758 without altering its religion.

¹ This paper is mostly a translation of Lüders, Uber die litterarischen Funde von Ostturkestan.

The words of the Buddhe of the Christ and of Manes ceased to be heard vet the works which embody them survived Rums of monasteries which are prov ed to be Christian from wall paintings inscriptions, and the find of MSS have come to light in the capital of Turfan. In the centre of the city there was a large Manichman colony In this part was discovered a wall painting which is the most valuable find of an original freeco in the Berlin col lection. It is picture of a Manichean priest surrounded by believers men and women in their characteristic dress. The building was ransacked by the peasants in search of buried treasures when the German scientific expedition It appeared just at the moment when the real treasure would have been destroyed. The place abounds in traces of Buddhistic monuments. Without the help of illustrations it is difficult to gain an idea of the architecture of the times—the temples, the stupas, the monasteries. The art of Gandhara was transferred from its home in India to Central Asia—Over all a strong Iranian influence is noticeable—The further we come down the stream of time, the more mixed and complex becomes the style and the problems of civilisation studied by Stein, Grunwedel and Le Coq It will require several decades to study the entire collection of finds Philologists and archæologists will not be the least interested investigators

The first find of MSS. by a European, which gave the ımpetus to further archæological search in Central Asia, was a bark MS which was found by two Turks in 1890 in a ruined stupa They sold it to Lieut Bower, who was then the British Resident at Kucha Bower presented the find to the Asiatic Society of Calcutta The next year, Dr Hoernle, the Secretary of the Society, published a report on the MS. which evoked considerable interest. The antiquity of the MS was noteworthy Indian MSS, according to the western standard, are relatively young The destructive effect of climate and the pest of insects require their continual renovation. The oldest MSS, preserved in Nepal on palm leaves, date back to the beginning of the eleventh century Only two palm leaves were hitherto known which had crossed the Indian border in 609 and reached Japan through China. They were preserved there in the celebrated monastery of Horiuzi, as venerable relics The Bower MS however was a considerable and complete one It was written in the Gupta character, and hence had come undoubtedly from North-West India, and dated at the latest from the fifth century. Later investigations have proved, that it must date from the second half of the fourth century The possibility of such age discovery incited to further research The Russian Archæological Society asked the Russian Consul-General in Kashgar, and the British Government commissioned the political agents in Kashmir Ledak and Kashgar to look out for similar MSS. Thus have been acquired the MSS which are known as the Petrovsky the Macartney and the Weber They are housed other at Petrograd or Calentta They belong to a large find made soon after the discovery of the Bower MS. by Turkish peasants in Kuchs. For a long while the collection had remained in the house of the local Kan as a plaything which amused his children!

Meanwhile there was another discovery in 1892. The French traveller Dutreuil de Rhina found three MSS in Kho tan which he deepatched to Paris. In 1897 Sénart made known their contents and value By now we are quite used to surprises from Central Ann. At that time however Sénart is communication created a sensation in the Aryan section of the Oriental Congress held in Paris. The find re presented a Kharoshti MS. The Kharoshti character till then had been known only from inscriptions in the outermost boundary of North West India. Epigraphical comparison proved the date of the MS to be the second century. As to its contents, it was a recension of the Pali Dhammapada in a Prakrit dialect, which was till then unknown in literary compositions. The manuscript was only a fragment. An other portion of the same MS was brought to Petrograd.

The impetus given by an accident transformed itself into systematic research. The Russians were first on the scene. In 1898 Klements set to work on this spot, and the next year Radloff started the initiative, which former an International Association for Investigation in Central and Eastern Association for Investigation in Central and Eastern Association for Sir Aurel Stein supported by the British of the labours of Sir Aurel Stein supported by the British Government in the country round Khotan in 1901 Stein's personal travels led to a secondary discovery He found out and exposed the manufacture and sale by Turks of fabricated MSS

Stein's success led to the German expedition under Grunwedel and Huth to Turfan in 1902 Meanwhile with the exertions of Pischel there was formed a German Committee of Research which, with State help, in 1904 and 1907 sent out two expeditions under the leadership of Le Cog and Giunwedel And Kucha and Turfan were thoroughly searched The result was brilliant In 1906-1908 Stein set out on his second journey His most beautiful discoveries he made in the territory of Tun-huang He came across a portion, altogether forgotten till then, of the great wall built by the Chinese as a protection against the incursions of the Huns Here a windfall awaited him in the shape of a literary trea-A few years before Stem's arrival, a Taoist priest in the hall of the Thousand Buddhas, or Tun-huang, as it is called, discovered among the caves a cellar which had been It contained a huge library of thousands of To judge by the date of the MSS, the cellar must have been closed up in the beginning of the eleventh cen-Stein secured a considerable portion of the treasure A portion fell to the lot of the French scholar Pelliot, who journeyed to Turkestan in 1906-07 Even Japan was not In 1902 it sent a Buddhist pilest who made behindhand excavations with some success To preserve the remains of the Tun-huang library from destruction, he despatched them to the National Library of Peking Thus, in addition to archæological discoveries, there has been collected a huge mass of MSS and block-prints in the libraries and museums of Petrograd, London, Oxford, Calcutta, Berlin, París, Tokio and Peking Almost every material used for writing purposes is represented palm-leaf, birchbark, wood, bamboo, leather, paper and silk The number of alphabets represented is very large. The languages in which these MSS are written are counted by the dozen including several of which till the other day, we had no knowledge

Imong the first finds which reached Colcutta and Petro grad there were fragments of MSS written in a variety of the Indian Brahmi character The language however was not Sanskrit The writing was tolerably clear and Hoernle succeeded in deelphering Indian names and expressions of Buddbistic terminology and Indian medical terms Next Leumann proved that we had here to do with two different tongues. The merit of di covering the exact nature of the first of these belongs to Sieg and Siegling who in 1907 prov ed its Arvan character from the names of domestic animals parts of the body terms of relationship and figures. The name of this language was the Tokharian It was mentioned in the colophon of a MS deciphered by F W is Müller The manuscript repre ented the Turkish version of a Tokharian translation from a San krit original One dialect of it seems to have been widely common (arayan passes written in it have been discovered, and dated and deciphered by Pelliot and Silvain Lovi. Further results may be expected from the studies of Mironov and Meillet There is a vast number of MbS which represent translation and reduction of Sans krit works relating to Buddhi m and medicine. There are also some Buddhistle dramas-ther can be traced to Indian models as is shown by the mention of the Vidushaka

The second new language is represented by two groups of texts, and la studied especially by Stacl von Holstein and Konow Tho first represents husiness papers mostly dated though the current era is not known. The second group embodies Buddhist texts partly dated While the Toekharian fragments are of works belonging to the Sarvastivadi school, the texts of the second language belong to the later Mahayanist literature—for example the Vayrachadika, the

Aparımıtayu-sutra, the Suvarna prabhasa Sutra, Samghata Sutra, and the Adhyardhashatika prajnaparamıta

II New-old Tongues Resurrection of dead languages The lost creed of Manes -Pahlavi, the religious and secular idiom of mediaeval Iran

In 1904, F W K Muller succeeded in deciphering a couple of fragments of paper, letter, and silk, originating He declared the alphabet to be a variety of from Tuifan the Estrangelo, the language as Middle Peisian or Pahlavi, and the contents as pieces from Manichean literature believed to have been lost This was the commencement of a long series of brilliant discoveries, the results of which have been registered in contributions to learned journals A heap of dogmatic and liturgical works has been recovered of the religion of Manes, which spread from further Asia to China, and in spite of sanguinary persecutions of centuries asserted itself on the coast of the Mediterranean as a rival to Christianity It is, though but débris, a priceless possession, because for the first time we perceive here from its own books the doctrine, for a representation of which, up to now, we had to rely on the hostile writings of Augustine, the Acta Archelan, the formula of abjuration of the Greek Church and the celebrated Fihrist, a kind of detailed catalogue of contemporary Arabic literature by an-Nadhim So far, as can be ascertained, the principles of the docrine have been correctly characterised here the ethical and physical elements have been indissolubly united in a fantastic fashion Kessler was inclined to see in it a preponderating influence from Babylonian sources, and now it can be asserted as certain that at least the immediate basis of Manichæism was the religion of Zoroaster Apart from the pronounced dualism, which is common to both the religions, the names bear witness to this Here we find the whole mythology of the Averla reproduced. A fragment from Shapurakan com posed by Manes himself, makes meution of Mihir oud the demons Az. Ahrimau, the Patrikus and the Azhidahaka. In a fragment which, according to the superscription belongs to a hymn of Manes himself he is named as a sen of God Zar van, who represents Time in Zoroastrianism and who in later times is exalted as the highest Principle. In a hymn Fredon is invoked together with Mihlr Fredon is the Threetaona of the Avesta and the Faridau of the Shahnameh Many of the Zoroastrian angels, like Srosh and Vohnmane occur side hy side with Jesus. For Manes claimed to be the perfector of Christianity In the fragment discovered by Mülier, Manes calls himself the anostic of Jesus as has already been told us hy Angustine. To judge however from the fragments, the syncrotum of the Christian elements has not been perfeetly nehieved. There has been no complete amalgamation. The different layers of belief lie one over another. Thus the description of the end of the world in the Shapurakan presupposes the Day of Judgment and has a close connection with the words of the Gosnel of Matthew Further Christian influences are evidenced by reference to the history of the erucifixion and resurrection of Christ.

Manes acknowledged the Buddha as also o predecessor of his Clear evidences of Buddhistic influence, however, only appear in the fragments belonging to later times like the confession of sins. It is quite possible, therefore, that what we meet with here is a later development of Ceutral Asian Manlahmism Probably here, in the ancient soil of Buddhism, it took the Buddhist colour, just as in the West it assumed a Christian time

In their exterior get-up Manichman MSS, are distinguish ed by the great care bestowed on them. Many are adorned with pictures, which must be regarded as magnificent specimens of miniature-painting. This taste for artistic book ornament was a legacy from old Iran Augustine, as we know, turned with flaming wrath against the bibliophiles Manes' name has been connected from ancient times with painting, and legend ascribes to him the knowledge of secret signs. In Persian he is always known as Manes, the painter

From the philological standpoint the Iranian writings fall into three groups. The first group is composed in a dia-- lect which comes very near to the Pahlavi, the official language of the Sasanian empire We know this language from a few inscriptions and texts of the Zoroastrian religion, and especially from a translation in it of the Accordingly, the texts from Turkestan published by Muller and Salemann indicate an infinite advance of our knowledge The writings on the monuments known up to now are wholly uncommon They do not give back the pronunciation of the time, and they employ Arameic grams for ordinary words, so that, for example, people wrote Malha while they read Shah, or King In the script of the tragments recently discovered this method is avoided, so that here for the first time we find an actual presentment of the proper Middle Persian language originals. Then, in Syriac writing, but in a language which, owing to certain peculiarities, can be designated as a younger phase of Manichæan Soghdian, considerable fragments relating to Christian confessions of faith, legends, and acts of the martyrs are found. The major portion has been edited by Muller. They show that the Christians employed the Pahlavi and the Soghdian languages for the spread of their doctrine quite as much as their Manichæan rivals.

The second group is composed in the dialect of North-Western Persia, which no doubt was the language of the Arsacids who proceeded from these regions and who preceded in sovereignty the Sasanians Andreas surmises that the so-called Chaldeo-Pahlavi, which appears in the inscriptions of the Sasanian kings, is identical with this tongue. He has now in hand a rich amount of inscription material for the investigation of the question, and we may hope in the near future to hear from himself the confirmation of this theory.

Also the third religion, Buddhism, made use of the Soghdian for its propaganda. The Berlin collection possesses fragments of the Vajrachedika, the Suvarnaprabhasa etc The cave of Tun-huang is, however, a peculiar treasury of Buddhistic Soghdian texts which are written in a particular alphabet of Armaæic origin Among the texts published by Gauthiot, the most interesting is that of the Vasantarajataka, the gem of didactic story-literature (forgotten in India but known to every child in Buima and Ceylon), which we find here in a new version Gauthiot has deciphered also the oldest form of this writing, as well as language, which was found by Stein in th desert between Tung-huang and Lobnor, along with Chinese documents of the beginning of-the first century Above all, there can be no doubt as to the character of the Soghdian It was the language of the Iranian population of Samarkand and Ferghana, and was spoken as a kind of lingua franca from the first to the ninth centuries in Turkestan and farther in Mongolia and China. From a Buddhist MS of Stein's, it appears that it was written in Singangu An echo of the Soghdian is still found in certain modern dialects in the higher valleys of the Pamir. Especially the Yaghnobi can lay claim to the designation of modern Soghdian

When it is further mentioned that the Stein collection also contains a document in Hebrew letters, and written, according to Margoliouth in the year 100 of the Hijra, the most ancient Jude-Persian piece of writing which at the same time is also the most ancient piece of writing in modern Persian it must suffice to measure the importance of the Turkestan finds for the Iranist; and yet Turkish philology is in greater deht to the country Upto now there was almost an entire dearth of its analent literature. The earliest Turkish hook known to us was the Kutatku-būti, written at Kashpar in 1069. Now we have acquired an ample collection of MISS and block prints in the land of the Uigurs which is 200 years older in language and in character than that book A splendid number of old Turkish texts which however, represent only a small portion of what we possess have been edited by Radloff Thomsen, Müller Le Coq and Stonner.

III Enormous Buddhut Sanskrit literature in original and vernacular versions—Great discovery of the century; Palt not the mother tongue of Buddhum; Pals represents translation from perished verna evilar.

The varieties of scripts employed in these manuscripts are as curious as their contents. We meet with a Manichean Estrangelo the Uigurian alphahet, the Brahmi the Runes of a particular kind, (which the genius of Thomsen was able to read twenty years ago for the first time on the stones at Orkhon and Yenissei) From the standpoint of their contents the texts fall into three divisions. The Christian literature has up to now been very sparsely encountered. the largest document dealing with the adoration of the Magi who are here described after the manner of the Apocrypha. Among Buddhist texts, those of a comparatively later date occupy a large place—the Saddharma pundarika the Suvarna prabhasa Suira (of which both Berlin and Petrograd hoast of complete texts) passages from the duaries of travel lers, from the peculiar species of literature, not always of a cheerful nature, the Dharanis, and the penitential formulas with their lively portraiture of all manner of imaginable They bear a strong resemblance to the Zoroastrian Patets. Then there are again fragments of works with interlinear versions, which are not without value for the originals, since though they are somewhat younger in age they reflect the oldest accessible texts. From the standpoint of history and literature the most interesting of our acquisitions are the miscellania of Indian legends Who could have ever conceived an expectation of coming across in Turfan the old legends of the Mahabharata related by Bimbasena or more correctly Bhimasena and his fight with the demon Hidimba, or of the svayamvara of Indian princesses? We have confessional formulas of the Manichæans, which are without doubt framed after the Buddhist exemplars, like the Khuastuanift which is valuable even in its dogmatic contents, and another which witnesses to a considerable tolerance of Buddhism In this text, in the same breath, are enumerated the sins commited by one against one's own brother in religion as well as the sins shared in Viharas dedicated to Shakyamuni! Further, our inventory of the treasure trove has to notice fragments of hymns, sermons, divine judgments, and dogmatic transaction, next, a small complete book of prognostications or a dream book in the Rune script. It bears resemblance to similar products of China, but is of Manichean origin A special value is to be asciibed to two leaves from Berlin which from their exterior can be marked as Manichæan and not Buddhistic The first relates to the setting out of the Bodhisattva or as he is here called, the Bodisav, on the path of renunciation, and those who meet him The other contains the revolting story of the youth, who in his intoxication embraces the dead body of a woman It is of Buddhistic origin and S Oldenburg has shown, that it occurs as the first parable in the Persian version of the legend of Bailaam and Joasaph This discovery as good as confirms the conjecture of Mülier and Le Coq to which the peculiar name Bodisar had led them, that here we have to do with the vestiges of the Manichean version of the celebrated Buddhist romance But it is not at all impossible, that the original was a Manichean work possibly in the Soghdian language. It would constitute a remarkable instance of involuntary syncretism if the Manicheans had contributed to the turning of the founder of Buddhism into a Christian soint.

There is hardly a single nation among those of the East Asiatia continent possessing ony civilisation of its own, which has not left literary traces in Turkestan Müller has in certain fragments recognised the script employed by the Hephthallics or White Hone on their coins, We have Mon golian letters and xylographs in the enigmatical Tangutjan written language Tibeten manuscripts are numerous of which only a few the fregment of a suire and a counte of religious songs have been brought out by Barnett and Franke The number of Chinese writings is enormous Tha oldest of these excavated from the sand by Stein are now before the public in a magnificent work by Chavannes Of the paper manuscripts a few go back to the second Christian century They are at any rate the oldest paper documents in the world. A large mejority of the documents are on wooden tablets. Some are one bamboo chips: they mark the condition of the oldest Chinese books. The wooden pieces, the eidest of which date from 98 B C. come from the ar chives of the garrisons stationed here in the outermost west of the empire on the Great Wall Here are gathered the detail ed particulars regarding the daily life of the military colonies in the first centuries of Christ They deal with the duties. the wages, the equipments of the soldiers, an optical telegraphic service, a postal department, ond, a complement to the picture of the realities of the day, a poem of later days describing the miseries and dangers of the frontier legions guarding against the barbarians of the West The mass of later Chinese manuscripts seems to belong to works of the Buddhist canon and to business documents A stranger has sometimes strayed into the collection as is shown by the "Lost Books in the Stone Chamber of Tun-huang," published five years ago in Peking It is a pleasant sign that China is willing not merely to guard the ancient literary treasure entrusted to her, but also to make it useful.

For us, in India, the manuscripts in Indian languages are of supreme importance. Historic interest is claimed before all by documents on leather and wood discovered by Stein on the Niya river They contain, as is evidenced by the publications of Rapson and Boyer, dispositions and reports of local authorities, instructions, regulations, official and private correspondence all inscribed in the Kharoshti script and drawn up in a Prakrit dialect. The date of the Prakrit documents is fixed by the Chinese wooden tablets which have been mived with the latter, and one of which is dated AD 269. In the third century, therefore, there were Indians in Khotan of Gandhara origin, who were living mixed with a Chinese population It is, therefore, not improbable, that an historic fact lies at the basis of the legend, according to which Khotan in the days of Ashoka was colonised by Chinese emigrants under the banished son of the Emperor as well as by the inhabitants of Takshashila, whom the Indian king, wounded over the blinding of his son Kunala, which they had not prevented, had ordered to be banished to the deserts to the north of the Himalayas In the circle of these Indian colonies lies also the Kharoshti manuscript of the Dhammapada which is known after Dutieuil de Rhins. Professor Luders thinks, that it is by no means a private anthology, but the remnant of a particular tradition of the word of the Buddhe, which up to now has undoubtedly re mained the only one of its kind.

Since the time of Pischel, who deciphered the first pages of the xylograph of the Samuuliagama the remnants of tho Buddhist canonical literature in Sanskrit have been infinitely multiplied. What up to now has been placed before the public out of the I maya and Dhorma of the Buddhist Sans krit eanon by Sylvam Lévi Finot and de la Vallee Poussin is only a small portion of the salvage. Of the Udonorarga which seems to have been unquestionably the most favourite Sonskrit Buddhist work 500 leaves are preserved in the Ber lin collection alone out of fragments and leaves belonging to some 100 manuscripts so that the text is elmost complete ly restored Pischel recognised that these vestiges belong to the canon of the school of the Sarvastivadis jost in the origi nai Sanskrit. He elready noticed that the Sanskrit texts were not transletions from the Pall canon which is the only canon preserved intact to us. A penetrating research has rereated that both the Senskrit and Pali canon are trace able to a common source, which as is proved by mistakes in the translations was drawn up in the Eastern dialect which wer spoken as the common idiom in the territory of the Buddha sactivity THIS IS AN LVENT WHICH IS OF DECISIVE CONSEQUENCE IN THE HISTORY OF BUD DHISM We ere now in a position to restore the Sanskrit canon from the debris of tradition. It existed in the pro-Christian centuries in Magodha. That however is not equi-- valent to saying that we have come upon the original word of the Buddha. What the Buddha himself exactly tought will always remain a subject of speculation, although Pro fessor Lüders believes we are not yet justified in resigning ourselves to the position of squorabonus. That, however which the Church thought He taught at a time to which no direct documents go hack, is now in our hands, thanks to the Turkestan discoveries.

Another region in literature has now been made accessible from this quarter the pre-classical Sanskrit poetry Thirty years ago the Kavya appeared to begin with Kalidasa, who was placed in the sixth century Before that seemed to lie centuries of complete sterility and Max Muller coined the phiase about "Sanskiit ienaissance" To-day we are positive that Kalıdasa lived in the beginning of the fifth century, that his name signifies the zenith of courtly poetry, and that it was preceded by a spring Inscriptions and a couple of lucky discoveries in India have given us an idea of the beginnings of the Kavya Turkestan intimates to us the existence of an unsuspected wealth of hymns, epics, romances and anthologies which in the majority belong probably to this period The material is always religious, but the form is that of the secular Kayya This differentiates the poetry from the old Buddhistic, though the old Church did not by any means stand hostile to poetry

[The present writer may be allowed to dwell for a moment a moment only on the brilliant confirmation of the discovery of the Buddhist canon in Sanskrit. A short eight years ago his refusal to look upon Pali as the prime word of the Buddha, and Sanskrit Buddhist books as later fabrications, drew on him a storm of indignation from Burmese monasteries. Unfortunately for the time being the excavator's spade is left for the shrapnel, else it were easy to make a present to the Shwe-da-gon shrine of an anthology of Sanskrit Buddhism, as voluminous as any in Pali, issued from Leipzig or New York.]

IV The heatus in classical Sanski it literature supplied Buddhist poetry or drama in Sanski Matriceta and Ashvaghosha the forer unners of Kalidasa Authenticity and verification of Tibetan treasures

People appropriated the popular species of poetry called the Gathas by putting over it a Buddhistic veneer The first age of profound religious passion gave rise to a number of poets who however, had not the ambition to hand down their names to posterity Many of the strophes which were placed in the mouth of the Buddha himself or his disciples are among the finest produced by the literature of any age. But only when Sanakrit was given the position of a church language instead of the popular dialect, doubtless with a view to a wider spreading of the doctrine it was that poetry began to be composed according to the rules of the Sanskrit court singers. Our manuscripts prove how much under the influence of this artificial poetry gradually the ear of the monk himself in the Turkestan monasteries was refined. Scholars were constantly at work improving upon the old translations of canonical works which were in many ways crude and unpolished. They laboured to reduce the text in language and metre to the stricter requirements of later ages

Two names belonging to this early period are mentioned in the Middle Ages with enthusiastic admiration. Matriceta and Ashvaghosha. Both belong, as it seems to the beginning of the second century Matriceta's fame is based on his two hymns to the Buddha, which according to I taing in the seventh century every monk in India learnt by heart whether he was attached to the Hingyang or the Hahayana and gave ruse to the legend that the author in his previous birth had rejoiced the Buddha with his songs as a nightingale. They were up to now known only from Tibetan and Chinese translations. From the fragments in the Berlin collection about two-thirds of their text has been restored. The work of Matriceta has great value in the history of the Banakrit literature as the earliest example of Buddhistic lyrics, al though the enthusiasm with which the Chinese Buddhistscholar and translator I tung speaks thereof, is not altogether intelligible to us. Dogmetic punctiliousness can scarcely compensate us for the monotony with which synomym after synonym has been heaped. Also the alankaras which constitute the regular decoration of a kavya are only sparingly employed. Incomparably higher as a poet at any rate stands Ashvaghosha Fragments of his epic, the Buddha carita and the Saundai ananda in the original Sanskrit are found in Turkestan Here we have also palm leaves eaten up and ruined on which was inscribed the Sutra alankara which is at present known only from its Chinese translation A French version of the Chinese rendering was done by Huber The rumed remains, however, give us anadea \mathbf{of} the style \mathbf{of} Ashvaghosha likewise wholly - nnexpected possess Я. fund of remnants ofdramas ofwhich at. least one in the colophon is expressly designated as Ashvaghosha's work One of the two palm leaf writings, in which it is preserved to us, is a palimpsest prepared in Central Asia. The other was probably written in northern India during the lifetime of the poet It represents the oldest Brahmi manuscript we know One leaf has come out-of a dramatic allegory, in which Wisdom, Endurance, and Fame entertained epilogue or an interlude A fragment represents a comic piece, in which the principal part seems to have been played by a courtesan. The drama, which undoubtedly is a production of Ashvaghosha, treats of the story of the two chief disciples of the master, Shariputra and Maudgalyayana, up to the time of their conversion to Buddhism The fragments do not suffice to enable us to judge of the individuality of Ashvaghosha, although they furnish valuable suggestions for a general history of the Indian theatre We here come across, apart from divergences of little consequence, forms as in the classical period The speeches are in prose intermixed with verse The women and the inferior dramatis personae speak a Prakrit dialect, which undoubtedly stands here on a more ancient phonetic level The comic person of the plece the Vidushako is also here a Brahman perpetually suffering from hunger in the company of the here, and the manner of his jokes is the same as in Shakuntala All this demonstrates that the Indian drama at the close of the first Christian century was fully developed in all its characteristics and this has been completely established by the discovery in Southern India of the dramas of Bhasa by Ganapati Shastri, Bhasa is one of the poets mentloned by Kalidasa as his predecessor

It is a variegated picture this presented to us hy research in Turkestan. It is all still almost in confusion, the flickering light of accident. It will require years of lahour before we are able to indge of the whole hage collection. The question with some is, whether the results will be common surate to the labour. There are many in the West who have hardly any appreciation for the work of scholars engaged on the investigation of peoples and speeches of Southern and Eastern Asia But the amologues' views at least must count. Chinese is a colonial language. 'The Sanskritist however, is something more than a tranquil man who worships dead deities worlds apart. These gods are not dead. The know ledge which Gantama Buddha acquired in the holy night under the Bodhi tree is still the credo of millions of man kind, and thousands and thousands of lips still repeat the prayer at sunrise composed by a Rishi thousands of years Nor are those countries far from us Only 18 days' journey divides the heart of Europe from Colombo in whose harbour steamers from their journey to the ends of the earth take shelter The world has become narrower the peoples of Asia have been brought close to us and will be brought still Whether this will be peaceful or will lead to strife eloser this nobody knows. It is novortheless our duty to endeavour to study the ancient systems of culture, to endeavour to appreciate them in the only possible way that of historical research. In the history of this research the discovery of the Ancient and Middle Ages of Turkestan constitutes, only a single chapter but that happens to be one of the most important.

VLEADIZ AI

THE INSCRIPTION OF ARA(1)
By Prof H Löder, Pu D (Cerlin).

The Kharoshti inscription treated of here was discover ed in a well in a sala called Ara 2 nules from Bagnilab. It is now in the museum at Lahore. Mr. R. D. Banerji was tha first to bring it to our notice. In publishing it (ante vol. NXXVII p. 53) (2) he expressed the expectation that I should succeed in completely decliphering the text I regret that I am not able wholly to respond to the expectation. The last line of the inscription remains obscure though the script is here partly quite clear. I believe however to have been able to read so far the remoining portion of the inscription with the help of the impression which I owe to the kindness of Dr. Fleet that at the most there will remain doubts as regards the two names in the fourth line.

In order to show what I owo to my predecessor I reproduce here his reading of the text of the inscription. I comaider it superfluous to go into every point in detail in which I differ from him; in most cases an inspection suffices to determine the text. Let me however make one observation: Bancrji belloves the inscription to be broken towards the left end, and that the final words of all lines except the first are missing. This assumption is wholly without foundation. Only the last line is incomplete at the end. Bancrji reads:—

Makaraja sa rajabrajasa decoprirasa fa (?) thadkarasa

 Vasilhpaputrasa Kansikkasa samtatrarae eka ehatari (si)

¹ Translated by Mr G L. Narlman from the Sitzungsberichte der Preuzsischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, 1812, pp. 821 ff. and by the ambox

¹ Indian Antiquery

- 3. sam XX, XX, 1, Chetasa masasa diva 4, 1 atra divasam Namikha.
- 4. na pusha puria pumana mabarathi Ratakhaputa . .
- 5 atmanasa sabharya putrasa anugatyarthae savya . .
- 6. ... rae himachala Khipama...

I read

- 1. Maharajasa rajatirajasa devaputrasa [ka] i [sa] rasal
- 2. Vajheshkaputrusa? Kanishkasa sambatsarae8ekachapar[i]
 - 3. [sae]4 sam 20 20 1 Jethasa masasa di 20541 i [se] divasachhunami kha [n]e6
- 4. kupe-[Da]shaverana? Poshapurtaputrana matarapitaranapuya-
- 5. e Namda [sa sa]bharya[sa8 sa] putrasa anugraharthae sarva
 ... [pa]na9
- 6. [1a] tisha hitae10 ima chala[khiyama11 -. -
- 1 To the reading of this word we shall revert later on.
- $\mathbf{2}$ The second akshara can in my opinion be only jhe, the reading st is at all events excluded. As regards the reading of the third akshara, there may be different views at first As shka occurs in the name of Kanishka, Vasishsight ka, Huvishka, and as exactly the same symbol occurs in the Zeda inscription in the name Kanishkasa, one might feel tempted to read shka On the other hand shpa is suggested by the fact that in the ligature shka, in the word Kanishkasa which follows immediately after, the ka is joined to the sha ın a different way But, I think, we shall decide for shka when we take it into consideration, that in the Kharoshti script the same symbol on the same stone shows often widely different forms

- 3 I have already given the correct reading of the date of the year in Jour R 1s Soc., 1909, p 6.22 The ligotare is a is not new as Banerji thinks. It occurs not to mention uncertain cases, in the word sameatsaraye in the Taxila in scription of Patriko (Fp Ind 4 54 Bühler sameatsaraye) and in the Mahaban inscription (Jour As IX 4 .14 Sénart sameatsaraye) and in bheissis and matsans in the MS Dutreuil de Rhins, as was shown ten years ago by Franko (Pali und Sanskrit, p 96 f.)
 - 4 The s of rais not clear
 - 5 After the symbol for 20 there is a hole in the stone.
- 6. The n bas crumbled away The sign for e is attached below as in de in line 1, in e generally, and probably also in ve in line 4.
 - 7 The do is uncertain.
- 8 The sa at the end of the word and the following sa are not quite distinct, but perfectly certain.
- 0 Tho akikara after sarva is totally destroyed, and tho pa is uncertain Shall wo rood sarvasapana?
 - 10 The hi is not certain.
- 11 After khiyama there are three or four illegible aksharas

(During the reign) of Maharaja Rajatiraja Deva putra, Kaisara Kanishka the son of Va Translation. jheshko in the forty first, year,—in the year 41—on the 25th day of the month of Jotha (Jyaishtha), in this moment of the day the dug well of the Dashaveras, the Poshapura sons, for the worship of father and mother, in order to show favour to Namda together with his wife and his son, and to all beings (?) For the welfare of these (?). ."(3)

The inscription reports the sinking of the well in which it was found, by a number of persons who called themselves Dashaveras, if that name has been correctly read, and who are further characterised as Poshapuriaputra Since it is said later on, that the work was undertaken for the worship of father and mother, Dashavera can only be the family name indicating here a number of brothers belonging to it The expression "Poshapunaputia" one would be at first sight inclined to understand as "sons of Poshapuria", but Posshapuria would be a very strange personal name. I therefore believe that putra is here employed in the frequently occurring sense of 'member of,' 'belonging to,'(4) and that Poshapuna is derived from the name of the city of Poshapura, which is equal to Purushapura, the modern Peshawar As for the form posa it can be authenticated from Pali writings.

Khane(5) is no doubt derived from khan in the sense of "dug", whether it is an adjective or a participle (Sk. hhatah), should be left an open question Khane kupe seems to have been used as a contrast to the natural fountains. The expression is of interest masmuch as it enables us to explain a passage in the enigmatical inscription of Zeda There occurs after the date sam 10 1 Ashadasa masasa di 20 Utaraphaguna ise chhunami, the characters which Sénait (6) leads "[bha] nam u[ha] chasa ma . hasa Kanishkasa raja[mi] · · [dadabhai] da[na]mukha'', and

² The final portion is not clear to me

Compare e e, niganal ita in the Bhattiprolu inscriptions and other n times, 2DMG 55, p 693 f Indicate to the usual transcript of the two na signs without expressing that I consider them as absolutely correct.

^{*} J Ar VIII, 15, 137.

which are read by Boyer (7) as I hanam usphamu mardakasa Kanishkasa rajamilial yadalabhar danamukha" Now the impression before me clearly shows that the three first alsharas of this passage are exactly the same as those following the date in our inscription. Even the c of ne is joined to the matrika in exactly the same way as here (8) That the fourth character is neither la nor spha but e can now hardly be disputed (9) The words thereafter I read as: Peradasa mardakasa They are pretty clear in the impres sion except the second akshara which may as well be ro As regards the five alsharas coming after rajam: I can for the present only say that they can in no case be read as toyada labha. Therefore the reading that we get is: khane hue Veradasa mardakasa Kanishkasa rajami.

a danamulha The form Luc instead of kupe is found also in the Paga inscription (10) and in the Muchai inscription (11)

Much more important than the contents proper of the inscription is its date Until now the numerous dates of the inscriptions of the Kushana period presented no difficulty at least in so far as the succession of the kings is concerned They yielded for Kanishka the years 3 11, for Vasishka 24-28, for Huvishka 83-60 for Vasudeva 74-98 Here we sud denly find Kanishka in the year 41;

To explain this contradiction it may be alleged that in the text of the macription we find nothing to show that Kani ahka was on the throne in the year 41. Lanshkasa sambat sarae ekachaparisae literally means in the year 41 of Kamahka, and one might find in it the sense ' in the year 41 of the era founded by Kanishka ' Now it is self-evident that the combination of the number of a year with the name 1 /b d x 2 488.

It seems that both Schart and Boyer have regarded the right book of his as a portion of the preceding symbol. Otherwise I am unable to explain the reating same a See my remarks Jear R As Sec. 1900 pp. 847 ft.

A=4 87 05 V Did, 87 64; R & Soc. 1909 061 of a king in the genitive case originally indicated the year of the reign of that king, but I need cite no instance to show, that later on in a similar way people combined the names of the reigning king with the number of the year of the current era, and that must be also the case here Kanishka receives here his whole title, and even a statement about his descent is added. And people generally do not speak in this fashion about a king, that was long dead, especially when they are silent as regards the name of the reigning king. That explanation, therefore, seems to me out of the question. Another possibility is afforded by the assumption that Kanishka was a contemporary ruler of Vasishka and Huvishka Baneiji has expressed this view Accordingly Kanishka between the years 10(12) and 24 would have handed over the rule of India to Vasishka, who afterwards was succeeded by Huvishka and himself confined his rule to the northern part of his empire This does not appear to be probable, because all other sources are silent. We should above all expect, that in the titles of Vasishka and Huvishka there should appear an indication of a certain relation of dependence But in the inscription of Isapur and Sanchi, Vasishka bears the title of maharaja rajatiraja devaputra shahi(13) That for Huvishka up to the year 40 only the title of maharaja devaputra can be ascertained as far as the inscriptions go, is probably a matter of accident In the inscription of the Naga statue of Chargaon of Sam 40(14) and in the inscription of Wardak vase of Sam 51(15) we find that he is called maharaja rajatiraja, and in the Mathura inscription of Sam 60(16) maharaja rajatiraja devaputra. Under these circumstances, it seems to me more probable, that the Kanishka of our in-

¹² This is the date of an inscription in the British Museum which apparently was found in the country about Mathura, (see Ep Ind IX 239 ff)

¹³ Jour R As Soc, 1910, 1913, Ep Ind II 369

⁴ VOGEL, Catalogue of the Archaeological Museum at Mathura, p 88,

¹⁶ Jour R As. Soc, XX 255 ff, _ 16Ep Ind 1, 886, scription is not identical with the celebrated Kanishka I lay no stress on the fact that Kanishka here bears a title which is not applied to him anywhere else. But the characterisation as the son of Vajheshka, which too does not appear anywhere else gives an impression to me at least that it was added with a view to differentiate this hanishka from the other king his name-sake Now the name Vailteshka or Vaiho ahka aounds so near Vasishka, that I look upon both forms only as an attempt to reproduce in an Indian alphabet one and the same harbarie name (17) These two forms at any rate are closer to each other than for instance the various shapes in which the name of Havishka occurs in inscriptions and on coins Now, cannot the Kanishka of our inscription be the son of the successor of the great Kanlahka? He would be probably in that case his grandson which would well agree with the name, because grandsons are as is well known, often named after the grandfathers. The course of events then would be asmething like this. Kanishka was followed by Vasishka between the years 11 and 24 After Vasishka s death, which occurred probably soon after Sam 28(18) there was a division of the empire Lanushka II took possession of the northern portion of the kingdom. In India proper, Hn vishka made himself king The reign of Kanishka II endured at least as far as Sam 41 the date of our inscription, But before Sam 52 Huvishko must have recovered the authority of the northern portion of the empire for in this year he is mentioned as king in the Kharoshti inscription which was found at Wardak to the south west of Kabul.

If it and s may have been used to express a s; compare the writing fariless in Kharushii by the tide of OCIAOY on the coins of Zolica (Gardner C lies of Greek and Septh K gs to Bactrie and India, p. 221. 170). It need bactly be noted that the notation s or i before the skin makes no difficults.

In case the M three lundiplies (SA Ind II 905, No. 20) is dared in Sam 29 and in the reign of Havistica.

We have seen above that, there is some doubt as regards the personality denominated here as kaisara. immaterial to the chronological inference, which we may draw from the use of these titles. No one will deny, that this inscription dates from the Kushana period and its date Sam 41 belongs to that series of dates which run from 3 to 98. The beginning of the era which the reckoning has for its basis is uncertain. The theory which was advanced first by Cunningham, that the Kushana era is identical with the Malava-Vikrama era of 57 B C has found in Di Fleet an energetic defender Professor O. Franke has attempted to support and I too have agreed to it. But the word kaisara overthrows this hypothesis. The idea that so early as in the year 16 BC a Central Asian or Indian ruler should have assumed the title of Cæsar is naturally incredible. With the possibility of transferring the beginning of the era, and consequently Kanishka, to pre-Christian times falls likewise the possibility of placing the succession of kings from Kanishka to Vasudeva before Kujala-Kadphises (20) whose conquests, according to Professor Chavannes (21) and Professor Franke took place in the first post-Christian century. In these respects I am now entirely at one with Professor Oldenberg, who has recently treated the whole problem in a penetrating way. (23) The exact determination of the era however depends before all on the question, whether we should identify the king of the Ta-Yue-chi, Po-t'iao, who sent in the year 229 AD an embassy to China, with Vasudeva, the successor of -Huvishka (24) In that case the era would start at the earliest with 130 and at the latest with 168 A D None of the grounds

Heet, Jour R As, Soc 1903, p 834, 1907, p. 1048, Franke, Beitrage aus Chinesischen quellen sur Kenntnis der Turkvolker &c, p 98 ff

²¹ Toung Pao,-S. II. Vol. VIII, p 191, note 1. 22 Bestrage, p 72

²³ Zur Frage nach der Aera des Kanishka., N G. GW. Ihil. Hist. Kl.

²⁴ Toung Pao, S. II, Vol. V., p. 489

which Oldenberg has addreed against this supposition is decisive On the other hand, the identification of Po-t'iao with Vasudeva is as observed by Chavannes, merely per missible and not necessary; besides there still remains the possibility that a later and another Vasudeva is meant he cardingly a consensus omnum can hardly be attained at once, and final decision will vary according to the evidential value attached to the Chinese data. Our inscription has, however, perceptibly narrowed the bounds of the possible, a fact the value of which under the prevailing circums tances is not to be underestimated

After I had already written the abave paper I received the Inly unmber of Jour R As Socioon Postscript taining the first half of the essay by J Kennedy on the 'Secret of Kanishka" The anther supports the theory of Flect and Franke So far as I see there is nothing in the essay which invalidates the clear evidence of our inscription. This is not the place to enter into details only one word I shall say regarding the argument apon which Kennedy seems to place chief reliance Kennedy argues thus (p. 667) -- We must date Kanishka either 100 years before 50 A.D or after 100 A.D (strictly speaking after 120 A.D.) Now the legends on his coin are in Greek The use of Greek as a language of every-day life however ceased in the country to the East of the Euphrates partly before and partly soon after the close of the first Christian century Hence Kanishka cannot be placed in the secand century but must belong to a period prior to the Christian times."

Now before ma lie a pair of fereign coins a nickel coin from Switzerland of 1900 and a penny of 1897 The inscription on the former reads. Confoederatio Helvetica. On the penny stands Victoria. Dei. Gra Britt. Regina. Fid Def. Ind. Imp I pity the historian of the fourth millennium who will draw from the coins the conclusion, that about the year 1900 Latin was the language of daily life in the mountains of Switzerland and in the British Isles.

APPENDIX VII.

THE BOURGES OF THE DIVYAVADANA.

Ohinese Translations of Sanskrit-Buddhist Literature

The Diviguadana is a collection of vious tales which differ too considerably in style and language from each other to be attributed to a single author Ed. Huber and Sylvain Levi more or less simultaneously established the sources of these tales collected together in the Divyavadana By an examination of three of the tales namely Mara and Una gunta (n. 357). Yashas (n. 382) and the Gift of the High Mango (p 430) Huber comes to certain definite conclusions The negligence with which these sources have been put together was noted so long ago as by Burnouf in his Introduction to the History of Indian Buddhum. The story of Mara and Upagupta is translated also by Windisch in his Mars and Buddha (pp 168 176) Already here Windisch noted the characteristics of a drama. The legend is, ' he says. ' prettily and didactically related with dramatic circumstance. But the dialogue between Upagupta and Mara is not in the simple verse of the Pali legends, but is partly in the more artistic meters such as are employed in the Sanskrit drams Along with the skloke and grue we find such meters as Praharshim Vasantalilaka Shardulavikridita and even Suvadans. We are reminded of a drama also by the theatrical show especially the manner in which Mara appears in the costume of the Buddha.' Speyer had also noted that the form endance in place of the named ealaua which is found in the Ashoka legends m the Divyavadana, is also to be met with in the Buddhacarita This was a particularly happy discovery of Speyer s (WYKM 16 p 2) As a matter of fact Ashvaghouha the author of the Buildhacarsta, has composed; as we know another work called Sutralankara, which is preserved only in a Chinese translation made by Kumaijiva about 495. And the three stories of the Divyavadana under examination are precisely found there. The importance of the Chinese translation consists in this that with its help we can correct the Sanskrit text of the Divyavadana, as we shall see later on Now the question is Did the stories originally belong to Sutralankara, or did there exist a third work upon which both Ashvaghosha and the editor of the Divyavadana could draw? Ashvaghosha was a learned poet His Buddhacanta is perhaps the first in date as a kavya, and both I-tsing and Taranatha agree in pointing to him as a peerless poet In the story of Mara and Upagupta, the Elder asks Mara to show him the features of the Buddha, Mara agrees to do this "I will show him to you in the same form which I created in order to shuram vancayitum "

Windisch, not being acquainted with the Chinese, translates the last phrase as "in order to deceive the hero" But the real sense of the passage is recovered only when we place back the story of Mara and Upagupta in the book from which it was drawn, namely the Sutralankara - There it is preceded by another story where also Mara plays a great It is the story of the householder Shura is a miserly man of wealth, who refuses to give alms to the disciples of the Buddha The Buddha personally goes to his house, preaches him the Law and makes him see the sacred Truths Mara is thereby put to shame As soon as the Buddha has withdiawn, Maia himself puts on the guise of the Buddha and appears before Shura Next follows a descriptions in verse of the majestic appearance of the false Buddha, who thus addresses Shura "While I was explaining to you the Law, I made mistakes in certain points " He proceeds then to deliver a sermon which is anything but orthodox. Shura makes him out. "You are the Wicked One. It is in vain that you hide the packass in the skin of a tiger al though his appearance may deceive the eye, be is found out as soon as he begins to bray. It is evident, then, that in the Divyavadana we should take Shura as a proper name and not as a common name meaning hero. Further on in his comparison of the Sanskrit text with the Chinese. Hinber notes that the Chinese translator has noticed the play on the word. Ashoka 'which signifies the name of an emperor and the name of a tree a pun, which has escaped both Bur noul and the English editors of the Divyavadana.

Thus at least three of the tales in the Divyavadana have been borrowed from the Sutralankara of Ashvarhosha. But the latter is far from heme the principal source upon which the anonymous compiler of the Diviguadana had drawn. Already the English editors notice that the collection was a part of a Vinayapifala. They saw that the stories related to a school of Buddhism different from Pali. Accord. ing to a Tibetan authority quoted by Barth (RHR 41 p 171). of the four schools of Buddhism only one that of the Sarvastivadi, employed Sanakrit in its Illusty the Maha sanghikas used corrupt Sanskrit the Sthaviras or Thera vadis employed Paishaci and the Mahasammativas used the Apabhramaha And since the fragments of the Vinayapitaka recently found are in Sanskrit, a priors they must belong to the Vinayapitaka of the Sarvastivadis and this is in fact the conclusion which Huber establishes. Now the Chinese canon which has preserved the hasket of discipline of several schools, furnishes a means of verifying the hypo-" these. The result of Huber's researches is that at least eighteen out of the thirty-eight stories of the Diviavadana are taken from the Sarvastivadi tinaya. The compiler has treated, in fact, the Vingyapifaka of the Barvastivadia in the same manner in which the author of the Makavastu has dealt with the Vineyapitaks of the Mahasanghikas Only the redactor of the Divyavadana had not the grace, like the author of the Mahavastu, to acknowledge his debt. On the other, hand, in taking his loans the compiler has been faithful, rather too faithful He wrenches sometimes the stories along with the ligatures preceding and following them in the original Sanskrit Vinayapitaka. The divergence between the Sanskiit and the Chinese lies only in two points. In the first place, the translator, who was the celebrated I-tsing and who rendered the original Sanskiit into Chinese, commits minor mistakes. Consequently when he comes to-one of the numerous clichés or the steleotyped selles of phrases, I-tsing sometimes loses his patience and instead of reiterating the passage in Chinese, contents himself with a brief "and so on". Less frequently he uses the term corresponding to the Sanskiit Purvavadyavat. With these two exceptions the two tally completely. We can easily see the utility of the existence of a Chinese version, which so exactly corresponds to the Sanskrit, when we think of undertaking a translation of the Divyavadana into a European language. Now we shall see below some examples of how I-tsing's Chinese version helps us to restole the sometimes corrupt text of the Sanskrit Divyavadana

Huber first analyses the stories of Makandika and of Rudrayana corresponding to stories 36 and How Chinese 37 in the Divyavadana. These two Avahelps Sanskrit. danas were originally the section Prayashcittika 82 in the Vinayapitaka of the Sarvastivadis, corresponding to the Paccittya 83 of the Pali Suttavibhanga The regulation in question referred to the prohibition on the Buddhist monks against entering the royal palace on certain occasions. In this section, the Pali makes of Chattapani a proper name, whereas from the Chinese it is evident, that it is an adjective phrase meaning "carrying an umbrella in the hand," qualifying the monk which follows. As Huber notices it is strange that the great Buddhaghesha the I all commentator, has reme ed the mis take more than once In one place the Chinese translator I tsing cannot tolerate the interminal le menetony of certain repetitions and notes, ' The Sanskrit text has the entire enn meration. I am afraid of wearing the reader and abridge the portion. In the light of the Chinese Hober establishes that the Lhorom at pace of in the Duvicoling renders a whole sentence a nieless and that judging by I tong a Chinese version the original San krit should be tholodhona which restores sense to the corrupt sentence. At page 579 the same Chinese repilering below us to rectore Lamiks In place of the unintelligible Lorbita Similarly the first shield in the Makandika tale (p. olo) is restored to sense with the help of the Chin or In the same story the upono sthonive should now be read apadathonius. Further down harambhramena is a corruption for I dalabhramena. In the story of Svanata (Dir pp. 167 193) the proper name Asya tirtha is certainly a mistake. The corresponding Pali is Impattiths which is confirmed by the Chinese which this time instead of translating as it often does here transcribes the proper name of An po. At page 191 of the Diregardana, the Sanskrit text should be altered into mamudichyodbhir The aredona at page 453 has an erroneous title Cudepalike It should be Cudoponthe. Verses produced at page 497 are managered in Sanskrit but are restorable by a reference to the Chinese At page 512 mothurayon must yield place to the sensible manduravam. With these plenteons examples and to faithful rendering of several stories. Huber avers that I taing a translation testifies to the existence in India in the eighth century of the Sanskrit canon of the Sarvas. tivadis. 'The disproportion, he proceeds 'between the dry brevity of the Pali text and the redundant prolinity of the Sanskrit recension may prove repulsive at first to the reader and might make the Sanskrit appear suspicious to him." As a matter of fact, nevertheless, the compilers of the Sanskrit canon invented nothing in the sense, that they were as faithful translators, as those of the Theravadi canon The only difference is this Whilst the Pali school habitually leave out or throw into the commentaries the pious tales which serve to illustrate the precepts of the rules, in the Sanskrit school these avadanas have completely invaded the text itself of the Saivastivadi canon. Although we have not yet received from Ceylon Buddhaghosha's commentary of the Vinaya, we have already shown that there is not one of these stories which cannot be found again in the Pali Windisch with his accustomed penetration, Atthakathas. saw long ago that Buddhaghosha must be familiar with the literature of the North (Mara und Buddha p. 300.)

To these important discoveries by Huber we may add a few notes from the accidentally simultaneous research on the same problem by Sylvain Lévi (Toung Pao March 1907). The Vinaya of the Mulasarvastivadis is also the same as the Tibetans have admitted into their canon. It constitutes the Dul-va of the Kanjur. The various parts of the Dul-va, according to Csoma, were translated from Sanskrit into Tibetan in the course of the ninth century. I-tsing's Chinese translation was made in the ninth. It is interesting to note, that I-tsing expressly states that his work accords with the Mulasarvastivadi principle and should not be confounded with the teachings of any other school. The Mulasarvastivadis are to be distinguished from the simple Sarvastivadis, whose Vinaya was translated into Chinese as early as 494 by Kumarajiva and Punyatara, under a Chinese title which is equivalent to Dashadhyayavinaya as distinct from the Vinaya of the Dharmaguptas which was called the Vinaya of the Four Sections, and from the Vinaya of the Mahishasakas which was entitled the Vinaya of the Fivefold Sections According to I-tsing, the Mulasarvastivadi was a sister school to the Sthavira, the Mahasamghika and the Sammitiya and the school itself was anbdivided into four branches, et ., the Sarvastivadis, the Dharmaguptas, the Mahishaskas and the hashyaplyas. The Dharmagupta Vinaya was translated into Chinese in 405 by Bnddhayashas; the Mahasanghika in 416 by the Indian Bnddhabhadra and the celebrated Chinese Fa-hlen the Mahashaska in 424 by Bnddhajiva The Chinese translation of the Vinaya of the Sthaviras was made between 463 and 493 and has been lost. But a portion of even the Pall Samanlapaudika of Bnddhaghesha was done into Chinese in 469 by Sangha bhadra. Among the translators there were some who had migrated from Persia, one of whom rendered into Chinese two tracts on the Vinaya between 148 and 170

APPENDIX VIII. INSCRIBED FRESCOS OF TURFA

By Ep. Huber.

I.

The Buddhist art of India in Gandhara as well as in the south has preserved from early days the legend of the Brahaman Sumedha, who is subsequently to be the Shakyamuni and who receives from the Buddha Dipankara the prophecy of his future career. We come across this episode with the same features in the scriptures of the different Buddhist fraternities and that is an index which leads us to suppose, that it forms a part of the ancient elements of the canon This beautiful legend has not been excluded by posterior literature The hagingraphies of the church of Ceylon have extended their activity to the Pianidhicaivas of the Bodhisattva under each Buddha of the preceding Kalpas. They inform us of the spiritual progress even of the chief disciples of the Master during the age of any one of his remote forerunners. In the Palı canon the Mahavagga and the Theragatha have been continued into the Buddhavamsa and the Therapadana - We shall presently see, what corresponds to these two Palı works in the northern canon in Sanskrit For the paintings at Tuifan in Central Asia, recently brought to Europe, refer to legends in this Sanskrit canon One of these grottos there has a kind of a gallery of Nahshatras or the lunar mansions, each of which is surmounted by its name and diagram They were probably intended to serve as mangala or auspicious marks. Vinayas of the north like that of the Mahasanghikas have prescribed stanzas of good omen which the superior monasteries had to address_to visitors and who had specially to invoke upon them the protection of the 28 mansions which, in groups of 7, preside over the 4 cardinal points. These are the same stanzas which in the Mahavastu (iii, 305) and in Labitaristara (p. 387) the Buddha addresses to Tra pusa and Bhallika at the time of their departure. It is sigmilicant that it is the Vaharasi's and not the Labianistara which accords with the recension of the Mahasanghikas. which has come down to us only through the Chinese transla tion of Fa hien. These pages of the Mahacustu, by the way affer an exceptional apportunity to test the knowledge of Sanskrit possessed by this chronalagically first Chinese pilgrim and his Indien caliaborator. As regards the anhiects which the religious painter has to represent in the different parts of the monastery from the verandah to the kitchen we have minute descriptions of them in the Visava of the Mulasarvastivadis. These texts would be useful in a translation prepared with a comparison with other Chinese and Tibetan renderings.

It was in fact, reserved for the Buddhist art of Turkes tan to employ its beautiful technical skill in the methodical utilization of the source of inspiration provided by the texts. The mission of Donner and Klementz brought some of these pictures which were discussed by Scient in 1900 in the Journal Assatique, especially with reference ta the Sanskrit stanzas written in the Brahmi script faund an the freeces in the neighbourhood of Turfan, explanatory of the paintings which depict the Pranidblearyns.

More freeces have been discovered by Grünwedel and the finest amongst them found in the temple of Barabilic have been reproduced in the magnificent Chotsche by Von la Coq Each of them, except and has a Sanskrit shloke to identify the individual scene.

Ludders has studied these stanzas. Ha started with the hypothesis that the sklokus farmed port of a whole paem which has perished. He supposes that the original from which these bits of verse have been drawn could be recovered from two texts which have been already indicated in his exploration of the Mahavastu by Barth (Journal des Savants, August. These texts are the Pali Buddhavamsa October, 1899.) and the Bahubuddhasutra in the Mahavastu (m. 224-250). However, the texts and the stanzas in the frescos have nothing in common between them except the general narrative. The proper names and the circumstances, which have led each time to the Pranidhana or solemn vow of the future Buddhas, are different in the Mahavastu, in the Buddhavamsa and in the frescos Starting with the fact, that on the frescos of Turkestan the Pranidhanas of the Bodhisattva are distributed over three Asamkheyakalpas, and that, on the other hand, the monasteries to the north of the Tarim desert belonged since the days of the visit of Hiuan-tsiang to the Sarvastivadi school, Luders concludes that the third recension of the shlokas, which we have in the frescos, must be related also to this school. And this arrangement of the distribution over three Asamkheyakalpas is noticeable only in the Divyavadana. However, considering the corrupt composition of the stanzas, Ludeis doubts, whether they were actually borrowed from a canonical work of the Sarvastivadis, and is to inclined think, that were we have to deal with a debased Sanskrit, which was current at a later period in the barbarous monasteries of Turfan As a matter of fact, at this period there was no barrier between the church of Turkestan and that of northern India. I have already shown that the geographical horizon of the text from which the. compilators of the Divyavadana have borrowed extended beyond the Pamirs, and the same holds good of the redactors of the Mahavastu. However, the stanzas on the frescos of Turfan are not much farther removed from the Sanskrit of Panini than the language of the Divyavadana. If really there is no difference between them, it can be explained on the assumption that the sklokos here been inscribed by an illiterate painter who did not understand them end octually this seems to have been the case hecause as Lüders has dicated more than once the subject represented is quite different from the skloka which is expected to explain it.

These stanzas then have issued from the same work on which is hased the Divisoradana itself, namely the Pinoya of the Mink Sarvastivedis They ere followed by the hesnifful tale of Sudhena and the Kinnari which is reteined by the compiletor of the Divisiradana chrestomathy. The sten zas are addressed to Anenda and the subject is divided into three Kalpus just so in the fragments of Turfen. At the close of the fragments it is steted in prese "here ere the names of the Buddha' analogous to the samaptam behubuddhasustrans of the Mohorastu. The next chapter contains elso in verse a recension of the Theropadona. Here also us in the case of the Buddhavama the proper names in the storica of the past and the other circumstances do not agree with the Pall ver sion.

The interest which it has for the iconography of Central Asia would justify a trenslation of this Buddhavamso of the Mula Sarvastivadis. But it would be better to produce the translation from the Tibetan text For the Chinese translators of the Teng dynasty have rarely succeeded in comprising into their stanzas the whole expression of the Sanskrit verse even when they were eithe to understand the latter Besides, the proper names, which they trenslated in their own fashion are difficult of reproduction.

Every section of the Sanskrit Vinoya when closely examined, reveals the same feetures There are few fundament-

(Haber gives here a striking filtestration of the important act ke which inhere traders to Boddhiele strades. With the Chinese traderings of the adignal texts before him, he corrects the errors of the serfect and painters who have present of the scriptural verses in the freecos of Terfan,) al differences with the Pali. As Barth has put it, the Triple Basket of the Mula Sarvastivadis had no cover and it continued to absorb material from outside The same conclusion can be arrived at by a comparison of the three diverse translations of the Vinaya of this school, namely, the portions borrowed by the Divyavadana, the Tibetan translationof the 9th century and the Chinese of the 8th. The divergencies can be illustrated by an example The long story of Simhala, which is given in its entirety by the Tibetan and the Chinese translators, has been abridged in the Divyavadana (p. 524) into a simple reference to the Rakshisasutra. Again, where the manuscript of the Tibetans gives the whole history of Rashtrapala, that of I-tsing quotes only the title On the other hand, numerous tales in Chinese and Tibetan are thus disposed of. "Place here such and such sutra and such and such chapter of this or that Nikaya" This problem, although it is more in the domain of the literary history than theology, attracted the attention of the doctors of the old Indian church Thus Vasubandhu in his Gathasamgraha has no hesitation in placing the Avadanas and the Jatakas in the Vinayapitaka One more important piece of information we gathered from a work of Nagarjuna translated by Kumarajiva about 400 A.D. which was a voluminous commentary on the Mahapranaparamita and which lays down. "There are two recensions of the Vinaya, the Vinaya of Mathuia which contains the Avadanas and the Jataka and has eighty chapters, the Vinaya of Kashmir which rejects the Jatakas of the Avadanas and preserves only what is essential which is divided into ten chapters "But what were these Vinayas of Kashmir and Mathura? Here we enter only upon the domain of hypothesis

A BHARHUT SOULPIUKE,

п

The identification, one by one of the archeological monuments of India every day proves with greater cer tamty that all Buddham even of the ancient epochs has not been included within the limited scope of the canonical texts Oldenberg has already indicated that two scenes in the legend of the Buddha, which are depicted at Bhar hut are strangers to the Pali canon, namely the ascension to the heaven of the Thirty three gods—a scene which is represented also at Sanchi,—and the great miracle of Shravasti. It is possible to add one more scene of this class.

One of the bas-reliefs at Bharhut represents a group of musicans accompanying with their instruments the movements of a troupe of dancers in the front of two edifices: one on the right, the palace of Indra, from the balcony of which the god looks down upon the festival, surrounded by his women, while from the upper stories the servants show their heads from the windows the other to the laft of the chaffys through the open door of which we notice laid on the altar the tuff of hair of the Bodhisativa.

The dome of the chartya bears an inscription in the Ashoka characters which reads thus: Sudhammadeva sabha Bhagasato chudamaha Cunningham taking the word 'maha in the sense of great translated it to be the great headdress (relie) of Buddha in the Assembly hall of the Devas. (The Stupa of Budha in the Assembly hall of the Devas. (The Stupa of Bharhut p 126) and it does not seem that this translation in spite of its queerness has been criticised. This inscription on the stupa of Bharhut does not bear the solitary instance of the expression Chudamaha in Buddhist literature The same term is employed in the Laktacutara when, after having described how the Bodhi sattva cut off his hair and threw it up in the sir where it was received by the Thirty-three gods, it adds "And to this day, among the Thirty-three gods, the festival of the tuft of the hair is celebrated", which the Tibetan translates word for word including the term "festival" leaving no room for doubt for the meaning of the expression (Foucaux, Part I., p 195) And, as fortune would have it, it is a case where I-tsing has for once at the same time correctly understood, and entirely translated, the passage in the Vinaya of the Mula Sarvastivadis The Chinese affords final confirmation: "Shakra Devanamindra seizes in the air the hair of the Bodhisattva and carries it to the Thirty-three gods, the Thirty-three gods are gathered together who all do homage to the hair circumambulating it" (Tripitaka, Tokyo xvii, 3, 16 b 14)

On the other hand, the Mahavastu uses the same expression when it relates almost in the same phraseology as the Lalitavistara that the tuft of the hair, cut off by the Bodhisattva having been received by India, the Thirty-three gods celebrate a festival in its honour (II, pp 165-166). Finally, the festival of the tuft of the hair of the Bodhisattva' among the Thirty-three gods is further mentioned expressly in the Abhinishki amana Sutia, which is a long life of the Buddha translated into Chinese towards the sixth century by Jnanagupta (Tripitaka, Tokyo xin, 7, 69b 19-20) here related that the Bodhisattva cut with his sabre his hair which was taken up by Indra, then the Bodhisattva was shaved by the Shuddhavasas and that Indra again gathered up the hair which fell under the razor "Shakra received it and carried it to the heaven of the Thirty-three gods where it was worshipped Since this day he commanded all the gods to celebrate this occasion as a festival for the adoration of the tuft of hair of the Buddha, the observance of which has not been interrupted to this day" Further, the word "maha," although it appears rare in the vocabulary of Buddhist Sanskrit is not otherwise absolutely un known, The Diryacadana supplies on instance (n 679) Wo may remember the long description of the vovogo of hatya vana beyond Indie and the Oxps. At the piece which is called Lamboko the enestle leaves behied at his departure his conner goblet kamshika as a souvenir to the goddess of Roruke who raucs a stupe and celebrates e festival in which the inhabitents of the place toke part. The English editors of the Divugradana heritate between kashika and Lash: but the true reading is kamike as I have circuly in dicated (Bhr LO vi. n. 15) The Chinese and Tibetan trans lations support this correction of the Sanskrit text. The Chinese translator of the Mula Sarvastived has slightly of tered the order of the text and in doing so has emitted the passage relating to the plece which probably he had not sufficiently understood (Tripitaka Tokyo xvii 98h 15) But the Tibetan always faithful to the letter of the text which he translates exactly follows the Sanskrit (hanjur red edition Vingua vill 120 b) The Tibetan word Bu ston shows the meaning which the translator attached to the Sanskrit make, namely, that of a festivol.

This seene has been discovered by Foncher among the has-reliefs of Boro-Boudour et Jovo and it offords archmological confirmation to the identification which is proposed here for the has-relief of Bhorhut. At Boro-Bondour also we see the men in gaicty the musicians and dancers who enter the sanctuary It is in brief, allowance being mode for the differences of technique, an exact counterpart of the bas relief of Bharbut.

Thus we find at Bhorhut a figure representation of the onnual festival observed by the Thirty three gods to commemorate the cutting of the topmost hair of the Bedhisettva. But the legend is unknown in the Poli canen. Besides we know how soher the latter is in details as regards the life of the Bodhisattva. Not only have I not discovered myself this legend in the canonical text, but it has not been mentioned in the two great Buddhistic compilations of Indo-China belonging to a later period compilations which have been made so conscientiously and carefully and in which are embodied not only the canonical texts, but also the commentaries and the super-commentaries of these texts and in which minor variants are invariably noted. Neither the Burmese Jinathapakasani nor the Siamese Pathamasambodhi make mention of it In fact, in the Pali canon itself the later texts like Nidanakatha are not aware of it According to it, the hair of the Buddha, when it was cut off and tossed up into the air, was immediately seized by Indra who conveyed it to heaven where a stupa for it was erected, but it has no knowledge of the festival annually celebrated in commemoration of this event in the abode of the Thirty-three gods

It is, therefore, a subject exclusively appertaining to the tradition of the north which is represented at Bharhut. "But the tradition of the north" is a vague term under which are hidden a number of diverse things We shall get at something more precise when we succeed in determining the schools to which these legends appropriately belong. Unfortunately, this is not easy to achieve The Lalitavistara takes us to the Salvastivadis, the other texts have been extracted from the Vinaya of the Mula Sarvastivadis, the Mahavastu is attached to the school of the Mahasanghikas. Finally, the Abhinishkramana Sutra has issued from the Dharmagupta school The festival of the tuft of the Buddha's hair is mentioned in no other Vinaya of the diverse schools translated into Chinese. So all the great sects of Northern India are cognisant of this legend Since, on the other hand, the Abhinishkramana Sutia which almost always indientes in detail the divergencies of the principal schools makes no mention of it, it appears, that its anthor held the festival to be common to all the schools known to him But, on the other hand we have to note that the Gandhara school scems not to have known much, or at least not to have represented the scene of the shearing of the hair (Foncher, 1 Art preco-bouddhyur p 363)

We need not draw a general conclusion from such un certain circumstances. However, it is the accumulation of details of this class which alone will perhaps permit us one day to substantiate all the a priori discussions so complicated, regarding the subject of the relative age of the traditions of the different schools by more precise knowledge. For the present all that can be said is that our opinion confirms what other indices lead us to suspect in the fragmentary state of our knowledge of Indian Buddhism. The recent date of a document which acquaints us with a legend does not by any means lead to the conclusion of the recentness of the formation of the legend itself.

KING KANISHKA AND THE MULA SARVASTIVADIS

IJĮ.

It is well known that the canon of the Pali Theravadis was crystallised at a sufficiently early period; their Vinaya, after it was drawn up in Pali, could hardly receive any new elements except in the shape of commentaries, but that of the Mula Sarvastivadis remained long after it had been drawn up in Sanskrit open to all the extraneous influences and did not cease being amplified till it grew into the enormous compilation which lost in Sanskrit has been preserved to us only in Chinese and Tibetan translations Now, up to what date did the Vinaya of the Mula Sarvastivadis continue to enrich itself with fresh texts? The Chinese translation dates from the seventh century and the Tibetan from the ninth Both are too late in date to give us any information on the point Their constant exact harmony demonstrates that there was a limit to their expansiveness and that from a certain period a definite text of the Vinaya was substituted, which theneeforth remained identical till the date of its disappearance This period was prior to the seventh century, but prior by how much? The problem remains yet unsolved.

In the section treating of medicaments (Tripitala, Tokyo, xvii, 4) there is placed in the mouth of the Buddha a prediction concerning king Kanishka Unfortunately, I have not got with me the Tibetan translation. The Buddha goes to the abode of the Yakshas, to the city of Rohitaka which is described at such length in the Divyavadana (pp. 107-108). From there, accompanied by Vajrapani, he proceeds to subjugate Apalala, the Naga, and to show his prowess otherwise. "Bhagavat having again arrived at the village of Dry-tree, he sees in this village a young boy playing at the making of an earthen stupa." Bhagavat sees him and speaks to Vajrapaul, "Do you see this young hoy who is at play making a stupat Vojrapaul replies, I see him.' The Buddha says. After my Nirvans this child who is playing of the building of a stupa of corth will be the king Fanishka and he will found o great stupa which will be designated the stupa of Kanishka; oud he will spread the religion of the Buddho.'

As we may observe, the basis of the legend has nothing of originality. It is hardly anything beyond a clumsy repetition of the prophecy touching the king Ashoka; the hands ful of dust which the future Ashoka offers to the Buddha is here replaced by the earther stupa on occount of the stupa which in his future life the child who is to be Kanishka is to build. The only interest which it possesses beyond the mention of king kant that is the connection with a well known monument which the Buddhist pilgrims visited out which was actually built by konishko namely the temple now discovered in the rules of Shajikidheri.

This little fact added to a certain number of others, tends to show that the I mayo of the Mula Sarvastivadis on derwent a kind of re handling about the beginning of the Christian era. The word dinara which implies Grace-Roman influence, has been alreedy pointed out I have also shown the incorporation in the I mayo of some of the stories of Anixaghotha When discussing the netual date of the king Kanishka we may say that the mention of his name earries us to the same period.

APPENDIX IX.

THE MEDICAL SCIENCE OF THE BUDDHISTS.

The celebrated Bower manuscripts were found in a Bud-They were probably written by dhist stupa in Kashgar Hindu emigrants They are in the Indian Gupta characters On paleographical grounds they should date from 450 AD. The material on which they are written is birch-bark which is cut into long strips like the palm leaves of southern and western India The manuscripts embody seven Sanskrit texts, three of which are purely of medical contents. The first medicinal work contains an eulogy on garlic and various recipes, especially for eye diseases The second, which is a much more voluminous work and is entitled the Navanitaka or the quintessence, treats in fourteen chapters of powder, butter, decoctions, oil, mived recipes, clyster, elixirs, aphrodisiacs, ointments for the eye, hair dyes, of terminalia chebula, bitumen, plumbago, and care of children. The third work contains fourteen prescriptions in seventy-two verses. The sixth text, which is a charm against the bite of a cobra, has also a medicinal character The language of these books is more archaic than that of Charaka and Sushruta. We owe the decipherment and translation to Hoernle The same scholar has been busy with another work relating mostly to Indian prescriptions or medical formulæ and which is even more ancient than the Bower manuscripts In the text represented by the Macartney manuscript, written in 350, and which is a paper manuscript, unfortunately in a bad state of preservation, we come across several familiar herbs like arka, priyangu, and also gold, silver, iron, copper and tin The great importance of the Bower manuscripts for the history of Indian medicine lies in this that they positively establish the existence of the medical science of the Indians as early as in the fourth and fifth centuries and puts an end to the scepticism regarding the trustworthness of the Arabic sources touching upon them. The principles of the three fun damental humours, that of digestion, that of the influence of the seasons, the forms of medicinal remedies the names of the diseases all appear here just as in the later works, while many of the longer prescriptions in the Bower manuscripts appear in their entirety in the better known medical Sam hifas It is noteworthy that quicksilver opium and small pox are not yet mentioned.

These Bower manuscripts come to us from the Buddhist sources, as is most clearly shown by the sixth and the seventh texts, which several times make mention of Bhagava Tatha catha Buddha and so on. Varabata has traces of Buddhistic propensities which explain its transplantation to Tibet as well as the complete absorption of the Indian science of medicine by that country The Tibetan system of the smence of healing can be traced back only to Buddhist medicine The exhaustive accounts of the Buddhist pilgrim I taing (671 695) on the then condition of Indian therapeutics, including medicinal herbs the three fundamental principles diagnosis. fasts etc., accord not only with the contents of our standard works like Charaka and Sushruta as well as the Bower manna. eripts but the Chinese traveller a account includes extracts from a sermon which is a suite dealing with medicine ascribed to the Buddha himself. The Buddhist king Buddha of Cey lon in the 4th century cured the sick, appointed physicians with fixed stipends, established hospitals and wrote the medical manual called Saratthasangaha. Charaka is reputed to be the body physician of Kanishka, but, whether it was the celebrated physician or a namesake of his is hard to deter mine, Nagarjuna too lived about the same time Besides being credited with several medical treatises he is the reputed compiler of an edition of Suskruta to whom also is ascribed a medical formula on a pillar in Pataliputra. The hospitals with physicians for men and animals founded by King Ashoka in the third century are well known. A good deal of medical knowledge is revealed by the Pali Mahavagga It refers to eye ointments, nose cures, oils, butter decoctions, lotus stalks, myrabolams, salts, assafætida, cupping, diaphoretics and even to laparatomy of the later works, but to no metal preparations as yet.

APPENDIX X. THE ABHIDHARMA KORHA VYARHYA.

It is a striking testimony to the genins of Engène Bur noul who examined with profundity the three great reli gions of the world simultaneously Brahmanum Bnd dhism and Zorosstranism, that since 1844 when he wrote his Introduction tn the History of Indian dhism. of nnantiquated at III A mine tion very little fresh light has been thrown on the magnum onus of Vasubandhu the anthor of Abhidharma kosha and on Yashomitra his commentator Minayeff Evlvain Lévi Max Walleser and La Vallée Poussin have exercated extracts from Yashomitra's Twakhya or commentary which atill exists in the Sanskrit original, the kosha steelf having anreived to us only in Chinese and Tibetan translations. Manuscripts of the Vyakhya are to be found at least in Cam bridge and Paris and it would be worthy of any patron of Indian learning to secure the services of an erquite scholar like Sylvain Levi to prepare a critical edition with an illuminating introduction similar to his prefixed to the Alankara entra of Ashanga Burnouf calls the Abhidharma kesha an inexhaustible mine of valuable information on the speculative side of Buddhism. As regards Yashomitra s expository art an example may be interesting: 'This is the view of those who follow the Abhidharma but it is not that of curelves, the Sautrantikas The tradition informs us, in fact, of the existence of other works on the Abhidharma like, for instance the Inana prasthana of Katyayaniputra Prakaranapada of the Elder Vasumitra Vijnana kaya of the Elder Devasharma the Dharmaskandha of Shariputra Prajnapti Shastra of Mandgalyayana, Dhatukaya of Purna, Saugitiparyaya of Maha Kushthila Now what is the meaning of the word Sautrantikas? This is the appellation of those who take for their authority the sutras and not the books. But, if they do not take for their authority the books, how do they admit the triple division of the text into Sutra, Vinaya and Abhidharma pitakas? In fact, the Abhidharma is spoken of in the sutras in connection with the question of a monk familiar with the Tripitakas. And this is not surprising, since there are several sutras like the Arthavinishcaya and others under the heading of Abhidharma, in which Abhidharma is defined. To reply to this objection our author (Vasubandhu) says: Abhidharma was expounded by Bhagavad along with other subjects."

The text leaves no doubt as to meaning of the term Sautrantikas It is a designation of those who follow the doctrine according to which the authority of the sutra is paramount.

The designation of Vaibhashika is not less familiar to our author. The commentary also cites the Yogacaras. Yashomitra is also acquainted with the Madhyamikas, one of the four great sects of which we have detailed information of a historical nature, the three others being Sautrantikas, Vaibhashikas and Yogacaras.

The Abhidharma kosha enjoys considerable authority among all the religious sects of the Buddhists, since it is considered to be the corpus of a large number of elucidated texts, and its author Vasubandhu was called a sage like unto the second Buddha Yashomitra's commentary or Vyakhya is known as the Sphutartha In a cursory analysis of the work our attention is directed to three principal points. First, the system of the commentator, secondly, the indications which he gives of works not connected with the subject of his commentary, and thirdly, his treatment of the subject itself,

As regards the system of Yashomlica, he belongs to the sune rior school of Indian exercises. He possesses all the resour. ces of the Sanskrit language of which he makes an excellent use for the elucidation of Nasubandhu s text. His glosses are grammatically corect and philosophically acute diction be follows the grammatical school of Panini, In his philosophy Le pursues the expanded autra texts. He express ly denominates himself Sautranitala. We do no naturally possess all the authorities on which he relies hathomiten a labours represent that service to Italdhim which is ren ler ed by the philosephical treatises of the Brahmanas to the Le das which ther eite at every step. Lashomitra assum a the trinle director of the Bullbist sent tures -the three Baskets or Tripitalise He refere gretty frequintly to lost works, To the more eminent of his authoratics he prefixes the epithet Arra (n ble) or Sthavira (filter) They were the apostles or the early fathers of the Huddhlst Church according to the sanctity of their dieta. The quotations of hashomitra are sometimes exhaustive at others brief. They witness to his immense reading and orthodoxy. I fascinating study is afforded by the comparison of texts of the authorities quoted by Lashomitra with the Lalis reptures, La Lall when has unearthed a number of passance of verbal identity. That the strict definition of the primitive body of Huddhist scriptures was not rigidly adhered to but that the expounders of the Vinaya Sutra and Abhldharma proceeded more or less in a general war is established by the lenend of bumagadha which in the Tibetan is incorporated with the sutra litera ince whereas according to Lashamitra it related to Vinava The concord, however between the Sanskrit and the Tibetan is perfect.

Among the noteworthy Elders alluded to as Ashvanit, so generally to be met with in the Sanskrit texts from Aepal. We also come across Dharmatrata and Buddhadeva Further we encounter more frequently Gunamati and his disciple Vasumitra who both preceded Yashomitra as expositors of Vasubandhu's Abhidharma kosha Next we notice Sanghabhadra, Bhadanta Shrilabaha, Arya Dharmagupta, Achaiya Manoiatha and Bhadanta Ghoshaka Bhadanta signifies that the name following it belongs to a Buddhist particularly respectable for his learning And Yashomitia thus comments on the specific Buddhist term

"Bhadanta, says the text, this is a certain Elder of the school of sutras or it was his own name But Bhagavad-vishesha alleges that this title is a designation of the Elder Dharmatrata To this we on our part ieply. The Elder Dharmatrata maintains the existence of things past and future, he belongs neither to the school of the sutras nor to the school of Darshtantikas; (after further elaborate argument Yashomitra concludes) all this goes to show that Bhadanta of our text means to suggest a person of the sutra school other than Dharmatrata. It suggests a certain Elder or a monk whose name has not been specified."

There are two or three titles of books which seem to be of non-Buddhistic origin, $e\,g$, Nirgrantha shastra, which was probably a Jaina work. There is also an allusion to the Shatarudriya of Vyasa, no doubt a Brahmanical treatise

Among the heretical sects mentioned by Yashomitra are Pandaras, Pashupatas, and Kapalikas Moreover he refutes the Vaisheshikas He admits that the Buddhists were by no means agreed on a number of disputed philosophical questions At the same time he mentions its existence where unanimity among the Buddhists prevailed He states, for example, that the hemanta or winter (November-December) is the first of the seasons for all Buddhists Those schools, which he cites the most often either for the purpose of refutation or for entering his own doctrinal protest, are the Buddhists of Kashmir and Ceylon and the Vatsiputriyas The Kashmiras are of frequent occurrence. They are stigmatised as Out siders. They are described as recent arrivals from Lashmir But the expression here used is ambiguing for it may os well mean the Westerners. Any was it is eleve that our book was produced in India and prolably in a province to the east of Kashmir In one passage the Cevian Buddhists are thus referred to The text (of Vasuliandhu) says in all the other books which means to say that in the bucks of the Baddhists of Covice and others, ' From this it is evident, that the Coy lon nilayer were known to the Buddhists of the north and that they were of sufficient importance in the eye of the latter to be ested by them, It appears that there wer certain Vatamutrivas who were also Madhyamikas From the fact that I ashomitra mentions and combats the views of Nagar jung or Norgseno It is clear that he lived posterior to the times of the founder of the new school. The third Buddhist Council is referred to an the Trativam Dharmasommiam.

The method of lashomitra does not lend itself to a reconstruction of the text of lashomidhu his own exposition being so co-mingled with the words of the author whom he interprets. Vasubandhu's own work was itself in the nature of a commentary for lashomitra states: Many of the sutras have been emitted because the exercise of the texts has been lost and accordingly the Master has written no commentary. The Master is obviously Vasubandhu.

At the lowest estimate Yashemitra a 1 yakhya is a compilation of texts and philosophical interpretations. The comcates of the volume are: The chief characteristics of beings, of conditions or of laws—for the word "Dharma" signifies all these things; the senses the elements sensation and perception; the sequence of acts and effect the offections, hatred, error and other moral modifications; human birth, destroy, the fruit of works, and the passage of man along diverse paths of existence, the various degrees of virtue and intellig ence to which man can attain in this world, the action of the organs of sense in respect of perception and the conditions which accelerate or retard the said action, man and woman considered from the physical standpoint, passions and the necessity of suppressing them, on pleasure and pain and the necessity of breaking away from them for the attainment of Nirvana, which is the perfection of absolute repose, the conditions of human existence and the functions of the organs, pravritti, or action and nirvritti or quiescence, the various degrees of humanity with regard to education and the relative perfection of human senses, supernatural faculties, the passage of superior intelligence through the various degrees of existence, the devas and the numerous classes into which they are divided, the infernos and the worlds. These subjects, none of which is examined in a consecutive method nor in a dogmatical manner, are jumbled up and the same matter discussed in several connections in the work The doctrine of the book is manifestly that of the most ancient school of Buddhism which was atheistic. On the question of the existence of God it has a very striking passage which leaves no doubt as to the tendency of the work or at least the belief of the commentator Yashomitra. It illustrates how the celebrated critic discusses questions when he permits himself the liberty to digress

"The creatures are created neither by Ishvara, nor by Purusha (spirit) nor by Pradhana (matter) If God was the sole cause, whether that God was Mahadeva, Vasudeva or another, whether spirit or matter, owing to the simple fact of the existence of such a primoidial cause, the world would have been created in its totality at once and at the same time For, it cannot be admitted, that there should be a cause without an effect, but we see the creatures coming into existence not simultaneously, but successively, some from wombs, some from buds. Hence we have got to conclude, that there is a series of causes and that God is not the sole cause But it is objected, that this diversity of causes is due to the volition of the Delty, who says ' Let now such and such a creature be born let another creature be born in such and such a way" It is in this way that is to be explained tha phenomenon of the appearance of creatures and that it is proved that God is the cause of them all To this we reply that to admit several pels of volution in God is to admit several eauses and that to make this admission is to destroy the first hypothesis according to which there is one primor dial cause Moreover, this plurality of causes could not have been produced except at one and the same time since God, the source of the distinct acts of volition, which have produced this variety of couses is Himself olono and indivisible The sons of Shokya bold that the evolution of the world has no beginning "

γ /

This passage is remarkable in many woys. It shows how far removed was the theory which it expresses from the panthesistic naturalism of the Brahmanic erreds. The fact that Yashomitra cities the Shafrites, the Vaishnavites and other theistic schools but does not combat the later analogous Bud dhistic creed of the Adibuddha, which was tantamount to a sort of monotheism demonstrates the non-existence of the said sect in Buddhism in his time 'These considerations lead ma to think concludes Burnonf that the work of Vasuhandhu (Vasumitra is obviously an oversight on Burnouf's part) with the commentary of Yashomitra which ac companies it are both anterior in time to the period when was established in Buddhism the creed of a Supreme God." (For attack on theists see Shantideva's Bodhi e v p 135.)

Bendall (Catalogue of Buddhist Manuscripts p 25) describing the Cambridge Manuscript of Abbidharma kosha Vyakhya by Yashomitra, saya that it is an accurate copy The accuracy and the great value of the work may be judged from the fact that, firstly, it was the only copy of the work existing in Nepal, and secondly, that the owner before parting with it had a copy made for himself. The Abhidharma kosha was translated into Chinese in 553 and again in 654.

The contents of the V-yakhya are somewhat differently set forth by Rajendralal Mitra (Nepal Bud p 4)

ALL SIGNAUN

REFLEENCE TO BUDDHISM IN BRAHMANICAL AND JAIN WRITINGS

References to the Buddha and this Order are very rare in Sanskrit literature so scarce are they that though Holtz main (Geschichte and Kritik d.« Malabharata p. 103) has callected a few passages in which Buddhism is referred to be is inclined to believe that the Brahmans deliberately efaced all memory of the Buddha appropriating to themselves all that was convenient in his particular teaching. In all Rama vana the Buddha is mentioned in one place only which however is regarded as an interpolation by Schlegel and Weber. There is scarcely anything specially Buddhistic in the "Oth chapter of Shankaravijasa which is devoted to linddhamatanirakarana. The Sarvadarshana Singraha gives but a belated version of Gautama's doctrine.

The Hambacarda (n. 26, 6) has naturally more refer ences to find thism because king Harsha was partial to the faith But the narticular passage which I have in mind I am inclined to look upon (with all diffidence) more as a derisire allusian than appreciation of the doctrine The three refuges are mentioned as having been resorted to by monkers; the law as being expounded by Vayanas and it is the owls which reneat the Rodhughapataka while the explaining of the hosha is left to mere parrots Here and there however we must not omit to mention some glimpses of unaffected admiration. The doctrine of Shakva Mani is the family home of pits ' (p. 244) Calm in mind like Buddha himself ' (n 56) The Buddha doctrine which drives away worldly nassiona" (text p 289) There is also a reference to the Sarrasticadi school in Bana a hadambari (text p 106 Trans. lation p 112) It may be incidentally noted that it is difficult to see why Professor K B Pathak contends that "Bana is misunderstood and mistranslated by Professor Macdonell", when he speaks of "pious parrots expounding the Buddhist dictionary" The text has "paramopasakarhishukarhiapi shakya shaskana kushalaih kosham samupiadishadbhihi (Harshacarita p 317) The Kosha is undoubtedly the Abhidharma kosha of Vasubandhu as the learned professor has himself noticed The Buddha is referred to in the Bhagavata purana (1, 3, 24) and Vishnu purana (111, 17, 18) derogatorily However, there is one book in Sanskrit which treats of the Buddha and his doctrine without hostility or derision. It is the Buddhavatara of Kshemendra The Sotapatti, the Sakkadagami, the Anagami and the Aihat of the Pah are enimerated and the Saddhaima described without animus and the Buddha is spoken of in his favourite role of spiritual healer "bhavabhishag Bhagavan babhashe" (63) I came across more than one MS of interest in this respect in the numerous catalogues of Sanskrit MSS in the various Indian libraries. Among the books acquired for Government by the late Dr. Peterson we notice three Buddhist tracts including the Nyayabındu tıka (407) As regards Dharmottara's commentary on the Nyayabındu there is the pathetic note by the Professor Examining the Jain bhandar he says with reference to the book "It is the only Buddhist work in the old library (of Shantinath at Cambay). I have already tried to convey to the reader something of that sense of ruin and desolation which must flow into the mind of him who, in this empty temple, turns over these records of human faith and love and sollow Here in the midst of it all is one solitary suivival of a still older shade of a yet greater religion," a 1emark as true to-day as it was when Peterson noted that the recovery of this book was a new justification of the importance which has been attached to these records, as "it is a fresh pledge of the mestimable wealth which still lies buried below the surface in India " (p 33) In the same report there

According to Peterson, the Chandragopi in Vallabhadeva may be Chandragomi (p. 36).

Vallahadeva has many verses attributed to Dharmakirti, who is called Bhadanta (p 47) There is another Bhadanta called Dhiranaga (p 49), and another still Bhadanta Prajashanti (p 60) There is a poet called Bodhisattva (p 543), Ralhulaka (p 104), and Bhadanta Sura who may be our Aryashura of the Jatakamala (p 131)

The Sharanga-dhaia-paddhati quotes Kshemendia (p 95) Also Dhaimakiiti's one shloka of a Buddhistic flavour (p 150), Bhadanta Jnana-vaima (p 155), Vararuci (p 473) and (p 515), Bhadanta-vaima (p. 522) and Rahulaka (p 587)

The following Buddhist works occur in the Catalogus Catalogorum of Aufrecht Bauddha dushana, Bauddha Dhikkara, Bauddha mata, Bauddha mata dushana

"References to Buddhist authors in Jama Literature," by G K N, Ind Aut 1913, (p 241)

According to Telang Buddhists are not found in Sanskrit literature because they are confounded with Jamas, (Telang's Mudrarakshasa XVI, XVII)

A palm leaf MS of Vararuci's work is still preserved in the Jain Matha at Kolhapur in which the grammarian laments the rejection of Buddhism (See Pathak's papers read before B B R A S, Bhamaha's attacks on Jinendiabuddhi, &c)

Vinashvaia-nandi is another writer whose work is also preserved in the same Matha and who salutes the Buddha in the commencement of his work. For reconstructions of Sanskrit Buddhist texts from Chinese transcriptions see "One more Buddhist hymn" by G. K. Nariman, Ind. Ant, 1913, (pp. 240-1)

A new list of Buddhistic Sanskrit words" by Lévi ond Narimon Ind Ant 1913 (p 179)

For Buddhism in Brahmanie literoture see the Bhamati of Vacaspati Misra. It is curious that the views regarding Buddhism as elited and combated by these Brahmanical writers, occord with Iapanese Buddhism of to-day Max Wolleser is inclined to identify the Sangiti paryoya with the Dhommanangani according to the tradition of the Japanese sect of hou Cha-Shu which is based on the Abhidharma hoslin of Vasubandhu (Die philosoph Grundlage des Buddhismus p 5)

For Shankora's refutotion of Buddhism see his commentary on the Badaravana autras 11 2 18-3' corresponding to pp 516-581 in the Calentia edition. On the doctrine of non-ego see page 74 For doubts regording the consistency of the Buddha's doctrine oce page 77 For a literol concord of the Sanskrit Abhidharma kosha with Pall sources (p 7') see especially the passages noted by La Vollée Poussin Dog matique Bouddhique J.A. Sept—Oct 1902 In Hinen tsiang stime the Mohayana was considered identical with Shunya vada (p 102) Specific Mahayanistic influences were already at work in the later Poli literature (p 116) The Jinan prasthana of Katyayan is cited by the Poli school as Mabapakarana e.g., by Buddhaghosha in his atthe atimi (p 146)

Baddhist material is of time to be met with in the Sanskrit Koshas or lexicous

The following has been gleened from the Abhidhona Sangraka of the Nirnaya Sangra Press. The Amara Kosha naturally has o good deel Buddhistic because the author was most prehably not a Jaina, but a Buddhist. He refers to mithya drishti nahrava sanshraya, chaliya pravachana par yaya, Maskori. Trikanda sherka is also rich in Buddhist terminology It mentions karanda Vyuho prayne paramita, ma gadhi, agoms, nikaya, sutra. The Abdhidhana Cintamoni refers to the thirty-four jatakas, ten paramitas, ten bhumis (stages), bhadanta, bhattaraka, Maskaii, shunyavadi, caitya vihara The Anekaitha Sangiaha has avadana (1528), Katyayana and Vararuci (1639), Avalokita as a synonym of the Buddha (1733).

APPENDIX VII NOTES ON THE DIVYAVADANA. (By G K, N)

The Dirivaredana when closely studied will be found to abound in expressions ideas and principles identical with those in the Pall Pitalas This store house of information has been thrown open to us by various scholars in connection with the several problems of Buddhism And I will give here a few points that have struck me in my own study of the work. As is well known and has been proved by means of the Chinesa version the Dirwaradana is the Linaya of Sar vostivadi school. The language of the Divyoradana though Sanskrit offends now and then ogainst classical rules of Panini, but ' these inaccuracles, like those which occur in the Mahabharafa 'may be interesting for the history of the language Udanom udanavots is often found in Poli (n 2) The component parts of the work are of unequal age That portions of the Dicygradana are not very old is evident from the frequent mention in it of the art of writing e g., aksharani abhalikhitani (p 6) In this work we often find a record of the attacks on Buddhism and the great disferent with which the Buddhistic monks were held among the Brahmons, and more especially the Joinas The general obusive colthets are mundalah shramanakah (p. 13) end amangalah (p. 39) Whether the body of the Buddhistic scripture was originally divided into Askawas as in the Pali canon, as doubtful. Tho older term seems to be agama but the latter does not appear after the fifth century as olleged by Rhya Davids. We find it in the Abhidharma kosha vyakhna of Yashomitra side with the term Alkaya The Divyguadane more than once sneaks of the agama catushtaya (p. 17) Of frequent occur rence is the term as at page 16 Several important texts cor responding to the Pall are mentioned, shoilogatha muni-gatha and the arthavargiyani (p. 20). According to the Abhidharma-kosha-vyakhya, 'arthavargiyani sutrani kshudrake pathyante" whereas the corresponding Pali Mahavagga (V. 13, 9) refers to the Book of Eighths (see JRAS 1906, p 946, but see now the illuminating recitation primitive by Sylvain Lévi, JA 1915, p 418) The celebrated verse, which puzzled some scholars turns up in the Divyavadana, 'samyoga vipi ayoganam maranantashca nvitam.' (p 27). Another set of books is quoted at page 35, viz, sthavu agatha, to which corresponds no doubt the Pali Theragatha and the Shailagatha, munigatha and the arthavargiyam. The corresponding Pali of Ehi bhikkhu cara brahmacaryam is obvious (p 36). That not only nu vana, as in Pali, but also the parinu vana was to be attained in this life, is seen from the exhortation to Purna, Gacchatwam Purna makto mocaya tirnastaraya ashvasta ashvasaya parınırvapaya (p. 39) Was the service of the Buddha with flowers and incense so early as is described at page 43? A glimpse of social life, mansions corresponding to the three seasons and the conventional mode of bringing up of a wealthy house-holder's child can be had at page 58 As regards Kashyapa it is said. Shakya muneh parımırıttasya anena shasana sangıtılır hrita (p. 61), which reference to the first Council may give us some clue as to the date of the work. The usual formula in invitation to the Buddha to dinner and his acceptance of it by silence corresponds exactly to the Palı and is of frequent occurrence in this book eg, pp 64-65) The Pali rules, however, strictly prohibit the asking for alms, but in our book the not uncommon phrase is yadı te bhagını parıtyaktam aktıyatam asmin patie (pp 67, 82, 88) The formula advagiena yavajjivanam pranopetam sharanam gatam, strictly speaking, prohibits the return of the Bhikshu to the world, which is, however, permitted both in practice and theory in the Pali canon. That the Divyavadana is a vinaya, is seen again from etat prakaranam blirkshavo bhagavata arocayabti (p. 84).

Bhogavan aka tasmat anusanams &c (p 89) This has an exact counterpart in Pali almost in every sutto. The Buddha was given various offerings during his lifetime including lamps of which we do not meet any mention in the Pali (p. 90) tailasya stokam yacaystva pradipam prajvalya bhagavatah cantrame dattah (p. 90) Cankrama, of course is the path in the monastery un and down which the monks walk for exercise Covarapindapatashayana asana alana pratyana bhamhama paruhkara are the same as in Pali (n 91) In Buddhistic text as a rule the Kahatriya takes precedence of the Brahmana but in one place in our book we bhikshusanaho Bhagavan bhikshugana parsvrsto puraskritak sambahulaisca shravasti nivasibhirbania Brah mana arihapati bhihucasardham (p. 93). Bhagavata tesham ashayanushyam prakritinca inatya tadrishi dharmadeshana Armia wom shruive &e as biteral translation of the original stock on which Pale also has faithfully drawn. We have some passages but the arts and crafts of old India, and the gene ral culture of a wealthy youth is described at page 100 The great influence of the tenets of the Buddha and the corresponding fear among the Brahmans of the spread of his doctrine of cellbery is perpetuated at page 126 Here is the olear echo of the opposition offered to the Buddha whose goapel was not promulgated so smoothly and without restraint, as may be inferred from the majority of the Pali books in which sermon after sermon ends in the conversion of thou sands of human and non-human beings: Remlyushmakam skramano Gautamah karoti, sopi pravrajito yuyam api prayrantah bhikshacarah (p. 126). We also see further the door being closed in the Buddha's face Once more the Vinsua rale Bhagavata oiram dharmam deshayato bhojanakalo atikrantah Mendhako grihapatih kathayati Bhagayan kun akale kalpate. Bhagwan aha ghrita gudha saharkara panalans cets (p 180) Thus we find here, that there were certain akala khadaniyas and akala panakas The peculiarity of Pratyeka Buddhas is mentioned (p. 133). The Buddha's smile and its significance (p. 138) There is the complete list of the six leaders of philosophy who were the contemporaries of the Buddha, whom we so often meet with in Pali, (for instance, in the Brahmajala sutta), Purana kashyapa Maskari goshaliputra, Sanjayi variattiputra, Ajita keshakambali, Kakudha katyayana and Ningrantha, Inatiputra (p. 143).

There is an express repudiation of any desire to teach the occult spiritualism or miracles Aham evam shravakanam dharmam deshayamı, &c (p. 150) On the same page we find the dasha avashya karamyani A clear polemical tone of the times is found in the gatha placed in the mouth of the Bud-Tavat avabhasate krimu yayan nodayate divakarah, &c (p 163) Note the degraded sense in which tarkikas are used as sophists The same story gives an amusing description of the discomfiture of the opponents of the Buddha who, when they had heard the challenging gatha, anyonyam vighatayanta evem ahu, tvam uttishtha tvam uttistha iti (p 163) Buddha's creed is summed up in the following · Yestu Buddhanca dharmanca sanghanca sharangatah, arya satyani catvarı pashyantı, &c (p 164) There is a slight reference to the Jamas at page 165, which breathes of odium theologicum. Asthanan anavaksho, &c (p 175), is pure Palism. The ten balas, the four vaishi adays, &c, as in Pali at page 182 That the generality of people were not free from the use of m. toxicants is attested to by the 13th story, where a sermon is preached against madyapana and its effects on the unfortunate victim (p. 190) Akalpam va tishtheta kalpavasesham va (p 201) This is a reference to the now celebrated passage in Pali which, according to Edmonds, has a parallel to the Eon of the New Testament But the whole passage beginning with yasmin Bodhisatya at page 204 has a parallel in the Mahavastu (I,240) and in the Majjhima mkaya (III, 252) sumatinaca tiini pitakani adhitani, (p. 253) The ninth story is specially worth studying because of its delineation of Jama hostilities. At page 258 we have a last of the Buddha s principal disciples, most of whom are to be found in Pali, via Ainuata kaundinya Ashvant Kashyapa Mahanama Bhadika Shareputra Maudaaluayana Yashas Purna The stock passage describing the up-bringing of a noble child found so often in the Avadana skataka as well as in the Pall occurs again at page 271 A testimony to the terror of social excommunication occurs in the threat; Nocet sayam tram inglimadhyat nikshipamaha (p. 272) There is a highly important reference to the sthavira or The rayade school and to their Sutrantas. In fact there seems to be a direct quotation from the Pali work. Tatha sthawr aurapi upanibbhadham (read so with Oldenberg as against the meaningless 'upanirbadham of the text p 274) There is a distluct prohibition of cultivation of miraculous powers as is laid down in Pali No bhilshung agarikasya purastat rdkir vidarskavitava, darskavati satisaro bhavati (p. 270) That the Diviguadana is not the original book, but a com pilation from various sources is evident from many places especially from eshy eva grantho vistarena Larlavijah (n 285) Almost every Pali Suttanto begins with the for mula evan me sutam, about the suspected antiquity of which attention has been drawn by Kern. The 20th chapter in fact commences with evam maya shrutam (p. 290) More refer ence to writing and hor (pp 300-301) An easy way to sal vation seems to have already taken root in the minds of the Buddhist community even in the lifetime of the Buddha A candidate for salvation being advised to undergo the pravrajya inquires, arya kim tatra pravrajyayani kriyate and is told, yayat sivam brahmacaryam caryate The sandidate objects arya na shakyam etat anyasti uapayah? Rhadra mukha, asti, Upasako bhava Arya kim kriyate? Bhadramukka. yavat jivam pranatipate prativiratih samrakshija &c. Arya etadapi nashakyate, anya upayah kathaya Bhadramukha Budhapramukham bhikshusangham bhajaya &c., (p. 803)

The beginning of the 23rd story is unfortunately missing. But it is clear that it contains allusion to the Anguttaranikaya. The principal divisions of the Buddhist canon are described in the same story, and mention is made of sutra, matrika, besides samyukta Madhayama, dirgha and ekottarika, agamas, (p 333) The Brahmanavarga of which Sangharakshita makes svadhyaya, evidently refers to a portion of the probably the chapter 111 the Dhammapada. The celebrated Nagar opama sutrais referred 340 How t.o at page far old tradition of the acts of the Buddha was faithfully preserved upto and after the times of Ashoka, is illustrated by the 27th story As Foucher has shown, the sacred spots of Buddhism were then common knowledge of both Pali and non-Pali school's The passage beginning with vivilatam papakarh akushslarh dharmarh is a clear reproduction of the original text of which Pali version is of too frequent occurrence to be specified (p 391) The "middle path" of the Buddha was ridiculed by his opponents as impossible to lead to salvation, being too worldly and luxuious People were in fact scandalised, and the hostile satile is again characteristic of the objection to the practices of Buddhism, which were considered to be not sufficiently rigid to suit an ascetic life bhuktva annam saghritam prabhutapishitam dadhuyttamalankrıtam Shakyeshu indriya nigrahoyadıbhavet Vindhyak plavetsagare (p 420) The important point to be observed is that they are, even at this comparative remote period, accused of eating flesh, which is clearly in conformity with indifference on this point shown by the Buddha (p. 420). Buddha and Jama animosities are further attested to the 20th story, where we are told that a certain Jama scandalised the Buddha by drawing the picture of the Buddha in the act of making obeisance to the Nirgrantha (p. 427). That India was not altogether free from religious persecution, is evident from some of these old legends themselves.

About Pushvamitra it is stated that he proclaimed yo no dinara shashtam shramanashira dasuati tasnakam darvages (p. 434) The Shadvargiyas who are the constant instigators of mischief in Pali occur in our book at page 489 The 36th story furnishes another example of the difficul ties which the Buddha had to encounter in the propagation of his gospel. A certain Bhikshu repudiates the teaching and the discipline which he had received from the Buddha and severs his connection with Buddhism in these terms Idancha te patram, idancha civaram imanca shiksham scavameta dharaya (p. 520) Though the first line does not seem to have come down to us correctly, the manner of the Brahman and his contemptuous repudiation of Buddhism leave us no doubt of his meaning. There is another suire ti., Rakshan sulru quoted at pago 524 Certain portions of Divigaradana are of late origin, one of which is the 36th story There we find the Buddha s discourses were not only committed to hooks but that even women, rairan pradipena Buddhoracanam pathonts (p. 532) The several portions of scripture and the doctrines mentioned in the 37th story are interesting in that some at least of them have no correspond ence in Pail (p 549) In the same story we have reference to sharirapuja" or relic worship and the erection of stupa over the relics (n 551) The general Pali formula anaityam, dukham and anaima ' but we find in the Divyavadana the fourth factor added, an, shunyata" (p 568)

NOTES.

Note to p 1.

Formerly the mixed Sanskrit was called the Onthe dis lect. Sénart JA 1882 xix 238 1886 vli 318 kern SBE 21 xiv Bühler Fp Ind 1 1892 239 377; Ep Ind II 34; Hoernla and Bhandarkar Ind Ant 12 Ind Ant 17 1883, p 36 J Wackernagel Alt Indische Grammatik xxxxix.

We awe our first knowledge about this literature which is principally found in Nepal to Brian Hanghton Hodgson who lived in Nepal from 1821 to 1813 and distinguished himself equally as a statesman geographer zaologist ethnographist and investigator of Indian languages and antiqui ties. Through his instrumentality numerous Buddhist mannecripts were deposited in the Indian and European libraries especially in Paris where they were examined by the eminent schalar Eugene Barnouf (Introduction à l'histaire du Bauddhisme Indien 1876) About the time (1874) he was mak ing such important discoveries relating to our knowledge of Huddin t literature, the celebrated Hungarian Alexander Csama de Karos who had made the murney from llungary to Tibet an foat started his enquiries into the Buddhist litera inro of the latter country. Shortly after him George Turnour attacked the I ali literature of Cevlon, Rajendralal Mitra reported an the contents of numerous Buddhist-Sanskrit manuscripts in his Sanskel Buddhest Islerature of Venal 1882 C Bendall gave us his catalogue of Buddhist Manus cripts in Cambridge 1883

The Tibetan translations of banskrit books are described by Koros in the Asiatic Researches volume 20 1836 and by L. Feer Annales du Musee Guinet 1893. The principal work on Chinese translations from Sanskrit is Bunio Nanjio a Catalogue of the Chinesa translation of the Buddhist Tripitaka, 1887 (Winternitz)

Note to p. 5.

"OUTLINES OF MAHAYANA BUDDHISM."

(By T Suzuki)

"The first Shiksha forbids the killing of any living being, but the Bodhisattva does not hesitate to go to war, in case the cause he espouses is right and beneficent to himanity at large (p 71)"

The two kinds of knowledge or truth distinguished by the Madhyamika philosophy (p 95, p 97, p 101)

The completely neglective nature of Madhyamika is illustrated by the opening Sutra

There is no death, no birth, no destruction, no persistence, no oneness, no multitude, no coming, no departing (p 103)

The emperor of China in 535, having become a devout Buddhist, turned to the founder of the Dhyana school in China and asked, "I have dedicated so many monasteries, copied so many sacred books and converted so many people; what do you think my merits amount to?" The master of Dhyana replied "no merit whatever" (p 104)

The Surangamasutra was translated twice into Chinese and once entirely transliterated (p '157)

Note to p. 5.

The Atmavada, or the theory of the soul, is sometimes proclaimed by the Buddhists themselves apparently without their being conscious of the gross contradiction which it involves to their cardinal principle of philosophy. It is related in our Tibetan sources derived from India (Wassiheff p 57) that towards his end Dhitika convened the priests in the kingdom of Maru to an assembly to condomn the doctrine of a certain Vataa who asserted the reality of the soul. It is the same Distification who came from Ujjayini and succeeded as a teacher Upagupta, the renowned contemporary of Ashoka and the licad of the elders at the Council of Petaliputa and a contemporary of King Milinda of Bak tria. Hence the recognition of the anatmarada as decisive for adherence to Buddhism must have been set up—N

Note to p 5

DIE PHILOSOPHISCHE GRUNDLAGE DES AELIEKEN BUDDHISMUS

(By Max Welleser)

Walleser divides the development of Buddhism into three stages; the first is the primitive realistic indifferentism, the second is idealism or minitism, that is the Shunyevada, which is associated with the name of Nagarjuna and the third subjective idealism of the Vijnanavadis which is et tributed to Asanga, the brother of Vasubandhu.

The passage which yields this remarkable information is found in the fifth chapter of the Sandhi Nirmecana (Tibetan and Chinese translations) (p 4)—N

Note to p 7

Lalitavistara translated by Foncaux Senart has discovered a hark manuscript in the Punjab centaining an arithmetical treatise in the gatha dialect which shows that it was at one time a literary language (p 3) According to the Mahavansa the original scriptures of Buddhism were in verse (p 4)—N

Note to p. 8.

International Congress of Orientalists, Paris, 1894.

Sanskrit-Buddhist manuscript from Burma describing Buddhist cosmology according to the Mahayana school by Herbert Baynes (p. 127)

Notes on the Pancakrama by La Vallée Poussin (p. 137) and the same book report Pali inscriptions from Magadha or Behar by Cecil Bendall. The Ashatamahashri Chaitaya stotra of the King Haisha Shiladitya is given in the Chinese text and the reconstructed original Sanskrit by Sylvain Lévi (p. 189). N.

Note to p. 8.

Le bouddhisme au Japon by J Doutremer, RHR p 121, 256, 1916.

Kashmir and the neighbouring countries are probably the home of the Mula Sarvastivada literature See Sylvain Lévi in the foreword to a very interesting study of his pupil Przyluski on the Buddha in the North-West India (JA. 1914, p. 494)

On Pancaraksha see the geographical list in the Mahamayuri JA, 1915, 19 For an Ouigour version of the story of the Wise man and the Fool see JA, 1914, Pelliot proves that the Chinese Mo-ni is Mani He makes further a most interesting observation, namely, that there is a sufficient number of Chinese texts which concern the Nestorians and the Mazdians (JA, 1914, p 461) Shall we ever get at any of these Zoroastrian texts in Chinese in a European translation? For the Sanskrit text of the Pratimoksha of the Sarvastivadi school see Finot and Huber, JA, 1913, p 465 N.

Note to p 11.

MAHAVASTU, VOLUME I.

The full title of the book is given at page 2 which may be translated—The Mahavastn section of the Vinayapitaka of the recension of the branch of the Wahamughikaa called the Lokottaravadis of the Madhyadcaha. Brahman hespitality the story of Malini (p. 307) Example of the Sanskrit restitution of a Pali form (p. 2. hue 15.) Textual resemblance with Lalitavistara (p. 229 line 6.)—N

MARAVASLU, VOLUME IL

Shedy side of Buddhist character history of Shyame (p 68) -- N

MAHAVASTU VOLUME III.

Frample of superiority of the Sanskrit (Mahavastu) texts to the Pali (p. 191) Example of I ali tradition interfering with the text (p. 401) Example of the Sanskrit (Mahavastu) text heing superior to the Pall (p. 417).—N

MAHAVASTU

Professor Windisch has discussed the sources of Sanskrit Mahavasta (Ed. Senart) in a special monograph Dishomponition des Mahavasta (Lelpzig 1909) which furnishes us with a series of Pall parallels to Sanskrit Buddhistic writings. The Mahavasta is a portion of Vinayapitaka according to the recension of the Madhyadeshikas helonging to the Lokottaravadi sect of the Mahasanghikas (Arya Mahasangikeuam Lokottaravadinam Madhyadeshikanam pathena vinaya pitakasya mahavastuyeadı, Vol I, p 2.) The Madhyadesha comprises the sixteen countries of Northern India from Kamboja and Gandhara in the West to Magadha and Anga in the East (Anguttaranıkaya Tıkanıpata, 70, 17) In this monograph we find a number of interesting parallels. The usual Pali formula of admission to the Order as in the Mahavagga (1, 6, 32) runs as follows.

"Labheyaham bhante bhagavato santike pabhajjam, labheyam upasampadan ti, hi bhikkhu ti bhagava avoca, svakkhato dhammo, cara brahmacariyam samma dukkhassa antakiriyaya ti"

Identical phraseology is found in the corresponding Sanskrit canon as represented in the Divyavadana at p. 48, while the Mahavastu differs but little from both

In the course of the work Professor Windisch establishes that the Mahavastu issued from the Mahavagga This he proves by comparison of the first twenty-four chapters of the Mahavagga with the Mahavastu, which presents a number of passages of verbal identity. It may be noted, that in this respect the Lalitavistara also betrays close correspondence, but it is farther removed from the Mahavagga than the Mahavastu.

Oldenberg gives further illustrations of Pali gaps supplied by Sanskrit and interestingly points out how the transcriber of the manuscript omitted a line owing to two lines beginning with the same word (p 131) His conclusion on comparing the Pali and Sanskrit sources of the Mahavastu seems to be, that the Pali copy of the Sutras discussed is not always the more correct one, when it differs from the Northern version But the Northern text has undergone a revision, and has invested the text in numerous places with minor, and in a few places with larger, accretions and finally, that, where the positive standard for deciding is wanting, the Pali form may be adopted as the more probably correct (p. 141).—N

Note to p 19

Winternitz calls attention to a most remarkoble passage in the Lalitavistara (p. 142 of translation) whose Gopa the Shakya princess is expected to observe what we should call the purdah system.—N

The Lahtavistara was translated into Chinese in 587 by Janana Gupta but an earlier translation existed since 308 BEFEO 1905—N

Note to p 23

BUDDHA S GEBURT (Birth.)

Example of Pali and Sanskrit parallels.

An instance of words latterly put into the mouth of the Buddha, which were not uttered by himself (p 17) Vishnu, Shiva and other gods in the older Buddhist texts (p 32) Pali original of portions of Mahayastu and Lahltavistara (p 157) Here we see the influence of the destrine of Bhakti, with which we are familiar in the Bhogavod Gita and it is probable that it was the latter work which influenced the development of the Mahayana. Kern's Manual of Buddhism p 122 (p-4) The expression agams occurs also in the Pali canon Mahavagga; x 1 2 6 and Gullavagga 1 11 1 (p 9) Jataka Mala, edited by Kern, Harvard Oriental Series, Boston, 1901, translated by J S Speyer, 1895 Kern in the Fest-Gruss to Bohtlingk, 1888 S. d'Oldenburg, JRAS, 1893, 308; Barth, RHK 1893, 260 Watanabe, JPTS 1909, 263 J. J. Meyer has reproduced four tales of the Jataka Mala, Lotus Verlag, Leipzig. (p. 41.) N

Note to p. 23.

MARA AND BUDDHA.

The Northern books presume the existence of the Palitexts (p 1) Pali Padhanasutta translated into the Sanskrit Lalitavistara Probability of Sanskrit version being older than Pali (p 40) Though the theme may be the same, the Divyavadana, Lalitavistara and Mahaparnibbanasutta are not interdependent, but mutually independent (p 41) Most ancient form preserved by Lalitavistara and not by Mahaparnibbana (p 66) Example of the correct reading preserved in Sanskrit and the corrupt in Pali (p 108) Example of a complete Sanskrit translation from Pali (p. 330) N.

Note to p. 30.

I-tsing in his dictionally of a thousand Sanskrit-Chinese words translates the Sanskrit Parvata by po-fa-to. (BEFEO, 1905 p. 301.) N.

Note to p. 39.

AWAKENING OF FAITH IN THE MAHAYANA.

By T Suzuki

Beal thought that Anhvaghosha's writings, when examined, would probably be found to be much tinged with a pseudo-Christian element (p 42)

Suzuki thinks that there is an abundance of similar thaughts and passages in Asbraghosha and the Bhagavad gitn (p. 44)

Kern in his hi tory of Buddhism (German vol 2 p 500, fast nate) has indicated coincidences between the Bhagavad gita and Saddharma pundarika (p 41)

According to Suzuki Ashvaghosha refers to Sukhavati sutras so that the latter must at least be a couple of cen turies prior to Ashvaghosha (p. 50)

The Lankavatarasutra was translated first into Chinese by Bhamibbadra A D 413 then by Bodhiruelii A. D 513 and lastly by Shikshananda A D 700 704 (p 60)

An example of a great solemn now make providence occurs in Ashvaghousha see Suzuki (p. 142):

'May my mind be freed from all contradictions, may I abandon particularisation may I personally attend on all Buddhas and Bodhisattias whom I shall pay homage to, make offerings to revere and praisa and to whose instructions in the good doctrine (saddharma) I shall listen may I truthfully discipline myself according to their teachings and to the end of the future never be negligent in self-discipline; may I with innumerable expediencies (upaya) (af salvatian) deliver all beings who are drowned in the aca of misery, and bring them to the lighest blies of Nir vans."—N

Note to p 39

Some critical notes on Ashvaghasha'a Buddhacarita by J. S. Speyer (p. 105, JRAS, 1914)

Note to p. 39.

Saundarananda of Ashvaghosha by Vidyushekhara Bhattacharya (p. 747, JRAS, 1914)

Note to p. 39.

Uddyotakara, a contemporary of Dhaimakirti by S. C. Vidyabhushana (JRRS, p. 601, 1914)

Note to p. 47.

AVADANASHATAKA.

The Chinese translation is not of much use being rather free, abridged and with many omissions. The Tibetan translation is very literal and has proved of great value to Féer in his translation of the Sanskiit text into French. N.

Note to p. 60.

Notes on the language of the Dvavimshatya vadana katha by Turner (JRAS, 289, 1913)

Note to p. 62.

AVADANA-KALPALATA.

This work was translated into Tibetan in 1272 under the auspices of the spiritual guide of the Moghul Emperor Kublai Khan, the Tibetan version being executed with utmost literal accuracy. N

Note to p 64.

L'INFLUENCE DU BOUDDHISME

(By Nyonatiloka)

Do not be guided by rumonrs by that which is written in sacred books, by reason or deductions, which oppear to be reasonable or logical simply because of their external oppear ance by visions and reveries, by the oppearance of the possible do not believe because it is the ascetue or teacher who speaks but when by your personal conviction you recognise that such and such things are bed and to be rejected, that they are blamoworthy and that they are fit to be discarded that they lead to evil and to suffering, then you must reject them. (Anguitara Nikavo Tikanipto 69) (p. 7)

Offerings to the deed and the Paritta service in Japanese Buddhism, Khuddaka Patho by L. Siedenstucker (p. 85)

Classical example of ancient Buddhist adjuration bymn (p. 29)-N

Note to p 65

BAMGITI BULLA.

There are three seris of weapons —The weepon of what is heard of the Tipitake the weapon of quietness (Kaya viveka: Solitude Cittaviveka detachment of the mind from passions and upadhiviveko nirvana) and the weapon per taning to wisdom.—N

Note to p 79

On the Avatamaaka end the Mahasannipatta see Sylvam Lévi, Notes Chinoless sur L'Inde, (BEF LO 1905)—N

Note to p. 81

On the Patra or the Bowl of the Buddha destroyed by Hun Mihira Kula, (BEFEO, 1905, p. 297). N

Note to p. 89

MADHYAMAKAVATARA

(By Chandrakırtı)

Translated from the Tibetan by La Vallée Poussin, Le Muséon, volume II, No 34

The celebrated shloka nanyabhasaya mlecchah shakyo grahayitumyathana lankikam rte lokah cakyo grahayitum tatha is here traced to Aryadeva Professor K B Pathak in his paper on Vasudeva and Patanjali (p 2) cites a remarkably clear definition of Nirvana by two Buddhist writers Jayaditya and his commentator Jinendrabuddhi. N.

Note to p. 90.

MADHYAMIKASUTRAS,

with Candrakirti's Commentary.

Comparison of the Chinese and the Pali versions of the Brahmajalasutra (p 3) Agreements of Mahavastu and Majjhima (p 9) The dangers of Shunyavada (p 248) Inconsistency of the permission and prohibition regarding free thought (p 268) Rejection even of the middle path (p 270). La Vallée Poussin consistently searches for parallels which are sometimes of verbal agreement in Sanskrit and Pali The instances I have noted are at pp 1, 6, 9, 40, 41, 47, 63, 90, 145, 166, 297, 246, 263, 270, 292, 296, 297, 303, 306, 314, 331

Note to p 00

MADHYAMIKABHASTRA OF NAGARJUNA

(Translated from Tibetan by Max Walleser)

The older Buddhism was positive interwoven with scepticism end a goodly share of indifferentism, but the new phase which introduced itself as Mahayana, that is the greet vehicle in contrast with the elder or smaller vehicle of Hinayana, has by no means all the inner development, which is easily understeed as edvanced to the denial of ell phenomena p 3 Accordingly to Walleser the Akutobhaya commentery supplies a clue to the terminology and the dog matics of the preceding and contemporary Hinayana texts throwing light on the obscure relation between the Pali Abhidbarma and the Abhidharma kosha of Vasuhandhu, (p IV)

Owing to the perfect precision of the Tibetan translation and the systematic persistence with which it has been adhered to, the technical expressions being invariably translated by the same equivalents, it is possible almost to reconstruct in its literal entirety the original Sanskrit text of Nagarjina, (p V) N

Note to p. 95.

MAHAYANA SUTRALANKARA OF ASANGA.

The text and translation of the book are a magnificent illustration of Fiench scholarship. The author's familiarity with Chinese and Tibetan enables him to deal with the text much more efficiently than an authority, acquainted with Sanskrit alone would be in a position to do. All the gaps in the Sanskrit manuscripts are supplied from the Chinese translation which was made by the Hindu Prabhakara Mitra between 630 and 633 AD A noteworthy vindication of Devnagari character will be found at page 3 As I have maintain. ed before, the Cambridge edition of the Divyavadana and other texts would have gained in popularity in India had they not been printed in the Roman character As Sylvain Lévi says, the Devnagari editions reach a class of readers who are generally not taken into consideration by European scholars and yet who ment attention The example of European editors might stimulate emulation among the lamas and save from destruction or bring to light the texts which are in danger For Indianism, as Lévi contends, is by no means an empty exercise of dilettantism Beyond our linguistic, philological, political, religious and social problems, we have to have regard for the hundreds of millions of living cleatures who are affected by these problems and whose lot is connected with the success of their solution.

Throughout the text Sylvain Lévi notes the numerous new words in Sauskrit unknown to our lexicons indigenous or European, which he has encountered in this work. The future Assanga was first of all known under the name of Vasubandhu and his two younger brothers also were so call ed (p 2) The Tibetan translation of the Sutralankara was also prepared by an Indian called Shakvasimha assisted by Tibetan Lotsavas or interpreters. In the text there are traces of influence of the spoken vernacular or of some language in which the epithet follows the qualifying noun (p. 12). Here as in the Divyavadana, the language bristles with solenisms and harbarous phrases as judged by the standard of Panmi. But the fact seems to be that Buddhist Sanskrit. constantly tends to emancipation from the innumerable rules laid down by the grammarians and to make nearer approach to the spoken idiom. Two or three centuries after Asanga the Sanskrit grammar prepared by Candragom; marks the cap; tulation on the part of Buddhism to Brahmanie purism (p. 18) As regards the scriptural texts drawn upon by Assaga the Samyukta Arama scems to have been his favourite Next comes the Anguttara (p. 15) Sylvain Lévi holds that Asan ga was influenced by the currents of foreign religious beliefs having come into contact with the professors of Zoroastria mam, Judaism, Christianity and Manichessm (p. 18)

Definition of Buddhavacana (p 10 note) The concord of the Sanskrit texts with Pall 12 constantly established reference being made to the Pall canon (e.g., page 186 where the agreement is perfectly literal) How far a thorough knowledge of Buddham is unattainable without Chinese and Tibetan, may be judged from the French-Sanskrit Sanskrit-French, Chinese-Sanskrit, and Tibetan-Sanskrit vocabularies appended to this book.—N

Note to p. 97.

Bana in his Harshachanita (p 265-6) gives a detailed destription of the various religious persuasions in his time. The monkeys who had taken the three refugees of Buddhism occupied themselves with the rituals of the Chaitya. Devout parrots versed in the Shakyashastras expounded the Kosha, which was no doubt the Abhidharma Koshá of Vasubandhu, while some Mainas after their monastic exercises, the ten Shikshapadas, lectured on the Law, and the owls recited the history of the previous births of the Buddha and the tigers under the restraining influence of the teachings of the Buddha renounced flesh food. N

Note to p. 97.

Ettinghausen in his Harshavardhana gives the Suprabhata-stotra (p. 172), which illustrates the type of inspiring poetry not often to be met in classical Sanskrit literature and which is an index to the piety and fervour of the Mahayanistic authors. N.

Note to p. 101. SHIKSHASAMUCCAYA.

The form of the books represents a type familiar to students of Indian literature. It is an author's commentary on Karikas or memorial verses written by himself. Bendall's view is that the Mahayana writers used passages which are neither translated nor adapted from the corresponding Palitext, but represent the Mahayanist's handling of the common tradition of Buddhism. "A curious instance of the conscientiousness of something else than Sanskrit as the real underlying sacred language is found in the charm occurring at p. 142, 15, quoted from the Vidyadharapitaka where the constitutions."

clusion is practically a sentence of Pali ' (p. 14) Bondall believes in the experiness of the Tibetan translators "When I find how wonderfully well even as late as the IXth century the Pandits who translated the Prakrit Dohakoshas into Tibetan understood the extremely difficult forms of that work. I must unhesitatingly reject Childer's supposition that the northern Buddhists were mislaid by ignorance of Pali (n 14) It will be found that the confusion of forms is sometimes on the side of Pali tradition, and that the Sanskrit writing Buddhism preserves the etymological one" (p. 15) Duties of married life (p 78) Medicine includes use of spells (p 142) Certain shastras to be avoided (p 192) On faith (p. 5) A precept which has no parallol in the Prati mokaha as known from Poli or as yet translated from Chi nese; it illustrates a familiar posture for kings and other laymen found in Buddhist art, as in the Amaravati sculptures (p. 125) Discussion on animal food prohibited with reservo (n 131 and 137) Frample of the Sanskrit text transcribed and not translated in the Tibetan version (p. 139) Snake oharms (p 141) Example of a Dharani (p 142) Buddhist confession of sins (pp 160-161) Traditional list of tortures in Sanskrit and Buddhist writers (p. 181) Parallel between Sanskrit and Pali enumeration of heretic schools (p. 331) Frample of Mantra transliterated, not translated into Sanskrit (pp 355) The number of works conculted by Shantideva is 108-N

Note to p 101. BODHICARYAVATARA

Translated by LA VAIIFF POUSSIN

Against the theory of extreme self-enerifice see the Atmahhava raksha.

The legends of the surrender of his eyes and his children by the Buddha are not to be imitated by others, I-tsing Records, 198, (p 43) Buddhist Confession of Sins (pp. 27-66.)

Shantideva speaks at the most with reserve regarding the magical formulas which may be held to include Tantra, Bodhi, c v 5, 90, (p 45) La Vallée Poussin differing from Bendall attributes only one text, sutra samuccaya, to Nagar-juna (p 48)

For the authority on which the Mahayana enjoins marriage upon the monks and the future Buddhas and ultimately leads to the excesses of the Tantras, see p 51

The value of force, which does not seem to exclude physical force, virya paramita, chapter 7 of Bodhi c v. (p. 70).

N.

BODHICARYAVATARA SANSKRIT TEXT.

The author has composed his book not because he has anything new to convey, nor because he is an expert writer or he is officiously solicitous about others, but only to please himself, (1, 2)

On the costlest of material gifts being surpassed by a single act of devotion, (p. 33)

Example of touching devotional hymns, (p 48)

Instance of the incorporation of six stanzas in the Bodhicaryavatara into the Svayambhu-purana, (p. 58)

Buddhist confession of sins, (p. 69 et seq)

Parallels between Bodhlearyavatara and Svayambhupurana (p 72.)

The aspirant a desire to be the protector of the poor, leader of the caravan to be a ship or bridge to those desiring to cross the ocean (p 63)

Instead of subjugating all sensations it is easier and more desirable to control the mind just as it is infinitely more easy to protect oneself against thoras etc by a pieco of leather required to make the sole of your shoes than to cover the whole earth with leather (p. 102). Prohibition against suffering discomfort for others (p. 142). On the theory of alignment the contrast with the decirine of the Himayana (p. 265).

Respect for Umayana (p. 116)) The familiar posture for laymen found in finddhist art and not prescribed in the Pratimoloha (p. 149)

Anxiety do gain popular favour (p 146)

Kalyanamitra (p. 156)

Recommendation to study the sutras (p. 159)

Insistence on the study of Shikshasamuccaya (p. 163)

Anthority of Vagarinus (p 161)

To act upto and not merely to read the scriptures; the mere reading of pharmaceutical works will not effect a patient's cure (p. 1667.)

Duty of cheerfulness (p. 172-3)

Diverso toriures (p 177 ot seq)

Non-resistance of attacks on images, stupas and the religion itself (p 204) Causes of want of energy (p. 244.)

Pride in being a follower of the Buddha (p 273).

Longing for wandering without unnatural restraint in foreign lands (p 267)

The vulgar, fatigued with the day's business, come home in the evening to be down in bed like the dead (p. 318). The two varieties of truth (p. 341) Explanation of the doctrine of Maya or Shunyata as in the Bhagavati (p. 379) N.

Note to p. 104.

TANMAN ON PALI BOOK-TITLES.

Buddhaghosa in explaining 22, how the Tipitaka as an aggregation of collections (nikayas) may be regarded as five-fold, says that it consists of the Digha, Majjhima, Samyutta, Anguttara, and Khuddaka, and proceeds Apart from the four Nikayas, all the rest, namely the entire Vinaya and Abhidamma and the fifteen aforesaid works, Khuddaka patha, etc, are the words of Buddha Then, continuing with a verse of "the ancients" he says "And apart from these four Nikayas, Digha and so forth, the words of Buddha other than those, are held to be the Khuddakanikaya" (p 685)

Different names for the same thing Polyonymy. We have heard of the student who, undergoing examination on the Homeric question, answered that "The Iliad was not written by Homer, but by another man of the same name" In India the trouble is often the other way, it is the same man with another name "The Hindus, even in historical documents and works, had the bad habit of designating one and the same person by different names of the same significance. Thus Vikrama-arka-Vikiama-aditya, Surya-mati-Sur-ya vati." So one of the three Elders at whose request Buddha, ghosha wrote the Ja cm., is called by him (I I) Buddhadeva, but by the Gaven, p 68 Buddhapiya—Unfortunately, this is true not only of men but also of texts Dhammasan gani is called Dhammasangha by the great Buddhaghosha himself at D cm I I7 while in the Rangoon (Mundyne ed. of Atthesaimi, p 408 lines 18-19 and 26) we read Atthesaimi nama Dhammasangah-atthakatha but in line 27 Dhammasangan atthakatha

The titles of such texts are justly the despair of Occi dental librarians and hibbographers who are mevitably at their wit s end in trying to perform the well nigh impossible task of making these Oriental books available to Orientaliss, Perhaps we ought not to blame the Hindux. With their arudition profound in many ways but narrow they had no more conception of the many-sided knowledge indispensable for a modern librarian than they had of aerial automobiles or wireless telegraphy (pp 693 894)—N

Note to p 104.

The Mabaratnakuta Dharmaparyaye Kashyapa Pari vartab has been edited with notes by Baron von Stael Hol stein.

(Bulletin of the Imperial Academy of St. Petersburg 1909 p. 739)—N

Note to p 119

RULI RTIN de L'ACADÉMIR des SULENCES

St. Petersburg

- June 15 1911

Notes on the Trikayastava by Baron A. von Stael Holstein (p 837) The Hymn has been reconstructed into its original Sanskrit form it mu the Chinese transcription.—N

Note to p. 122. SUBHASHITA-SANGRAHA.

Although, as Bendall impartially puts it, a considerable portion of the contents of the book is objectionable and even sometimes repulsive to modern readers, its publication was necessary and appropriate for the right understanding of the history of Buddhism in India cittamati am jagat saivam, as a dietum of Nagarjuna quoted (p 20). Contrasting with the original doctrine of Buddhism to conquer hatred by love stands a recommendation to conquer passion by passion (p 50-55) Bendall styles the whole second part as an extra. ordinary phase of soi-disant Buddhism and publishes it "thinking it well, that scholars at least should know the worst "It reads like an obscene callicature of the teaching both of earlier Buddhism and of the legitimate Yoga Our doubt still remains unsolved, the doubt suggested by M Barth, whether such teachings were among those officially accepted by Buddhism Possibly in these writings we have a clue as to how Buddhism came to be discredited in India and finally disappeared One must proclaim the law (dharma) to fulfil the highest aspirations of men (95), but a knowledge of charms (mantra, sadhana) is also necessary These may check sin even in great sinners (96-98)

Note to p. 125. '

(Albert J Edmunds' work on Buddhist and Christian Gospels is invaluable, also for the indirect light thrown on the relationship between Buddhism and Zoroastrianism, Volume I, 136 ff For the Parthian contacts, see p 68 ff. p 150, Volume II, pp 158, 263, 266, 273, etc GKN)

Besides Seydel, Bergh van Eysinga and Edmunds the dependence of the Christian Gospel upon the Buddhist text is assumed also by O Pfleiderer, Die Entstehung des Christenthums, second edition, Munich 1907 p 198; also Ernst Kuhn in a postcript to the book of Bergh van Eysinga (p 102) and R Pischel (Deutsche Litztg 1904, September, Sp 2938 ff.) who states the question, whether Indian influences are to be found in the narrative literature of the Gospels, can now no longer be denied. In diverse points K. E. Nenmann 18 of similar views Reden Gotamo Buddha's III. 112 256A, 258A, 259A, 260A, 364A. A sort of primitive Christian connection is supposed by H. Kern (Deutsche Intxtg 1882 Sp 1276) and R O Franko (Deutsche Litztg, 1901, Sp 2757 ff.) A Weber (The Greeks in India, SBA, 1890 p 928 f.) and H. Oldenberg (Theolog Latstg 1905 Sp 65 ff. Aus dem Alten Indien (p 47 f.) still leave the question open. Wholly or almost repudiating is the attitude of T W Rhys Davids, SBE xi, 165 f J Estlin Carpenter, The First Three Gospels, their Origin and Relations, 1890 p 180 ff., 161, 174 203 237 E. Hardy Der Buddhismus p 110 E W Hopkins India Old and New, p 120; E Windisch Mara and Buddha, p 60 214 312 and Buddha & Geburt p 195 La Vallée Poussin, Revue biblique 1906 853 and Bouddhums p 5 S. Lévi, Revue critique 1908 volume 65 p 382 A. Keith JRAR, 1910 213 R. Garbe Doutsche Rundschau Volume 144, 1910 p 73 and Volume 149 1911 p 122 and Contributions of Buddhum to Christianity Chicago 1911 Edw Lehmann Buddhism as an Indian sect and World Religion, Tübingen, 1911 p 78 Some of these authorities deny all similarities, others explem them without assuming mutual dependence -Winternitz.

Note to p 126

Edmunds I, 107, 167 Inske I 35 Majjhima Nikaya 38, 123 Edmunds I, 198 and Pischel, Info and Teachings of the Buddha p 26, see no dependence here, Edmunds II, 123, Mark IX, 2; Luke IX, 30 Rhys Davids, Dialogues of the Buddha, II, 146, Dutoit, Life of the Buddha, p 283 Bergh van Eysinga 21, Edmunds, I, 181 The Buddhist legend was undoubtedly known in the third century BC, consequently borrowing on the part of the Buddhists is out of question

Luke II, 41 The similarity is greater with Lalitavistara XI than with the Nidanakatha (Rhys Davids, Buddhist Birth Stories, p 75; Jataka p 58) See Kern, Der Buddhismus I, 39, Bergh van Eysinga, p 26

Jataka, volume I, p 60, Rhys Davids, Buddhist Birth Stories, p 79, Seydel, p 26, Bergh van Eysinga, p 41 It is true, that this kind of benedictions occurs also in the chants (Neumann, Songs of the Monks and Nuns, p 309 note), Lehmann, Der Buddhismus, p 85) However, the similarity in details is striking in as much as the Buddha as well Jesus remark upon what in their opinion blessedness consists of Winternitz

Note to p. 127.

Matth, IV 2, Mark I., 13, Majjhima nikaya 36; Edmunds I., 192

Matth XIV p 16 f, Jataka Nr 78, Edmunds II, 253. The Rasavahani in which similar legends occur (Lehmann p 90) is altogether a late work

Edmunds II, 257, Jataka Nr. 190, Matth XIV, 24, Bergh van Eysinga p 45, Carpenter, First Three Gospels, p 203, Garbe, Contributions, p 12, Lehmann, p 88 Sutralankara W Huber, p 119, Mark, XII, 41, Luke XXI, 1, Bergh van Eysinga 23, Lehmann, p 88

Seydel p 230, J M Carter, JRAS, 1893 393, Bergh van Eysinga, 57, Edmunds, II, 260, Seydel, 232, compares the metaphor of the boun blind (John IX) with the Saddharma.

Neumann Songs of the Monks and Nuns, p 359 There is a greater similarity between Matth. AVII, 19, where there is mention of the removal of the mountains by fauth and Anguttara nikaya, VI, 24 where it is said that the monk by means of his meditation can split the Himalsya Edmunds 11, 40—Winternitz.

Note to p 128.

BUDDHIST TEXTS IN JOHN BY EDMUNUS.

On the 26th of August in the Eastern Communion and on the 27th of November in the Western we have the singular spectacle of Catholic priests commemorating the Hindu thinker as a Christian saint—N

Note to p 129

Khuddakapatha VIII translated by Wintermitz-Rel. Lesebuch p 270 see Edmunds 1 222 Lehmann Der Buddhamus (p 92)

Bergh van Eysinga, p 77 Edmunds, I, in to 164. On the other hand, it is less prohable that already in the first cen tury Christian ideas should have penetrated India. J Dahl mann (Indische Fahrten, Volume II 100 129 152 The Thomas legend) would have it that the Acts of Thomas rest on a historical bans, that already in the first century a Christian mustion was operating in northern India and that the Mahayanistic Buddhism developed under Christian influences. Winternitz is inclined as little to agree with that argument as with that of Garhe (Deutsche Rundshau, Buddhismus 38 p 76)

According to Winternitz, the Acts of Thomas only demonstrate that at the time of their composition i.e., the third century A. D., Christians had penetrated to Gandhara, Bergh van Eysinga, p 64, and Garbe, Contributions, p. 19. Already in 1762 the Augustine monk Georgians indicated, that there were reports about the Buddha in Tibet similar to those relating to the five year old Jesus in the Gospel of Thomas, see L Conrady, the Gospel of Thomas, Theological Studies and Criticism, Gotha 1903, (p 403)

Max Muller, Essays III, p 538, (Foucaux, Lalitavistara II, 43) cites a few passages from which it would appear, that the author had received the stories not only from the mouths of the people who had brought them from India, but that he had even the text of the Lalitavistara before him

Already in 1612 the Portuguese Diego do Conto compared the Barlaam-Josaphat legend with the Buddha legend (Indian Antiqualy XVII, p 288) But Laboulaye in the Journal des Débats July 16, 1859, asserted for the first time the Buddhist origin of the legend. The entire history of the romance has been studied by E. Kuhn, Munich 1897. Kuhn is of opinion, that the author utilises in a free way the general Buddhist tradition and not the principal texts like the Lalitavistara. See V. Chauvin, Bibliographie des ouvrages Arabes, volume III, 1898 (p. 83)

That it was not the Christians, but Manicheans who first brought the Buddha legend into Europe is surmised by Le Coq (SBA, 1909, p 1205), but the real author of the romance must have been only a Christian, since the doctrines contained in the book are Christian The Christians could as well have gathered the material as the Manicheans.

The Prince is called in Greek Joasaph, in Arabic Judsaf which goes back to Budasaf, i.e., Bodhisattva In Arabic, Syliac and Pahlavi J and b are easily confused. The sage, Barlaam is called in Arabic Balauhar, which, according to Knhn, is traceable to Bhagvan. Barlaam and Josaphat already appear as saints in the Catalogus Sanctorum of Peter de Natalibus, who died about 1870

Angelo de Gubernatis and A. Oblonsky (Le Prince Sid dhartha, a drama in five acts 1899) have dramatised the life of the Buddha, May Kooh Studies in comparative lite rary history volume III p 412 Most remarkable are Buddhit tales by Paul Dahlke, 1904.—Winternits.

Note to p 130

A note on Balauhar wa Budasef by G K, Narıman, Ind. Ant. 1913, 252 —N

Appendix I, p 162.

To Professor Hermann Oldenberg we owe a Study in the History of the Buddhist Canon (Göttingen, 1912) in which the comparative value of Pali and Sanakrit sources in examined in most minute detail, parallels between the two being in stituted at every step. He admits that the Pali text is translation from the Magadhi original (p. 61). He examines the Divyavadana, Avadanaahetaks and the recently discovered fragments of the Sanakrit Canon. He is muchle to decide, whether come of the divergences manifest between the several recensions go back to the Pali redactors of the Magadhi original.

Although Oldenberg is melined to the Pali school, and his two masterly discretations are partly directed against Sylvain Lévis essay he impartially indicates the pewages where Pali is corrected by the Sanskrit-Chinese tradition. An instructive illustration is given at p 172. It is a question of the four Brahmana-saccani. The Pali has "all the creatures are ignorant, hence the compassion "The Chinese "do harm gives hand otheron Sabbepannatext creature " 15 The Pali text correct that the Evidently see we should be Avajjha, and as a matter of fact this reading is to be found in the Siamese edition, as against the edition of the Palı Text Society Further, on the basis of the Chinese translation by Lévi he corrects the Sanskrit of the recently discovered fragments (pp 176,177) The conclusion to which Oldenberg arrives is, that the Northern texts in their contents and in their form approach right near to the Pali texts, partly they coincide with them, but in other places there are wide divergences "If the infallibility of the Pali tradition cannot be asserted in every set of circumstances, still it is evidently on the whole essentially the more ancient one" (p 179) The artists of Bharhut and Sanchi to all appearances were acquainted with the legend of the Buddha's life in a more modern form than we meet with in the great Pitaka texts The latter do not contain the miraculous descent of the Buddha from the heavens of the thirty-three gods which is represented both at Bharhut and Sanchi, nor do these Pali texts contain the miracle of Shravasti which is delineated at Bharhut (p 202). "It goes without saying that the original canon was composed in Magadhi."

Note to p. 172.

Walleser is inclined also to identify the Questions of Upatishya (Upatisa-pasine) of the Bairat inscription with the Dhammasangani, and the latter to his mind is the Southern equivalent of the Dharma Skandha, since Upatishya is only another name for Shariputra, whom we know to be the author of the Dharma Skandha (p 25) To sum up, "in the title of Upatisa-pasine, the sixth among the tracts recommended by Ashoka to his Buddhist subjects, we find the oldest designation of the scripture which was called Dham masangani, or Dharma Skhandha or Dharma Sangraha after the tradition was committed to writing (p 26).—N

Note to p 174. PRATIMORSHA.

Although it was published so long ago as 1869 with translation and commentary in Bussian it is of standing importance because of the use which Minayess makes of the Pali commentaries. The Pali text is edited in the Nagari character—N

For Sanakrit Pratimokaha of the Sarvastivadı school, ace Finot & Huber JA, 1913 (p. 465)

Tokharian Pratimoksha JRAS, (p. 109 1913)

Note to Appendix IL -

SOME CRITICAL NOTES ON BULKATANKARA OF ABHVAGHOSHA.

From the Sutralankara Sylvam Lévi traces to the Chinese version of the Tripitaka a number of passages and produces from the Pali canon their exact parallels. There are thus identified in the Pali canon seven passages from tha Anguttara Nikaya, two from the Digha, nine from Majjhima, seventeen from the Samyutta, two from Pali Vinaya, two from Pali Apadana, two from the Dhammapada, six from the Jataka, two from the Sutta mpata, three from the Theragatha

To the original Sanskrit, now surviving only in Chinese, the same savant traces four passages, one to Dirgha, seven to Madhyama, eight to Samyukta, eleven to the Sanskrit (Chinese) Mulasaivastivadi Vinaya, three to the Saivastivadi Vinaya, one to the Mahasanghika Vinaya, seven to the Divyavadana, three to the Tibetan Dulva, four to the Chinese of original Sanskrit Buddha Carita, one to the Chinese of the original Sanskrit Dharmapada, one to the Tibetan of the original Sanskrit Kaimashataka, six to the Sanskrit Mahavastu, and several passages to various other Sanskrit, Pali, Chinese and Tibetan extant scriptures.

We shall glance at only the most important of these.

The 3rd story, or sermon, has several parallels It represents a sutta which is given in its entirety in the Chinese Samyuktagama It is transmitted broken up in the Palicanon.

To the 9th sermon the text, so to say, is well known: "Absence of all desires is the basis of conduct of a Shramana" This is to be found in the 40th sutta of Majjhima nikaya, "Yassa kassaci bhikkhino abhijjhalima abhijjha pahina hoti samana samici pati padam patipannoti vadami."

The Dharmapada shloka 204 is the text of the 10th sermon.

The 16th sermon is in fact in the original Sanskrit as surviving in the Divyavadana (BFFEO, 1904, p. 194).

The 18th seimon contains the story of Koti-karna. A study of it shows that Kshemendra, the compiler of Avadana kalpalata, had for his source the document of the Mulasar-vastivadi school Parenthetically it may be noted that the Svayambhu Purana is closely connected with the Divyavadana. The text of the sitra quoted in the 19th atory refers to the Samyuttanikaya, (Vol. V, p. 91)

The 35th story has a parallel in the Mahavastu (Vol. III, pp. 50-52) A parallel passage is to be found in the Samyukta nikaya (Vol. 21 p 219) The Sanskrit reduction of the Samyuktagama has been lost but a portion of it has been discovered in Chiuese Turkestan by the Grünwedel mission (Toung pao July 1901) From the story Prof. Sylvain Lévi comes to the conclusion, that Ashvaghosha preferred the canonical text of the Sanskrit reduction to the Pali.

The 42nd story contains a hymn to Shariputra sung by two monks, which is of historical importance. An almost verhal identity of expression is to be found with Divyava dana (p. 391)

The story of Panthaka appears in the 43rd story The sermon is a highly interesting tale of the Divvavadana This story also mentions a number of names which have been traced through the Chinese to their original Hindu shape

The 48th story has its reflex in the Sanskrit Dharma pada. It is the atory of Shura whose proper name was mis understood by previous scholars.

The stanzas collected in the 49th story are to be found in the Somyutta Nikava, Vol I (p. 57)

The simile of the four varieties of mangees as given in the 58th story is to be found in the Anguttara Nikava Vol. II p 106 (Cattarome ambupama puggala)

The Glst story gives interesting account regarding the details of the life of the Buddha and the quarrels which some monks were notorious in exclting. At times the ange had to quit his inribulent disciples and seek retrent to a forest. The Majjhima nikaya has two suttes on the principle of establishing harmony among the hrethren (Vol. I 320 Vol. III, 152). We have corresponding Suttras in the Chinese version, though the differences between Pali and Chinese are quite palpable.

The 52nd story is perhaps the most instructive in the whole collection. Here the author refers directly to the discourse, or the Buddhistic sutra, on which his sermon is based. It is the 65th of Majjhima mikaya (Vol. I, 435). The Sanskrit Madhyamagama has the same identical Sutra. A careful comparative study of the Pali and Sanskrit sources, as represented by the Chinese translation, leads. Sylvain Lévi to the conclusion, that, while there is order and regularity in the agreement of the Madhyamagama, there is disorder in the corresponding Majjhima mikaya of Pali. This sutta conclusively shows that Ashvaghosha materially followed the Sanskrit collection.

The 53rd story is also popular, and has been utilised by Kshemendra in his Avadana kalpalata. He agrees entirely with the Sutralankara. Hence it is once more clear, that Kshemendra worked on the materials provided by the Sarvastivadi school.

The 54th story has its counterpart in the Divyadana, as has been exhaustively shown by M Huber (BEFEO, 1904).

For the purposes of a comparative study of the various sources of Buddhism the 61st story is of peculiar significance. It is based on the text which we find in the Anguttara Nikaya (Vol V, 437) Here ten qualifications of the Bhikshu are compared to the ten qualities of the ox

In the 62nd story there is a reference to the contents of the Theri Gathas (verses 236-251), which are illustrated in the Apadana

A detailed study of the 68th story leads Lévi to the conclusion, that the Pah apadana has utilised a passage of the Sanskrit Sutralankara

The 73rd story presents verhal identity with the Pall. The sbloka in Huber's book at p 423 is a faithful presente tion of Angustaranikaya, (Vol II, 275)

'Gunnam co taramonanum ujum gacehati pungavó Sabbata njum gacehonti nette uju goto sati Evam eva monassesu vo hoti settha sammato So ceva dhommam carati pag eva itara paja.

The Sutralankara contoins as a work of oggressive Buddhism may be expected to do many flings of the Brah mono institutes and their ratual their eastes and their general habits which are totally opposed to the Buddhistic principles The 77th story illustrates this — A

Note to Appendix III p 207

Grierson holds that the Paishael prakrit was a verna cular language of the country around Texila and that it is closely allied to Pell We have a strong wason for holding that literary Pali is the literary form of the Magadhi lan guage which was used as a medium of literary instruction in the Tokshashila University (Bhandarkar s Commemoralive Essays Homo of Pali)

Note to Appendix V, p 224

An important contribution to the Iranion influence on Central Asio in general is by Paul Pelliot see Rovue d'Histoire et de Littérature Religieuses Morch April 1912, (p. 97) --N

Centrol Asian Studies by Sylvon Levi (p 953, JRAS, 1914)

Mo-nı et Manichéens, by Paul Pelliot, JA, 1914, 461 proves Moni to be Mani, he says

"il ya des textes chinois assez nombreux sur Mazdéens." When shall we get these Zoioastrian texts in Chinese in a European translation?

Note to p. 227.

BULLETIN DE L'ACADEMIE DES SCIENCES.

St Petersburg

1st March, 1909

Fragments of the manuscripts discovered by Berezovsky at Kucha (p 547) N

Note to p. 227.

Khotan is derived by Sylvain Lévi from Gostana. BEFEO, 1905 N

Note to p. 229.

BULLETIN DE L'ACADEMIE DES SCIENCES.

St Petersburg

1st April, 1909

Tokhanan and language I, by Baron A von Stael-Holstein, p 479 N

Note to p. 229.

BULLETIN DE L'ACADEMIE DES SCIENCES.

St. Petersburg

December 15, 1908

Tokharian and language II by Baion A. von Stael-Holstein N.

Note to p 229

For e Tokherian Pratimoksha sce JRAS p 109, 1913. On Uddyotakara, a contemporary of Dhermekirti sco Vidya hhushane JRAS, p 601 1914—N

Note to p 235

For references to the Magians see Uigurien by T W K. Müller, (p 9) -N

Note to p 248.

HAND BOOK TO THE SCULPTURES IN THE PESHAWAR MUSEUM

(By B D Spooner)

In the Peshawar Museum there are sculptures, in which the young Buddha is represented as at school, where he satenished his teacher by enumerating more scripts and modes of writing than the teacher knew (p. 9)

Sculpture No 152 in the Peshawer Museum deplets the scene of the ordination of Nanda a half hrother of the Buddha, against his will Most people will agree in hoping with Dr. Spooner, that there is a story of forced conversion somewhere, but certainly at present it is obsoured, if at all existing. It may be, that the extraordinary love and pity of the Buddha urged him to save humanity oven at the price of being temporarily cruel (p. 23)

Gandhara is the present Peshewar district with some ed joining territories (p. 34)

The art represented by the Gondhara sculptures according to Dr Spooner is the result of the union of the older Indian or Perso-Indian art and Hellenistic ert, as it was known in Baktris (n. 34)

The older Indian monuments never show any representation of the Master, his presence in any good composition being indicated by some sacred symbol (p. 37).

The delineation of the first writing lesson in sculpture No 347 at Peshawar had an added interest in that the writing board shows a few Kharoshti characters, which the infant Buddha is supposed to have written (p. 54) N.

Note to p. 274.

STUDIES OF BUDDHISM IN JAPAN.

(By A. Lloyd)

Kanishka became a convert to Buddhism after a period of religious hesitation and vacillation, which may have been the cause of the sending of the Magi Kanishka puts on his coins sometimes Hindu and sometimes Zoroastrian symbols. His conversion to Buddhism is said to have been due to an accidental meeting with an aged sage who, supposing St Linke's story to be historical, may very well have been one of the Wise Men (p 6) The Japanese name for the Saddharmapundarika is Hokke or Hoke (p 7)

The Chinese text translated from Sanskrit often represents an earlier version than the Pali (p 8). It is curious, that the true Buddhist propaganda in China was headed by a prince from Parthia in 148 AD, who had resigned his throne in order to become a monk (p 37) It is noteworthy, that of the earlier Buddhist missionaries to China nearly all came not from India, but from Central Asia, from Parthia and Afghanistan, and that India proper took no share in the work until much later (p 38)

According to Lloyd, the Shingon doctrine is simply Manichæism (p 43). When a Manichæan became a Christian he was required to make the following abjuration.

' I anothematice Terebinthus who is called the Buddha, Zorozater whom Manes called a god who had, so he said, appeared in former times to the Indians and Persians and whom he named the sun etc. (p. 41) St. Angustin was himself at one time a Manlehean (p 40) According to Island Faddharma pundarska so strangely Christian in every point as well as in its imagery was inspired by Alexandrian thought and lay at the basis of the Manichman heresy (p. 113) The name of the larthian princa was Inchikan who was apparently a repher of khosroes and who resided at flome as a bestage for a veral years until re La ed by Hadrian (p. 1-6) -1

Note to Appendix X p 270 RESEARCHES SUR BOUDDHISME.

(Hr Manareff)

According to the hathavatthu the law was expounded by Ananda and not by the Buddha (p 21) Satire against Buddhists (p. 49) -- \

Note to Appendix X, p 270

Bendall, (Catalogue of Buddhi t Manuscripts p 25) describing the Cambridge Manuscript of Abhidharma kosha Vyakhya by lashomitra says that it is an accurate copy The accuracy and the great value of the work may be judged from the fact that firstly it was the only copy of the work existing in Nepat and secondly, that the owner before part ing with it had a copy made for himself I ashomitra men tions two of his predecessors Ginnamati and \ asumitra.

The Abhidharma Kosha was translated into Chinese in 663, end again in 651.

According to Waddell (Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, 1899, p 70) Tissa Moggaliputra described by the Pali chronicles of the Mahavamsa is identical with Upagupta of the Northein tradition (p 22) N.

Note to Appendix X, p. 279.

On the Vibhasha shastia drawn up by Kanishka see BFFEO, 1905, (p 286) N

Note to Appendix X, p. 279.

J. R A S 1910.

La Vallée Poussin evidently shows, that Vedanta, so far from refuting Buddhism in its entirety, has been itself influenced by the latter According to Sukhtankar, Shankarhimself is indebted to Nagarjuna (p. 129) N.

Note to Appendix XI p. 287. BULLETIN DE L'ACADEMIE IMPERIALE DES SCIENCES.

St Petersburg

15th April 1911

Jain Notes by M B Milonov, p 501

JA Sur la récitation primitive des texts bouddhiques, by Sylvain Lévi

Example of I-tsing's abbreviated Chinese translation of the Mulasarvastivadi (p 412)

Sylvain Lévi proves, that the Atthaka vagga, which Rhys Davids calls the Book of the Eights (JPTS 1897) is really speaking the equivalent of Sanskrit artha and not attha, p 413

Vasubandhu in his Abhldharma Kosha refers to the arthavargiyasuktam (p 414)

The Arthoverga is quoted as a particular collection by Vasubandhu and Asanga (p. 415)

The Arthavarga counts among the most ancient portions of Buddhist literature (p. 417)

The Tibeton corrects the Sanskrit titles of some of the texts mentioned in the Divyavadana (p. 418)

On Chanda and its meaning see p 440-V

Note to Appendix XII p 293

Critical remarks on the text of the Divyavadana WZKM volume 16 by J & Speyer (p 104)

Some of the tales abound in Prakriticisms and a good many of the metrical compositions are obviously Sanskritised reproductions of stanzas in some popular diolect. It is clear for instance, that in the famous two shlokes which began with arabhadhyam alshkramata and occurring so frequently the genitive mrtyunal rests on an original moccuno and that anadagare iva kunjarah is a clumay transposition of the Prakrit nadagarova kunjaro—N

INDEX

.

PAGE.

Abhidhamma pitaka	$18 B*O
Abdhidhana Cintamani	283
Abhidhana Sangraha	201
Abbidharma,	9 29 165
Abhidharma Kosha of Vasubundhu translated by Hinen T siang belongs to Sarrasiivada 97 279, 818 880
Abbidharma Kosha translation into Chinese	286
• •	97 291 293, 888
Abhidharmas Seven	10
Abhin-shkramana sutra	18 19 970, 272
Acta Archelai	280
Adbhutadharma	170
Adelung Friedrich	164
Adhyardhashatika prajna paramita	87 280
Adibuddha	~4 *8 5
" in Karandavyuha V Poussin on	74 75
Adikarma pradipa	118, 115 112
Adikarnika Bodhisattva	104
Adıtya	25
Agama catusbiaya	293
Againss	8 28 807
Agidahaka	280
Ahnman	126 280
Ajanta caves and Jatakamala acenes with Ari shuras strophes	7A 44
Alatashatru	51
Ajnyata Kaundinya	297
Akashagarbha Sutra
Akutobhaya, Nagarjuna s own commentary	108
Alankara, Sutra	89 818
Withtent Office	242, *79

							PAGE.
Al-Beruni .	•	••	•••	•••	••	•••	283
Alexander the	Great,	his inv	asion	•••			153
			•••	•••	• • • •	•••	172
Alms		••	•••	•••	••	•••	294
Amangalah			• • •	• •	•••		293
	•	1	•••	•••	•••		x11, 15
Amara Kosha	•	••		•••	•••	•••	$1\overline{4}5$
Amaravatı .		• •		•••	•••	•••	317
Ambattitha .		••	• • •	•••	• • •	•••	261
Amitabha, Sul	chavatı	ryuha c	dedicate	ed to gl	orificati	ion	~
of, ahas Am		•	•••			•	77
Amitayurdhya	na Sutr	a		•	••	•••	71, 78
Amritananda,	auth'or	of hyn	n	•••	• • •	•••	110
Amritananda,	Copy	ist, A	dditions	s to	Buddl	na•
charita by		•••	•••	•	•••	•••	31
Anagatabhaya	nı	` '	• • •	•••	•••	•••	172
Ananda .	••		•••	•••	•••		22, 338
Añānda and P	anah m	aiden		•••	• ~		128
Ananda, dialo	gue bet	ween	•••	• • •			22, 165
Anathapındad	a .	••	•	••	•••		19,62
Andreas .		•••	•	••	••		232, 233
Anekartha Sa	-			•••		•••	292
Anesaki on Si				• • •	•••	•	8, 28, 86
Anguttara Tik	anıpata	Nikay	a.9,	163, 2	98, 30 6	, 311, 315,
Anıruddha	• _ •	•		•			198
An-Nadhim .	•••	••	•••	.• •	•••	•	230
Anshikao .		••	•••	•	•••	••	_ 337
A pabrahmsha		••		•••	•••	•	173
Apadana .		••	•••	777	•••	•••	164, 333
Apadanas ,	• •	•• 、		•••	•••	•••	45
Apalala	• •	• • •	••	•••		••	194, 274
Aparımıtayu-s	sutra	•••		•••	•••	•••	230
Apocrypha-	••	•••	•••	•••	•••	• • •	235
Ara	•••	• • •	•••	•••	•••		245
Ardha Magad	hı	•••	•••				223, 235

		PAG
Arhat		85 4
Arbat, ideal of		• Arhatship
Arka herb		97
Arka King		i
Arnold Edwin		18
Arreads		•8
Artha varga	1.	5 88
Artha vargiyani		29
Attha vinishcaya		980
Arts sixty four		20:
Arja Deva or Deva	1 188	5 81
Aryadovapadiya		9.5
Aryar epathet prefixed		e81
Aryamsha Sanghikanam		80.
Aryamula Sarvastitadus		202
Aryan Unity of Speech		187
Aryashura or Shura, poet 41 his verses at Ajanta	20	0 44
Arya fara nama shatottara shataka stotra		111
Arya tara sragdharu stotra bymn to goddess Tara by Kashmuran poet Suvajnamitra		111
Arya Vasundhara		283
Asamkheya Kulpas		266
Asanga 41 94, 808	314
Ashata mahashn chaitaya		804
Ashmaka	198	200
Ashoka	51	159
Ashaka, play on the word brought out by Chinese	•59	899
Ashoka, texts prescribed by		172
Ashokavadana		57
Ashtami vieta vidhana		118
Ashtasahasrika Prajnaparamita		64
Ashvagosha - 241 357	808	820
, embelishes vibhashas		97

•				PAGE.
Ashvagosha erotic art, statecrast	and wa	arfaie		83
" L'e of, in Tibetan	•••	••	• • •	- 28
" more a poet than a me	onk	•	•••	32
" Relation to Lalitavista	ra		•••	27, 28
Ashvajit		•••	•	281, 297
Ashvashisha on eloquence	•••	•••	•••	-189
Asita episode		•••	•••	- 25
Asuras	•		••	16, 48, 77
Asvatirtha	••	••	••	261
Atharvaveda, charms in	•••	•••	•••	55, 112
Atiyaga	,	•••	•••	819
Atmabbava, raksha	•••	•••	••	317
Atmamoha, delusion of ego	•••	•••	•••	. 108
Atmavada	•••	•••	•••	302
Atthakathas	, ••	•••	•••	262
Atthasalını	••	•••		291, 321
Attok			•••	195
Aufrecht	••		•••	152, 154
St Augustine	•••	•••		337
Augustine and Mari	••		-	230, 231, 232
Avadana	••	•••		12
" in Chinese		•••	~,	62
"Kalpalata	••		•••	62, 310, 331
, literature	••	••	••	45, 175
" meaning of			•	45
Ayadanamala	•••	•••	•••	45
Avadanas	•••		•••	13, 15, 36
Ayadanashataka	•••	•	. 46,	47, 220, 310
,, its minute details		•••		49
", ", mirror of social li	ıfe -	•••		50, 327
Avajjah	••	••		328
Avalokanasutra in Mahavastu	•••	••	•••	104
Avaloi ita			•••	292
Avolokiteshvara, Pahien on	• • •	•	4.0	7 5

		PAGE
Avaiokiteshvara, his potency acco	ording to Saddhari
pundat ka		72
in Karanda		72 75, 76
Avanti		196
Avatamsaka	₩.	167 811
Avatamsakasutra		79
Avesta its mythology in the wnti	ings of Manf	281
Avica		76
Avidentidana		13 Note, 20
Ayodhya		29
Azhidahaka •••		181
	В
Badarayana		201
Bagnilab	7	946
Bahu-buddha kutra	•	266
Barat.		818
Burat or Bhabra		215
Ralaha		76
B I nharwa Badasaí		626 807
		818
Bana	•••	245
Banerja		178
Bapoo Soobaji
Baramula		197
Barlaam and Josephat		180 826, 827 287
Barnett
Barth		14, 17 18 259
on Divyavadana	•
" on Mahayastu		266 606
Bartholomeo St. Fra Polmo		141
Bastian, on Ashvaghosha s Sana	éarananda	64
Bauddhadhikkara		260 290
Bauddha dushana		200
Bauddha mata	101	290

	_					Page.
Bauddhamata dus	shana	•••	•••		/	290
Bauddham Natal	cam	41.	•••	•••	٠,٠	- 220
Bauddhayanamitr	a	•••	•••	•••	••	198
Bazalık		•••	•••	••	•••	265
Beal	•••	•••		•••		180, 308
Benares			•	••	•••	29
" Sermon				••	•••	14, 25
Bendall, Catalogi		• • •	•••	•••	••	60, 301
Bendall, Cecil I		of S	addharr	na-pund		•
Abhidharmako				I was		304, 316, 322
Bendall, Sanskri	t Vinaya	•••	• •	•••	•••	8
Berazovshi	•••	•	• • •	•••	•••	334
Bhabra edict	••	•••		•••	•••	188
Bhabra texts	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	175
Bhadanta, meani	ng of	•••	•••	•••	•••	282, 289, 290
Bhadanta Sura	•••		•••	•••	•••	827
Bhadrakalavadan	a		•••	•••	•••	61
Bhaganan .	•••		•••		•••	290
Bhagvadpurana a	nd Bhud	dha	• • •	•••	•••	288
Bhagvadvishesha		•••	• • •	•••	•••	282
Bhagvatgita .	444	••	•••	••	22,	143 147, 807
Bhaishajyaraja	•••	1	•	•••	•••	112
Bhallika .	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	265
Bhamaha	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	290
Bhamatı .	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	291
Bhandarkar, R.	G	•••		•••	•••	28
>>	on K	anishka		• •	•••	2,8 301
Bharhut	••	•••	•••	•••	•••	328
Bharhut, reliefs	of			~	•••	26, 269
Bhartrihari	•••	••	•••	4 0 0	••	141, 150
Bhasa	"	•••	•••	•••	•••	, 243
Bhattacharya, R		•••	•••	•••	•	310
Bhattiprolu	•••	•••	•••	•••		248	_
Bhavaviveka, los	t comme	ntator	on Naga	arjuna	•••	89

	PAGE
Bhikahu	880
Dhikkhumsamyatta	228
Bhimasena.	236
Bhumibadra	809
Bhums, ten	17
Bibliotheca Buddhica	65
Bija or core of Dharanis unintelligible syllables	117
Bumbasens on or	*86
Bumbusara, King	24 61
Birt-ston	271
Blonay on goddess Tara	112
Bodhicaryavatara contrasted with Shikshasamuccaya	105 818
Bodhkaryavatara of Shantideva	101
Bodhicata in Shantidera	102 108
Bodhiruch: 44	800
Bodhlsattya	14, 17 20, 24
, ideal of	14
n innumerable	42, 5, 290, 826
, Jataka	287
Bodhiestrabhum, only section of Yogacarabhumi
shastra extent in Sanskut	95, 809
Borthfeattyas	808
Bodhi Tree	12
Bodmay	°86, 287
Bodleian	111
Böhtlingk Otto	158 188, 808
Ворр	148
Boro-Budar, temple of	°6 971
Boston	808
Bower Lt. his MS.	•26 276 °88
Bowl	812
Boyer	288
Boyer on Kanshka	*8, 210
Brahmadatta, the story of	16

						PAGE.
Brahma, god	•••	141	••,	••	•••	21
Brahma Jala sutta,			,		•••	219, 312
Brahmana Saccani		•••	•••	•••	•••	328
Brahmana varga		•••	•••		•••	298
Brahmo Samaj		•	•••			151
Brandes, G.	•••	•••	•••		`	139
Brihat Katha.	•••			••		197
Budasaf	•	••	••	• •	••	326
Buddha and the rej	ected c	andıdat	e		• •	37
Buddha, at school	•••		•••	•		23
,, his decease		•••	•	• • •	•	51
" prophecies	•••		•••	• 7	•••	50
" his selfless	love		•••		••	42
, smile		••		•		17, 49
" no image o	of in ear	rly epo	chs		•••	26
,, the acts of	•	•••	•••	•••	•	298
Buddhabhadra	•••		, 	•••	•••	263
Buddha-bhaktı	•••			•••	•••	5, 26, 78
" example o	of	•	•••	••	•	37, 73
Buddhacanta	•••	••	•	• •	27, 192,	258, 330
" " by A	shvago	sha	•			27, 242
", ", Chir	nese Tr	anslatio	on.		1	30
	tan tran			•••		39
•••	slated b	y Dhar	maraksl	ha	•••	30
Buddha deva	•••		•••	• • •		282, 321
Buddhaghosha	•••	•••	•••	•••	261, 262,	291, 302
Buddhajiva	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	263
Buddhakhetra	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	17
Buddhanusmriti	•••	•••	•••	•	•••	17
Buddha Padmotta		1	•••	•••	•••	80
Buddhapalıta', lost	comme	ntator (on Naga	arjuna	-	99
Buddhapiya	•••		•••	?		321
Buddhasastra	 1	••		•••	••	289
Buddhas, millions	of	•	•••	••	1	5

				PAOR
Buddhavac	Ans.		46, 48	299 815
Buddhavar	nta			164 266
Buddhavan	naha			10, 14
Buddhavan	sta.			264, 966
Buddhavat	amsaka sutra			79
Buddhavat	Ara			288
Buddhayas	hae			268
,	and flesh food		_	208
	and spirituous liquor			299
Buddhi	•			223
Buddhism	Japanese			291
Je .	Satire against			298
Buddhist A	ert in India by Granscud	el		27
Buddhist C	anon in Sanskint			289
Puddhists (of Ceylon			288
Ruddhests (of Kashmir			288
Buddhat 7	Text Society			60
Bahler				155, 801
Burmer				195
Bunyo Nat	nfio			89 74
Bumouf			28 58 64	153 2,9
Ex	pounder of three religions		80ع	257, 279
	C.
	-
	mara Jat ka			230
Candala r in Tantr	naidens, intercourse with ism	, recommen	ded	110
Candragon	π .	•		100, 221
Candragon	il, devotee of Tara		112,	290 815
,	desciple of Sthiraman			90 100
,	rival of Candrakirti			90, 100
Candrakut	, confused with Aryadeva			84
11	contemporary of Sanka			90
	his date-first half of 7t	h century		яÔ

						PAGE.
Candrakırtı, his Ma	dhyan	nakavata	ra	•••	•••	89
" his Pra	-				•	89,312
Candraprabha	•••	•••	•••	••	• •	82
Candrapradipa sutra	alıas	Samadi	hiraja	•••	•••	140
Cankrama .	•••		•••	•••	•••	295
Carter	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	324
Carus, Dr. Paul			•	•••	•••	184
Carya pitaka		•••	•••	•••	•••	42, 164
Carya tantra	•••	•••			•••	117
Caste, criticised	•	•••		•••	•••	56
Catalogues of MSS	,	•••	•••	•••	•••	154
Cattarome ambupar	ma pu	ggala	•		•••	, 331
Catustava of Nagar	_	•••	•••	•••	#	93
Ceylon, Buddhists	of	• • •	• # 1	•••	•••	283
Chaddanta jataka	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	220
Chaitya	•••	•••	بسهسه	•••	•••	45, 292, 316
Chaldeo-Pahlavı	•••	•••	•••	•••	••• _	232
Chanda	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	839
Chandala girl .	•••	• • •		•	•••	55
Chandragopi	•	•••		••	•••	290
Chandragupta	•	•••	•••		•••	158, 159
Charaka	•••	•••	•••	••	•••	267
Chargaon of Sam	•••		•••		•	, 250
Charm, snake		•••		•••	•••	114
Charpentier, J	•••	••	•••	• • •	•••	14, 220
Chatta pani, examp	ole of (Chinese	restor	ıng Sar	skrit	•
text	•	•	•	•••	•••	261
Chattiavastu	•	•••	•••	•••	¸ •••	16
Chauvin		•		••• (•••	326
Chavannes .	• • ·		•••	•••	7 	237, 254
Chézy, A	· ••	•••		•••	. •••	147
Childer	•••	•••	•	•	•••	317
Chinese, earliest tra			•••	, ···	•••	98
Chinese language is	n Mah	avastu	•	•••	•••	18

				PAGE
Chinese script in Lains				20
Chotjo				324
Chotrha, of Le Coq				265
Christianity, Nestonan				295 288
Cittaviveka				811
Civilisation				198
Code of Genton Law				148
Colebrooke Thomas				148
Comeduna				200
Compussion, extreme				50
Conrady, L.				826
Corpus Inscriptionum Indicarum				161
Council Thud Buddhat				285
Cowell				28, 182
Christo-Buddhist parallel				75
, translation of Buddha-cant	A.			82, 182
Csoma, de Koros		,		262, 201
Cudapakah				261
Cord penths				261
Cullavagga				114, 163 808
Culture, evidences				49
Cunningham				254, 269
	D
Dahlie, Paul				827
Dablmann, J				825
Dakmi				119
Darashmanana, Jam work				288
Dara Shrikoh				150
Darahtentika				283
Damhhumikasutra /			н	104
Demails				208
Dasaviharama Sutra-				258
Dashabhumuhyara				81 64, 168
				~

				Page.
Dashabhumishvara Mahayana Su	ra	•••	•••	81
Dashadhyaya-Vinaya .	•••	••		262
Dashakushalakarmapatanırdesha		•••	•••	185
Dashayeras	•••		444	- 247
Das Mahendra Lal		•		60
Das Sarat Chandra	••	•••	•••	62
Davids (Rhys), T W.			•••	155, 223, 339
on Duddoons	· ·	•		30
on Cam norm		n		57
Deeds, white or dark	••		• •	49
Democratic spirit of Vajrasuci	•••	•••	•••	38
Deuteronomy		•••	•••	163
Deutsche Litztg	•••	•••	•••	828
Deva	•••	•••	•••	29
Devadatta	•••	•••	•••	193
Deva or Aryadeva	•••	•••	•••	93
Devaputra	•••	•••	•••	253
Devasharma, Elder	•••		•••	279
Dhamma Kathika	•••	•••	•••	216
Dhamma-pada		••		163, 330
Dhammapada, Kharoshti	•••	••	•••	227
Dhamma Sangani	•••	•••	•••	321
Dhamma Sangha	••		•••	321
Dharani	•••	•••	•••	317
Dharanipitaka of Mahasanghikas	•••	•••	•••	116
Dharanis	•••	••	•	72, 110
Dharanis, from Central Asia	•		•••	236
Dharanis in Saddharma Punda	rıka	and La	nka-	* - 5
vatara	•••`		••	117
Dharanis in Suvranaprabhasa Dharmagupta	•••	. •••	•••	83
Dharmaguptas ^	••	• •,	•••	263, 282
Dharmagupta Vinaya	•	\	•	9, 169,\272 263
Dharmakaya of Dharmadhatu	•	•••	•••	83
, samuradiatu	•	•••	- • •	~

						P.	AGB.
Dharmakirti						185,	895
Dharmakuti and Vajrasuci		•-					810
Dharmapada						~,	7.0
Dharmapala			-				90
Dharmaparyaya							64
Dharmarakaha							185
Dharmas, the Nine						64	166
Dharma Sangaro							*91
Dharmasangiti Sutra							101
Dharmasangraha						85	91
Dharmasanra Sutra discove	ied in	Central	Ama				91
Dharma, aignifications of							* 90
Dharmaskandha					9	979	808
Dharmatrata							*82
n Buddha's bie							19
Dharmatrata s Udanararga				-			7
Dhatu Katha							170
Dhatu Kaya							170
Dhatukaya of Purana	•						279
Dhatu kaya pada	-						208
Dhuanga							290
Dhitika							802
Dhnts							2°2
Dhyana							802
Diamond Needle							178
Digha		44	•••			B•0,	829
Dighanakhaeutta							14
Dighanikaya		•••			9 91	Ιď	108
Digvijaya							253
Dilipa	•••					199
Dinara					46	55
Dinamus							818
Dipankara							264
Dipavansa							217

					PAGE.
Dirghagama			•••		9, 54
~ ·	•••	••		•••	34
Disciples of Buddha		• ••	•••	•••	297
Dishasvastika sutra		ed in C	hinese Tu	rkes-
tan	•	•	•	•	114
Divakramitra	•••	•• ••	,	•••	289
Divyavadana		. 7, 5	3, 19 1 , 25	7, 271,	306, 308, 327
" borrows ta	les from	Sutralar	nkara	•••	36
" legends in	commo	n with P	alı .		58, 314
" relation to	Sutrala	nkara			57
Divyavadanamala	•••	•••	•••	•••	53
Dkon-brtsegs		•• •••			167
d'Oldenburg, Serge	••		-	•••	14, 61, 62
Dombi -		•	•••		121
Donner	•	•••	•••	100 -	265
Dry Tree	•••		•	•••	274
Dsanglun, Tibetan st	ory of V	Vise man	and Fool	•••	53
Dulva				• •	167, 262
Duperron, Anquétil	••		••	••	150, 151
Durevidana .	••	• •••	•••	•	-12 (Note)
Dutoit	•••	•••	•••		324
Dutreuil de Rhins .	••	• •••	•••		170, 227, 238
Dvavimshatyavadana	, kata, A	vadana (of 22 sect	ons.	31, 60
		E.			,
Edkıns		_ ~		•	204
Edmunds, Albert J.			•	•••	125, 322-
Edmunds II	,		•••		328
Tr.J A 11	•		•••	•••	181
Egg domest	•	• •••	•••	•••	5
Eitel			(• •		204
Eka Shringa		•••	4		15, 63
Ekavımshatı stotra .		•	•	•••	112
Ekottaragama		•••	•••	•	7

				Page.
Eon				297
Epigraphia Indica				161
Ernst Kuhn				828
Estlin Carpenter			100	8°8
Estrangelo				280
Eugene				279
Exaggeration				69
" of figures				70
Ex-communication, Social				297
Exercises, formula of	-			115
Eyangha, Bergh van			124	125, 822, 828
Ezour Verl m				145
		F
				440 10F 848
Fa-blen				160, 195, 268
Fahien on Avalokiteshwan	٠			_
Fa-shang		+4		80
Feer Annales		•	. 60 61	60, 801, 818
Fest Gross	+4			808
Fick, social division in Inc	lu in	Buddha s t	ime	219
Fihnst, of Nedhum				280
Finot				239 304 829
Fleet				220, 15
Flesh of elephant, horse in Tantrism	and	dog recon	nmended	119
Floruit				27
Fo-pen-hing				192, 198
Fourte				19 270, 808
Foucaux Labravistara tr				19
Foucher, Gandbara Art				18, 26 371
, on the sacred spot	s of l	Buddhism	.1.	222, 298
Foulowna		-		208
Founa				208
For-na-yache		.,	•••	205

							PAGE.
Francke		•••	•••	63. 2	222, 23	1, 237,	247, 254, 323
Fredon in M		•••	•••			,	231
Fujishima, F		•••	•••	444		111	181
rujisiiiia, r		••• -	•••	***	•••	•••
				G.
Ganapatı hr	ıdaya di	haranı r	eveale	ed by Bu	iddha	•••	116
Ganapati S	-	•••	•••	411	•••	•••	243
Gandavyuh		••	•••	•••	•••	•••	104, 166
•				msaka	•••	•••	64, 79, 80
3 7		•••		•••		. ~	80
Gandhamad					dha	•••	50
Gandhara	-		•••		•••		306, 325, 336
Gandhara,				•••		200,	222
Gandhara,			•••	•••		•••	273
Garbe, R.				•••	•••		323
Garudas		•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	48
Gatha	•••		•		••	•••	175, 303
_		  0 7000	ort the	n Palı	•	•••	22
,, of La			5116 6118			•••	268
Gatha sam	•	 	••• 1	•••		•••	98
Gathasamg		vasuba	nanu	•••	•••	•••	15
Gathas, Pa				•••	•••	••	24, 37
Gautama	.1 1 (•••	•••	•		18, 25, 219
Gathas Pa		Sanskrit	•	• • •	•••	•••	234
Gauthiot		• • • •	•••	•••	• .		21
Geburt Bu		•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	135
Genius, Ind		++4	•••	•	•••	•••	$\begin{array}{c} 135 \\ 142 \end{array}$
Gentoo	•••	•••	•••	•••	••	•••	326
Georgias	•••	•••	•••	• • •	•••	•••	175
Geya	•••	.1	•••	···	•••	•	185
Ghanti sto	tra, tran	suterate	d into	Chinese	3 ~ • • •	•••	$\frac{100}{204}$
Ghosha	•	•••	•••	•••		•••	282
Ghoshaka	•••	•••	•4•	••	•••	•••	307
Gopa	•••	•••	• • •	•••	7		_ υγ∙

-					PAGE
Gopala					195
Gostanà.					884
Gotha					826
Göttingen					808
Gown					821
Grammatik					801
Great Wall					287
Gudhrakuta, peak					68
Grierson					888
Grihyasutras					117
Grundriss					155
Grünwedel				7, 9	7, 180, °28, 881
Grenwedel a Buddhist Art	ın Inc	dia			26, 265
Gubernates					827
Gubya samaja, one of the	Nina	Dharmas	of	Nepal	119
Guyanet, home of Pali					171
Gumamati					282, 888
Gurkhas					166
Gunt panca shatika					185
Gura Paja Kanmadı, by E	Kul	nan and			24
		H
Hadrian					887
Halhed Nathaniel Brassey					142
Halo			-		222
Hamilton Alexander					145 146
Hanvleden, Johann Ernst					141
Haraprasad Shastri					28 81, 122
Hardy B.		1			828
Hershaganta and Buddhest	n				287, 816
Harshapardhana			•••		816
Harsha Shilad tya					804
Harvard					808
Hastings, Warren					143

							PAGE.
Hebrew	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	234
Hegel	•••	•••	•••		•••	•••	149
Heine	•••	•••	•••		•••	•••	139
Hemanta	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	282
Hephthalites	•••	••	•••	•••	•••	•••	237
Herbert Beyr	nes	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	304
Hertel, J.		•	•••	•••	•••	•••	220
Hidimba		•••	•••	• \	•••		236
Hinayana		•••	•••	•••	•••	3, 4, 5,	241, 313, 319
" Div	ya v adai	na belor	igs to	1	•••	•••	53
History of In	ndian I	ıteratuı	re, Wel	per's	•••	•••	154
Hitopadesha		•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	143
Hiuen-tsiang	5 •••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	30, 160, 184
Hodgson Br	on Hou	ighton	•••	•••	•••		64, 301
Hodgson, tra		-			•••	•••	¹ 38
Hoernle, D			•••	•••	•••	•••	226, 276, 301
Hoey, W.			• • •	•••	1	• • •	7
Holstein, vo				•	•••		114, 321
Holtzmann,	•					re	287
Homer	on Duc		ni ouiio	1210 2310			320
71 1	•••	•••	•••	•	•••		323
•		•••		•••	•••	•••	18
Horapathal			•••	•	•••	•••	226
Horintze, N		-		•••	•••	•••
Horner, Ja	-	•		•	••	 64.	116, 226
Huber W.					8, 2	57, 264	, 304, 324, 829
	n Sutral	ankara	•••			• •	36, 37
Humboldt		•••	••	•••	•••	•••	149
Humour, E	Buddhist	••	 ''	•••	•••	•••	, 98, 191
Hún Mihir	akula		•••	•••	••	•••	812
Huns, in M	Iahavast	ru	•••	•••	•••	·••	_ 18
,, M	ahavast	u their s	cript	•••	•••	•••	, 23
,, V	Vhite, tl	neir scri	pţ	•••		•••	237
Huth						3	228

			P	AGE
Huvahka			187, 246	941
Hymns			107,710	110
I
Idykutsarı			7	7. 88
Indica				150
Indology				154
Indra				121
Induvarma				198
Instation, forcible of hands, half b	nother of I	Buddha		81
Introduction a l'histoire du Bou				153
Iranian Influence				2.6
Istpur	••			280
Ishvara in Lalitavistara in Vasuba	ndhu		281	•0
Ishvarakrishna, his Samkhya Sap Vasubandhu in his own Paramai	tata attaci ntha Santai	ed by		99
Isismga				15
Itivuttaka		• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •	164,
1-trinz			8 20, 268
on Asanga and Vasubandha				28
, on Buddha-canta			80	808
n on Hinayana and Mahayana			44	45
m on Matriceta				40
" speaks highly of Yatakamala				44
translated Hymn of 150 ver	ses of Mu	itnceta
from Sanskrit	444			41
,, translation of Sanskut Vinays	into Chin	ese	, 8,	, 29
translation of Subrillekha			•	92
Ityukta				175
Ivanovski, Chinese Jatakamala				11
J
Jain attack on Buddhists			:	280
Jainas persecuted		46		57
•		ì

						PAGE.
Jainendra-buddhi	•••	•••		•••		290, 312
Jainmatha	•••		•••	•••	•••	290
Jains or Nirgrantha	S		•••	••	•••	199
Jambudvipa	144	•••	•••	•	•••	253
Jataka	•	141		•••	••	164, 175, 324
Jataka (No 387)			•••			15, 313
Jataka (Kınnarı)	•••	•••			•••	15
Jataka (Kusha)	•••	••	•		•••	15
Jataka (Marakata)	•••	•••		••	•••	15
Jataka (Mittavindal	ιa)	•		• • •	•••	50
Jataka (Shyamaka)			164	•••	•••	14
Jatakas in Mahavasi	tu			- • • •	•••	14
Jatakamala of Shura	ì.	••	•••		•••	41, 11, 308
Jayadıtya		•			••	312
Jesus	••	• •	•••	•	••	324
Jesus and Samaritan	n woma:	n, paral	lel to	ın Budd	hist
Literature	•	•••			•••	55
Jesus, transfiguration		•••	•••	•••	•	126, 231
Jeta Park, in Shrav	astı	••			•••	19
Jetha		•	•••	•	••	247
Jimutavahana, story	of	•••		•••	•••	63
Jinathapakasini	•	u ,	•••	•••	•••	272
Jnana Gupta	•	•••	••	•••		270, 307
Jnanaprasthana	•••	•••	••		•••	279,291
Jnana-Vaima	• •	••	•••	•••		290
Joaseph	•••	••	•••	•••	•••	326
Jodesshu, Japanese	Buddhi	st sect	••			79
John	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	128
John, the Samaritan	woman		••	···	•••	55 - 10
Jones	•	•••	•••	•••	•••	143
Judæo-Persian	•••		•••	101	•••	235
Judaism . Judsaf	•••	•••	•	•••	•••	315
Julien, Stanislaus	•••	•••	•••		•••	326
Janen, Sminsians	•••		•••			62, 204, 250

						Page.
Karma-Shataka	•••			•••	•••	52, 330
Karunapundarika su		• • •		•••		80, 104
	okhai	nan	•••	•	•••	80
Karyamoha is benef	icent			•••	•••	108
Kashgar	•••	•••	•••	••	•••	226, 224, 276
Kashmir, Buddhists	of	••	•••	•••	•••	193, 283
" Vinaya of	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	268,
Kashyapa		•••	•••	•••	• • •	165, 297
Kashyapiya		•••	•••	•••	130	263
Kashyapiyas	•••		•••	• 1 p	•••	9, 169
Kassapa Matanga	trans	slates f	first Sa	anskrit	text into Chinese	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	93
Katha Vatthu	•••	•••		••	•••	165, 211, 338
Katyayana ••• '	•••		•••	•••	•••	197, 204, 271
Katyayaniputra	•••	• • •	••	•••	••	29, 279
Kauravas	•••	•••		•••	•••	81
Kaushambi, moder	n Ko	sam	_ • • •	••	•••	187
Kaushikasutra of A	tharv	aveda	•••	•••	•• `	55
Kayavıneka	•••	•••	•••	• •	•	311
Ke-gon, Japanese	Budal	hist sect		•••	•••	79
Keith A. B	•••		•••	•••	•	323
Kenjiyn Kasawara	••	•••		•••		91
Kennedy, J			• •	••• .	•••	255
Kern.	•	• •	•••	3 5,	65, 78	3, 301, 307, 323
Kern's manual of I	Buddl	usm	•••	• ••	•••	11
Kessler	•••	•••	•••	• • •	•••	280
Khadgavishna Sutr	а	•••	•••	•••	•••	18
Khaggavisana Sutt	а	•••	•••	,	•••	14, 18 `
Khaladana		•••	•••	l •••	•	261
Khanekupe	••	•••	•••	200	•••	248
Kharoshti	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	, 238
Kharoshti MSS.	•••	•••		,	•••	7, 886
Khosroes	•••	•••	•••	••• ,	•••	887
Khotan	•••	• • •	•••	•••	,	224, 225, 834

					PAGE
Khotan its Kharo	thu MS	SS.			7	,
Khuastuaruf					286	;
Khuddaka nikaya					820, 9 168	ı
Ahuddaka patha					14, 158 811 825
Kielhorn		_		-	133 155
Kien-to-wei					195
Kunnanjataka					15
Krpm					198
Kıratarjunıya					145
Kirtı					222
Klementa					927 205
Konow					223
Koros					80 L
Kosha "					288, 810
Koti Karma			••		881
Kriki (king)					15
, his dre	11113				15 62
Krishna, Buddha o	nıqma	d to			2 204
Krishna Mishra	•				232
Knyatantra					117
revives o	dd Brai	hmanic	ntaxl		117
Kahemendra			••		61 62 68 881
Kahudraka					9
Kublai Khan					810
Kucha		1			884
Kubn					2 *4 826
Kujala-Kadphises					254
Kumarajiva					*02, 258, °62
, his biogr	aphy o	f Ashva	adrody.		28
trapalate					186
n n		Agarjun			23
, ,,		ikhavati			79
" translato	r of S	itralank	ATE		86
Kumarata					204

				•				PAGE.
Kumarlabd	ha		•••			• • •	,	30
Kumanabu		•••					58.	51, 195
,, Vada	•••	•	•••		•	•••	,	195
Kushajatak		•••	•••		•••			15
-		•••	•••	•••		•••		249
Kushana	···	oot Tu	rleich h	anir	•••	•••		235
Kutadgu-b	ng, earn	cst Tu	IVIOU D	AUL	•••	•••
		`	L.
Laboulaye	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••		326
Laja	•••	•••	•••	••;	•••	•••		171
Lalitavistar	a	•••	•••	•••	7,12	3, 130,	265,	270, 272
,,	a Vaipu	lyasutr	a.	•••	•	•••		19
	Boro-Bu	dur's s	culptur	es relati	on to	•••		26
	ımportaı	nce as	literatu	re	•	•••		27
-	ın Shiks	hasam	ue	•••			104,	303, 305
	not a rel	hable s	ource	•••		•••		27
,,	relation	to Buc	ldha-ca	rıta	• • •	•••	_	28
	Tıbetan	transl	ation	•••	•••	•••		25, 26
Lambaka	•••	•	•••	•••		•		271
Langles	•••	••	•		•••	•		147, 166
Language,	figurativ	e and	exagger	ated	•••			69
Lankavata		•••	• • •	•••	••	•••		80
22	ın Shan	tideva		•••	• •	••		104
"	Dharan	ıs ın	106	•••	•••			117:
2)	Sutra	••	ı	•••	•••	••		309
,,	teaching	g in Ma	ahayan	Shraddl	hotpada	• • • •		40
Lanman	•••	••		••		•		320
Lassen Cl	hristian		•	•		153	, 155,	204, 205
Latria	•••	•••				•••		119
Le Coq		•••	•••	£	•••		7,	130, 228
Lefmann,	S	3 • •	••	•••	•	•		19
L'ehmann	•••		• •	•••	•••			129,323
Leipzig	• •	••	•••		•••	, •••		308
Lesebuch	••	• • •	• • •	+ 	•••	• • • •		325

	PAGE.
Leumann	87 229
Lévi, Sylvam	9 28, 162, 229, 257 279
on Matriceta	41
, Sanakrit Udana	7 8 28
Light of Asia	181
Lipi	297
Lloyd	887
Lobnor	284
Lokananda	29, 921
Lokapannath and The Mara and Buddha	tegend 58
Lokeshvara shataka hymn	110
Lokottarayadis—yadıman	4
n their Vinaya	11, 805
Lope de Vega	180
Lotavas	815
Lotus de la Bonne Lon	28
Lotus of the Good Law (Religion)	70
Lotus Verlag.	808
Laders	188 221, 228, 289
, has Sanakrit (ragments on Buddhist	drama 86 44, 245
, Udanavanga	7
n on Kahemendra	68
Luke	125
"XI 27 f	· 126 828 886
Lumbini park	31
~ m ш
Macartney MS	227, 276
M rdonnell	288
Madhamikas	388
Madhyadeshadesh kanam m Maharastu	12, 805
Madhyamagama	7 9,172 883
Madhyama-karika of Nagarjuna	- 89
n Shortra	818

-						- Pac	GE.
Madhyama-kanka of Sutra	- 1	•••	•••	•••		3	12
Madhyamakavatara of Cano		••				89, 3	12
Madhyamikas		•		•••	283	289,3
Madhyamika Sutras	••	••	• •	••			12
Madya		•••					19
Magadhi			171, 2	13, 215,	223.
Magians	•••	• •			,		35
Mahaban inscription	•	•••	•••	·			24
Mahabharata		•••	,		134.	147,-1	48
, cited by Vajrasuci	19.0		_	••	_,_,		38
" in Turfan		•••	•		-	263, 2
,, in Lankavatara	•					-	8 1
Mahadevi in Suvarnaprabas		•••					83
Mahagovinda Sutta	444						14
Mahajanaka Jataka	•••	-		•••		2	20
Maha kala tantra, its poten	C♥		• • • •	••		1	19
Mahakashyapa	• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •	· ·					52
Mahakavya		•••	•••			;	31
Mahakushthila	••				•	2	80
Mahamayuri .	••	)	•••	•••		3	04
Mahamegha sutra translate			se	••		1	15
Mahanama		••		•		2	97
Mahaparınıbbana sutta	•••	••		51, 126,	128,	208, 3	80
Mahaprajna paramita	•••		••	•••	-		6 8
" " shastra	•••	••	2-7-1	•••	-	19	94
Mahapronidhana		•	••	-		36	09
Maĥapurusha	•	· ~	•••	•••		9	22
Maharaja Kanikalekha of N	Matricet	a	•••	•••		~ '	4 0
Maharatnakuta		•••	•••	•••		33	21
Mahasamnipata	•						68
Mahasanghika canon			•••	•••		116, 30	05
Mahasanghikas .	•		•••	Ĩ1,	169,5	259, 20
,, their Dharanipit	aka	••					16
Mahasanghika Vinaya			•••	~	;	264, 33	30

						P	AGE
Mahesamipatta							81
Mahasummatiyas .	••						2.
Mahaimya Buddhat						83	G
Mahavagga .			17, 99	16*	264	806	30
Mahayana			•				19:
Mahayanta ,						808	83
Maharastu		7	I1. →65.	266	2~0,	805	814
n Avalokanusi	itra in		•		·		104
Barth, Wind	isch and R	Mitra	on				13
no work of a	ırt						11
, Pali concord	ls						14
Mahavyutpatti							λ
Mahayana				8 40,	108	816	•41
, come to ideal	l						51
. Hindu influen	rca
leaning in Sau	indarananda						85
" Shraddhortad							186
Shraddhotpad	la					81.	188
•	Ashvagosha i	100	0 6 2 6	l۵
, ,,	author of						80
ay 3	Chineso tran	สโลโบออ	ol				40
	Suzuki affi		Takaku
	enies Asbrag	osha s	authorsh	iip			40
, Sutralankara			••			95,
Mahendra "							165
Mahesha							190
Maheshwara in Karan	dayyuha						74
Mahinda							212
Mahuhasakas	••			D	169
Mahishasaka Vinaya							268
Maschuna							119
Mamas .				•••			816
Matrakanyaka, legend	l of						80
Maitrayani putra							203

						PAGE.
Maitreya and Shak	-		•••		 ,	, 60
" Bodhisattva	a.'	••	•••		•••	60, 66
Maitri, benevolence	:	•••	•••	•••	•••	113
Maitri, Pali Metta,	benevo	lence	•••	•••	•••	114
Majjhima	•••	•••		• •	•	312, 320, 329
" nikaya		••	•••	52, 13,), 128,	220, 323, 330
" Sıla		•••	••• 1	•••	•••	219
Makandika .	•••		• •	•••		260
Mala vavikrama	•••	•				254
Malını		• • •	•••			305
Malka			•••	•••	•••	232
Mamsa	•••	••				119
Mangalazmarks	,409	•••	•			264
Manes	•		•••	,•••	•••	230
" his religion b	ased or	. Zoroa	strianis	m	•••	230, 337
Manı	•••	•	•••	•		304
Manichæan .	•••	•	•••	•	•••	130
,, tracts	1_		•••	•••	225,	230, 233, 326
Manichæism	•••	•	1	•	•	233, 315, 337
Manı or Manes, do	ctrine o	f	•••	•••	•	225
Marjyushri	•••	•••	•••	••	•••	79
" invocation	to, in B	odhica	ryavata	ra later		109
" mulatantra	. pre	dıcts	арреа	rance	of
Nagarjur	າຂ	•••	•		••	120
Manoratha		•••		•	•••	282 、
Manu	•••	•••		•••	•••	144
" cited by Va	jrasucı	•••	••	•	•	. 38
Ms's five tantrık	•	•	6	•	•••	_ 119
Mara		•••	•••		•••	12
" and Buddha	• •		•••	••	•••	23, 220, 308
" and Upagupt			•••	•••	•••	258
,, personates B	uddha		•••	••• (•••	_57
Mar-Abba	•••			70.0	• •	23 6
Marasam yutta	•••	•••	•••	•••	₹ 🛡 🛡	228

					T.	AUA
Margoliouth						287
Mark, IX				١.	124,	824
Markandeya Purana						1
Markatojet ka			н			18
Maru						808
Maskan						295
Matha, Jam at Kolhapur						290
Mathura						250
Mathura Vinaya of						268
Matriceta					186	241
,, and Ashvagosha						40
, fragment from Turfan						47
, Siegling, Levi and Pos	assun on					41
Matriceta's Varn narthavarnas	u, tran	elated	by
F W. Thomas	-					41
Matrika						298
Matsya						111
Matthew		14		124	128
Matth. IV						824
Mandgalyayana			16	47	228,	279
Maurya						19:
Max Koch			•			827
Max Müller, edits and translate	s Gukhavi	divyuha				151
Max Wallesor						5
Maya, Buddha's mother Queen	a	••	:	12, 11	, 21,	820
Mayans						267
Mazdiana						804
Mdo sutras						167
Mecca mentioned by Kalaenkri	1					120
Mechaka					205	200
Megasthenes						158
Meghasutra	••					118
its magical object	•••					128
Menander						159
Middle doctrine						87

						PAGE.
Mıd-Indian	•••				•••	3
Mihirakula in Lan	kavatara			•••	•••	81
Mihir in Mani		444		•••	•••	231, 339
Milinda		•••		•••	•••	308
Milindapanha	•••	•••	••	••	•••	159, 216, 217
Minayeff	•••	•••	••		•••	279, 329, 338
Miracles		• •		•••	•••	4, 127
,, of the Bud	dha	•••	_			12
Miraculous powers			•	•••	•••	297
Mironov	promisi	•••			•••	229, 339
Mitrakto	•••	•••				301
Mitra Nep Bud		-	•••	•••	•••	11
Mitra Rajendrala			: 1 11	•••	•••	11
•			.dana M	īo]a	•••	53
,, ,, Mıxed Sanskrit	011 1)IV yava	oana n	•••		18, 17, 25, 71
Mlecchas in Lanks	···	•••	•••	•••	,	81
Moggalana .	ivalaia	•••	• • • •	••	•••	16
Moggaliputta Tiss	• •	•••	••		•••	165, 211, 338
	•••	•••		-	•••	235
Moneyasute		• * *	-		••	172
Moni		•••	•	• •	• • •	304
	·	••	•••	•		222
Mrigashatakastuti,			•	~	•••	- 111
Mudra			•	••		119
Mudrarakshasa		••	•••		•••	290
Mulasarvastivadis	•••	• •		•••	8	, 182, 262, 339
Mulasarvastivedi v	naya		•••	•••ر		330
Müller, F W K	•	,	•••	229,	230,	233, 234, 335
Mundaka	•••		•••	•••	•	293
Mundyne	•••	•••		•••	•••	321
Munigatha	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	172, 224
Myandas	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	167
Mystic Tibetan fo	rmula	,	خبيو	• • •	•••	54
			-			`

N

Baga Stron						19
Negranista		14				-1
* agamfam						195
Light on the				•	7 F4 61	2" 1 0 203
n ba ru	ier e	t h	Mann	shes '	Ma.a
tartra	•					1*0
* Leimus *	utrus 6	(1 or	t tf C	1000	שי כל	480 860
1 ancal r				•		120 209
- KALABATA 1-21	•					228
Nager	-					45
* L DCM - H						743
Haliman H						103
* ALIFATORE				,		•61
No miles in		••	. 			13
handa ball brothe	a et Ilo		triate	1 1 122	n bu	21, 24, 826
* into & Upina	.4.					113
			**
I and Makha Sa	,005,511					178, 14G
2 anj n, 31					44,65	71, 1~, 201
1 spo con						145
I arayana in hans	A. HYUE	1			11	74
hanman G h.						200,827
hanman and Live)				••	*91
r in party a						83
I ataliam				•		827
hatan	_					*10
Neventaka	•		44			2:6
l araceth						1*6
heedle, Damond	l					178
Ivco-Nuddhism						131
hestoriam						168
t comenn			*			8*8
Ventu						166

							PAGE.
Nicheren	•••			•••	•••	•••	74
Nidana	•••	•••	•••		•••	•••	175
Nidanakatha		•••	•••	• • •	4	12, 20,	127, 272, 324
Niddesa		•		•••			164
- '			l to Ag	amas i	n San	-	9, 283, 294
Nıkolas Lena		-					139
Nılanetra, ep	ithet o			•••	••	•••	94
			••	•••	•••	•••	199, 299
Nirgranthash	astra			•••			282
Nirnaya Saga			••	•••		••	291
Nırvana		••	••		3		167, 299, 312
	hdeva	ımple		Bodhis		to postpone		•	•	•••	•••	•••	106
Nirviitti	••	••	•••	••	••		284
Nitishastra o	r stated	craft	••	•••	1 	•••	34
Nıya Rıver	•••	•••	,		•••		238
Nyayabındut	ıka	•••	•	• •		•••	X, 288
Nynatıloka	•••		•		•	•••	311
,
			-	ο.
Oblonsky	••	•••		•••		•••	327
Oldenberg (l			Kanısl		8, 2	8,306,	313, 323, 327
Oppert	100	•	•••	•••	•••		289
Ouigour	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••		304
Oxus	•••		•••		• • •	•••	271
			,	`
				Р.
Pabajja sutt	a	``	•••		· ·	• • •	14, 219
Pacceka Bu	ddhas		•••		141	•••	14
Padhana sut	ta	•••	•••	••	•••	•	14, 219, 308
Padmavatı a	vadana		•••	••	•••	• • •	63
Pahlavi		••	• •	••• ~	18	30, 230,	232, 233, 326
, used	by Ch	ristians				•••	234

						PAG
Pairikas						28
Pala dynasty						12
Pali						8,80
Pali Apadana						88
Palibothra	100					15
Pali, Essai sur lo						152, 17
Palimpsest						24
Palipatika						91
Palism						20
Palı Vinaya						88
Pamirs						26
Pamshupradana						19:
Pancakrama largel	y ascril	bed to Na	enujuna			190, 80
Pancakramopadest	ı A					12
Panca nikayika				-		21
Pancaraksha					100	115, 116 804
" collecti	on of f	ive Dhara	ns m N	epal		114
Panca tantra				•		184
Pandaras					17	289
Pandavas						81
Panuni				107	198,	*87, 281, 815
Panthaka						188
Parables, Buddhist						67 68
Parallel texts						120
Paramartha		•••				186
		asubandh	u and A	sanga		97
Paramarthamma S	ımgitı,	hymns				110
Paramartha sapta Samkhya Philose		Vasubane	ihu to	conft	ito	99
Param tas illustrato	d in Ja	takamala				42
Paramitas, perfecti	ons.					5
Paratmapanyartana						108
Paretmennmate						108
Parayana						175

	_					PAGE.
Pari Nirvana sutra	•••	•••		•••	•••	47,51
Parishistas .	•••	• 6 •	•••	•••	•••	73
Parittas or Pirits, c	harms o	f Ceylo	n	•••	111-	112,311
Parittas Pali, unbuc	dhistic	•••	•••	•••	•••	117
Parivara	~	•••	•••	•••	•••	162
Parshva		•••	•••	•••	•••	203, 204
Parsi learning, revis	al of	•••	•••	•••	• • •	150
Parthian	•••	•••	•••	•••	• • •	322
Paryaya	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	292
Pashupatas in Lanl	kavatara		•••	•••	•••	282, 81
Pataliputra		•••	•••	•••	•••	158
Patanjali	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	312
Patets, Zoroastrian	•••	•••	••!•	• •	•••	236
Pathak, Prof on B	ana	••	•••	•••		287, 290, 312
Pathamasambodhi	•••			-		272
Patimokkha	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	162, 208
Patisambhida Maga	ga	•••	•••	600 ~	•••	164
Patna	•••	,	••	•••		29
Patra	100	•••	1	•••	•••	312
Pekkha	•••	•••	•••		,	219
Peliyaksha, King	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	15
Pelliot, Paul	•••	•••	•••	•••	` 170,	228, 304, 334
Pen on Vasubandh	ıu	•••	•••	-	•••	94
Persecution, religio	us, ın I	ndıa	•••	144		299
Persia, translates fr			•	-	•••	263
Peshawar, Purusha		•••	•	•••	•	246
Peshita-Psalter	•	•••	•••	•••	•	- 233
Peta vatthu		•••	•	••	••	47, 164
Peterson, on Jam b	handar	S	-	••	••	288
Petrovsky		•••	•••			170
Petrovsky MS	•••		•••	•••		170, 227
Phal-chen	1		•••	•••	•••	167
Phu-yau-king, alleg	ed seco	ond tran	slation	of La	lıta-	- vistara	•••	••• ~		• • •	• • •	25

,		PAGE
Pilgrams, Chroren		15:
Puchel fragments of Sanskut canon	7. 321	3, 289 B21
Pitaka, Abhidharma.		10
Pitaka, Vinaya in Sanskrit	••	Î
Pitika		210
Pleyte on Boro-Budur's sculptures		20
Polemics		296
Polyonymy		B20
Poshapura		247
n putra		248
Po-tiso		254
Poreum, de La Vallac		7 86 289
on Dharanis	118	120 122
, on Matriceta		41, 270
Prabhakara Mitra		814
Prabodha Candrodaya		222
Pradhana (matter)		284
Praharahmi -		257
Prajashanti	-	290
Prajnaparam te		64
,, hridaya		87
", ", sutres enshrined	. In Japan
tm∞ 609 A. D	n	118
, sutras	85 104,116
Prajnapte-Shastra, of Mandgalyayana		2 79, 170
Prakaranapada Prakata-Prakasha	••	279 197
Prakriti, Chandala maiden falls m	lows with	TR /
Ananda	1046 ATT	55
Praknticuma		B89
Prakrit Sohakostas		B17
Pransilhana		266
, prayer		77 266
Prandhearys		264, 265
*

						PAGE.
Prasannapada (of Candraku	rtı		•••	•••	89
		•••	•••		•••	279
Prasenajit .				•••	•••	190
•	g		•••	·	•••	56
Pratimoksha	•	••	•••	•••	•••	174, 804,829
" su	tra, Sanskri	t .	•••	•••	••	8
Pratyeka-Budd		•••	•••		18, 4	7, 50, 293, 296
Pravritti		•••		•••		284
Prayash cittika	٠.,	•••	••		•••	260
Preksha .	. ,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,,	•••	•••	••	• •	219
Pretas	••	••		•••	•••	16
Pretavastu (pe				•	•••	47
Priyangu .			•••	•••	•••	276
Profecy about	Mahabhara	ıta	•••	•••	••	81
);))	degeneracy	of religi	ion	•••	•••	81
Przylusky				•••	•••	304
Psalms in Pal		•••		•••	•••	233
Punyatara	•••	•	•••		•••	262
Punyayashas	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	185, 204, 205
" langua	ge and style	ın A	Iahayar	na litera	ture.	60
Purana, Marl	kandeya	••	•••	• •	•••	16
Puranic influe	ence	•	•	•••	•••	71
Purdah	•••	•••	•••	• • •		307
Purna		•		•••	••	204, 294, 297
" alias P	urna Yashas	s .	•••	• • •	••	184
,, the ap	ostle	•	••	•••	•••	58, 203
Purnika	•••	•	•••	••	•••	203
Purusha (spii	nt)	•••			•••	284
Purusha pura	ı, (Peshawar	·)	•••	•	•••	248
Purvavad Ya			• •		•••	260
Pushkalavatı	•••		•	•••	•••	191, 200
Pushyamıtra		•••	•	•••	•••	55
-	olerance of l			s .	•••	57, 299
Pushya mitra	ı, kıng .	•• ′	•••	•••	•••	159

R.

Ragbuvansha 82 Rahukwe 290 Rajagriha 209 918 Rajagriha 98, 197 Rajarangun 801, 14 Rajgur 208 Ratvansutra 989 Ramanua 948, 289 Ramanua 948, 289 Ramayara, the Buddha mentomed m 184, 147, 287 Rapon 238 Rarandavyuba 74 R evalant 84 264, 968 , legend 52 n panprocha 83 sutra 88 Rainakarandakavyuhasutra 75 Ratnakuta 104 167 Ratnakuta 105, 104 Ratnokaran Mala 50 Ratnokaranda m Mala 50 Ratnokaranda padara 52 panpucha 52 ratta 84 Rathapala Apadara 52 panpucha 52 ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relice	Radloff				114 285
Rabulato	Raghuvansha				82
Rajatarangmi 98, 197 Rajendralal Mitra 1901, 14 Rajgr 208 Rarbarasutra 208 Rarbarasutra 1800 Ramanuja 448, 289 Ramayara, the Buddha mentioned m 184, 147, 287 Rapon 184, 147, 287 Rapon 1828 Ramatrayuba 1824 Rashirapala 184, 264, 968 , legend 184, 264, 968 , legend 188, 264, 968 , parpriocha 188 Ratinakarandakavyuhasutra 188 Ratinakarandakavyuhasutra 104, 167 Ratinakuta 104, 167 Ratinakuta 104, 167 Ratinakuta 104, 167 Ratinahuta 104, 167 Ratinahuta 104, 167 Ratinapala Apadana 162 Ratinapala Apadana 162 Ratinapala Apadana 162 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 180 Reden Gautama Buddhan 180 Reden Gautama Buddhan 180 Reden Gautama Buddhan 180 Relice 1826 Rehe worship 1820 Rémusat 1820					290
Rajatarangmi Rajatarangmi Rajatarangmi Rajatarangmi Rajatarangmi Rajatarangmi Rajatarangmi Rajatarangmi Rajatarangmi Ramanuja Rapson Rapson Rapson Rapson Rapson Rapson Rashtaryuha Ratinakarandakavyuhasutra Ratinakarandakavyu	Rajagriha				209 218
Rajendraha Mitra 1 208 Rajer 208 Raharsutra 299 Ramanya 189 Ramanya 189 Ramanya 189 Ramayara, the Buddha mentoned m 184, 147, 267 Rapon 238 Ranndavyuha 1924 Rashtrapala 294 Rashtrapala 294 Rashtrapala 294 Rashtrapala 294 Rashtrapala 294 Ratinakarandakavyuhasutra 295 Ratinakarandakavyuhasutra 29					98, 197
Raigur 208 Fakshassutra 989 Ramannan 180 Ramanuja 248, 288 Ramayara, the Buddha mentomed m 184, 147, 287 Rapeon 238 Rarandavyuba 74 R svatoni 824 Rashtrapala 84 264, 66 , legend 88 264, 66 , panipriecha 88 88 Rainakarandakayuhasutra 88 Rainakarandakayuhasutra 104 167 Ratinangela sutra quoted by Shantidera 100, 104 Ratinangela sutra quoted by Shantidera 100, 104 Ratinapala Apadana 59 Rainolkadharam 104 Ratinapala Apadana 62 panipucha , sutta 36 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 80 Relice 828 Relice worship 298 Rémusat 298 Rémusat 298 Rémusat 298		ı			301, 14
Ramanuja	•				208
Ramanya Ramayara, the Buddha mentioned m Rapon Rarandavyuha Rashirapala Rashirapala Rainakarandakavyuhasutra Ratinakarandakavyuhasutra Ratinakaranda	Rakshassutra				299
Ramayara, the Buddha mentoened m Rapson	Ramanian		•		180
Rapon 238 Ranndavyuba 74 R svahoni 824 Rashtrapala 84 264, 965 , legend 88 264, 965 , panipriocha 88 Rainakarandakayuhasutra 75 Ratnakuta 104 107 Ratnamegha sutra quotod by Shantidera 103, 104 Ratnavad na Mala 59 Ratnolkadharam 104 Ratthapala Apadana 59 ratnolkadharam 52 Ratnakuta 59 Ratnolkadharam 50 Ratnolkadharam 52 Ratna of Ceylon visited by Buddha 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relice 44 Relice worahip 398 Rémusat 398	Ramannia				948, 289
Rarandaryuha 74 R savahani 824 Rashirapala 84 264, 968 , legend 88 264, 968 , n panipriocha 88 Rainakarandakavyuhasutra 88 Rainakarandakavyuhasutra 104 167 Ratnamegha sutra quotod by Shantidera 108, 104 Ratnawad na Mala 59 Rainolkadharam 104 Raithapala Apadana 52 panipucha 84 , sutta 84 Ravara of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 80 Relice 84 Relice worship 939 Rémusat 939 Rémusat 939	Ramayana, the Buddha mentione	d m			184, 147, 287
R sayahani 824 Rashirapala 84 264, 968 , legend 88 264, 968 , panpriocha 88 Rainakarandakavyuhasutra 75 Ratnakuta 104 167 Ratnamegha sutra quoted by Shantideva 108, 104 Rainayad na Mala 59 Ratnolkadharam 104 Rainayad na Mala 59 Ratnolkadharam 52 Ratnapala Apadana 52 panpucha 84 , sutta 82 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relica 42 Relice worship 399 Rémusat 304	Rapson	••			238
Rashirapala 84 264, 968 , legend 52 , panpriocha 88 Ratinakarandakaryuhasutra 75 Ratinakuta 104 167 Ratinamegha sutra quotod by Shantidera 103, 104 Ratinavad na Mala 59 Ratinolkadharam 104 Ratinapala Apadana 52 panpucha 84 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Relice 44 Relice worahip 399 Rémusat 394	Rarandavyuha			444	74
, legend	R sayahani				824
n panipriecha 88 n sutra - 88 Ratinakarandakavynhasutra - 104 167 Ratinakuta 104 167 Ratinamegha sutra quotod by Shantidera 108, 104 Ratinavad na Mala 59 Ratinoftadharam 104 Ratihapala Apadana 52 panipucha 84 n sutta 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relice 48 Relice worahip 398 Rémusat 988	Rashtrapala				84 264, 968
Ratnakarandakavyuhasutra	, legend				52
Ratnakarandakaryuhasutra	n panpriecha				88
Ratnakuta 104 167 Ratnamegha sutra quotod by Shantideva 103, 104 Ratnavad na Mala 59 Ratnofkadharam 104 Ratnapala Apadana 52 panpucha 84 , sutta 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relici 299 Rémusat 299	n sutra				88
Ratnamegha sutra quoted by Shantidera 103, 104 Ratnavad na Mala 59 Ratnoftradharam 104 Rathapala Apadana 52 panpucha 84 , sutta 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relics 48 Reics worahip 399 Rémusat 300, 103, 104 Ratnavad na Mala 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relics 399 Rémusat 399	Rainakarandakavyuhasutra				75
Ratnavad na Mala 59 Ratnolkadharam 104 Ratthapala Apadana 52 paripucha 84 , sutta 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relice 4 Reix worahip 398 Rémusat 204	Ratnakuta				104 167
Rainolkadharam 104 Raithapala Apadana 52 panipucha 84 , sutta 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhan 828 Relice 4 Reise worahip 299 Rémusat 204		intide71
Raithapala Apadana 52 paripucha 84 . sutta 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relict 4 Reisc worahip 299 Rémusat 204		••			59
parpucha 84 , sutta 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relice 4 Reise worahip 399 Rémusat 204
, sutta 52 Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relici 4 Relic worahip 399 Rémusat 204
Ravana of Ceylon visited by Buddha 80 Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relica 4 Reisc worship 299 Rémusat 204
Reden Gautama Buddhas 828 Relice 4 Reise worship 299 Rémusat 204	,
Relice		dha
Reisc worship 299 Rémusat 204					828
Rémusat 204					_
	-				-
Renogades, Buddhist 299			**	**
	Renegades, Buddhist				299

							-
							ٔ	PAGE.
	Repetitions, excess	ive				•••		86
	, too much	ı for	I-tsing	~ •••	•••	•••		261
	Revata		•••	•••	•••	•••	-	194
	Rgyud	•••	-	•••	•••	·	_	167
	Rhins, Dutreuil de	e	•••		•••	•••	170, 22	7, 247
	27 	, K	haroshti	MS.	• ••	•		7
	Rigveda	•			•••	•••		152
	Rishyashringa lege	end		•••		• •	-	63
	Ritusamhara			•	•••	•••	-	144
	Rockhill, Udanava	rga	1 			•		7
		-	•••	•	·•••			141
	Rohilaka .	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••		274
	Rosen, Friedrich		•	•	•••	••		152
	Ro th		140	•••		•••		152
	Roy Ram Mohan	•••	•••	••	•••	~ 	_	151
Ĺ	Rückert, Friedrich		•••	•••	••			149
	Rudra	•	••	•••		•	,	121
	Rudrayana	•••	•••			•••		260
	Rune	• •	•••	•••		•••		236
4	Runes							235
	Rupavatı Avadana	•••	•	•		•••		59
	-							-
				s.			- ъ.
	Sabbe panna Avijj	a	•••	•••	•	•••		328
	Sachau .	•••	•••		•••	•		233
	Saddharmapundar	ıka	•••	64	4, 72, 1	83, 166,	235, 30	9, 337
	" Dhar		ın	•••		•••	11	7, 128
	4	"	•••	•	•••	•••		104
	,, its ag		•••	•••	•••	•••	•	71
	,, its ap	pend	lices	•••	••	•••	-	73
	" praise		`	116	•••	١	~	70
	" Vasu	ıband	lhu's com	mentan	es on	•••	- /	39
	Sadhanas, publish	ed by	y F. W. T	Chomas	991	•••		132

, ,

,			PAGE
Sagara			199
Sagathavappa			219
Saharayagga			14
Saketa			28
Sakkadagami	••		282
St. Petersburg Derivmary		Pero.	154
Salemann his Pahlavi stu	ರ್ಷ	-	280
Salistamba sutra			104
Salvation, easy way to			298
Samadhiraja			64 82 169
Sam ntabhadra pranidhar	ıahymam M	iss.	111
Samentapasadika			202
Pali			269
Sem riten woman			128
Samphana sutra	••		280
Samgitha sutta	-		811
Samkhya	••	-	88, 199
,, saptan of lahvar	akrahna		22
Sammatiyas			169
Samvaradayatantra			119
Samvatibodnicittabhavari		samgraba	186
Samynkingama in Samkr	it		170,289,880
Samyuna		•	820 880
Samyuttanikaya			9 168 581
Sanchi, rehefs of		••	26, 250, 828
Sandh Nirmokana			808
Sandrakottas		1	158
Sanghabhadra 🔪		 	268, 183
Sanghadners			219
Sangharakshita	1		298
Sangitiparyaya	,		279, 201
Sankara			90
, Sutta.			811
Sankhya referred to in St	itra iankara.	•	$ 8

							Page.
Sankhyas in	Lanka	vatara	•••	•••	•••	•••	81, 269
Sanskrit at c		•••	•••	••		•••	42
" Ca	r Carou	18	••	•••	•••	•••	61
-	non	•••	•••		•••	•••	6
•	, in !	Buddhis	m		•••	f • • •	18
" Med	•	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	205
,, parv	ata	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	308
, -	ana	•••		•		•••	196
Santikenidar	na	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	12 note
Sapo-che-po	•••	•••		•••	•••	••	202
Saptabuddh		ı, hymn	ın MS	S.	•••	146	111
Sarai-kala	•••			•••	•••	•••	198
Sarasvatı in	Karan	davyuha	•••	•••	•••	n. 4	75
,,,,,,,	Suvarn	aprabha	sa	.	•••		83
Saratthasang	gaha	••	••	•••	•••	•	271
Sarnath (Ex	cavatio	n)	••	••	•••) .	187
Sarvadarsha		•	Budd	lhısm		•••	287
Sarvajna M	ıtra, au	thor of S	Sragdl	ara stot	ra		111
Sarvalogaisv	ara		•	•	•••	•	253
Sarvastivada	ı (Mula) school	ın Ba	ına		2, 6	, 19, 287, 304
Sarvastıvadı	•	•	•••		•••		229, 239, 329
,, ۲	⁷ ınaya					•••	´ 3 30
Sarvastıvadı	s, their	Sanskri	t c ano	n.	••	•••	239, 262
Sarvasukha	mdada	dharanı	•	•••	•••		114
Sasanians	•••	•••		•••		•••	132
Satavahana	•••			•	•••		91
Satire agair	st Bud	ldhism		•	•••	•••	298
Saundarana	ında		•••		•••		242, 310
7)	ıts	Mahaya	ana le	anıngs		•••	36
"	ka	vya of A	shvag	hosha	•••	•••	, 34
Sautrantika	is	•	•••		, •••	••	279
Sayana	•••	••	•••	-		•••	152
Schelling	•••	•••	•••	•••		•••	151
Schiefner	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	, 179

						1	PAGE.
Scham				64			8
Schematics .							11
Schlegel brothe	75						146
Schlegel, Fr							146
Schlegel W						147	, 787
Schmidt, J							23
Schnell							C-
Schopenhauer							115
Schweder Lea	pold von					189	2.0
Scripts, sixty fo	ur		^.				28
Seleucus				-			158
Seleukas "		••					178
Senart ,	•					*6 3 *27
" on the '	Turlan pal	ntugs			÷40	° €0. 809
Scydel, Rudol						1-4 1-8
Shadakahara ta	dya			•			58
Shadrargiyas							299
Shahmameh							281
Sha la gatha	4						204
Shaivaites							265
Shajikidhen							275
Shakala .	•						198
Shakra Indra							270
Shakuntala							840
Shakyamuni							, 184
	ls predeces	15011	•		•	5, 16
Shakyashastras							816
Shakya Simha				••			815
Shalatamba m	ODINED N	muc					104
Shandilya Shankara Ach						150 105	208
Shankaravijayi	•					179 185
Shantideva	•						287
Shantmath at	Camban					100	989. 989.
CHARLEMAN AL	Cambay						209

						PAGE.
Shaonano Shao	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••'	252
Shapurakan work o	f Manı	• •	•••	•••	•••	231
Sharanga-dhara-pad	ldhatı	•••	•••	•••	•••	290
Shardulakarna		•••	•••	•••	•••	55
Shardulakarna, stor	y of m	Divyar	adana	•••	•••	55
Shardulavıkrıdıta	•••	••	•••	• • •	••	25, 258
Sharı putra prakara	na	••	•••	•••	•••	223
Shariputra rejects a	monk	candid	ate	•••	37	7, 297, 328, 331
Sharira puja	•••	• • •	•••	•••	•••	289
Shastrı (Haraprasad	la)	•••	•••	•••	••	28, 31
Shatagatha	•••		•••	•••	•••	197
Shatapancashatika	nama s	totra	•••	•••	•••	40, 186
Shatapathabrahmar	a, com	pared	•••	•••	-	71
? 1	fragm	ents fro	om Cer	ntral Asu	l	73
Shatarudriya	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	282
Shatasahasrika quot	ted as I	3hagav	atı	•••	•••	86
Shaunaka	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	208
Shauraseni	•••	•••	•••	•••		223
Sher-Phyn		•		•••	•••	36, 167
Sherplyn	•••	••	•••	•••	•••	167
Shibi, King	•••	•	• • •	•••	•••	36, 50, 195, 200
Shiksha	. •••	•••	•••	•		302
Shikshananda	•••		•••		•••	186, 304
Shikshapada	•••	•••		4	•	316
Shikshasamuccaya	of Shar	itideva	•••	••	•••	86, 101, 319
" con	trasted	with B	odhica	rya-vatar	а.	105, 316
Shiladitya, Shri Ha	rsha	•••	•••	•		221
Shin-gon	•••		•			122, 337
Shinshu, Japanese			•••	•	•	79
Shishyalekhadharm	ia kavya	ı of Ca	ndrago	mī	•••	100
Shiva, cycle of god	s m Ma	hayanı	a.	ί.		5, 307
Shokavinodanaasht	akshan	akata	••	••	•••	231
Shraddhotpada	•••	•••	•••	• .	•••	39, 40
Shramana	•••	•••		•• ,	•••	380

			PAGE.
Shravasti		16, 19, 55, 57,	190, 269, 828
Shri Haraha		, -, -, -, -,	321
Shrilabha	-		282
Shum ti, disobedient devout qu	cen		δ 1
Shronaparantak s	10021 #		₽8
Shuddhavasas			270
Shuddhodens, father of Buddh			19, 21
Shunga dynasty			35
Shunyata			299
Shunyata in Prajnaparamitas			85
S medhraja		be .	82,820
, Shantideva			82 104
Shunyavada			5 45,808
Shura instance of how Chinese	e fielm	lo cortemater	2 40,000
Sareknt	- 404 ₁ 23	10000-2200 01	258
Shura or Aryashura, poet			41
Shyama			805
Shyamaka jataka			14
Siddhartha Proce			18 827
Siddlin		_	121
Siedenstucker/			811
Sieg			220
Siegling reconstructs Matricets	L		41 220
Siksasamuccaya			88 101, 105
Simbala			268
Singangu		_	284
Singhalese			165
Siu-ho-to			195
Smith, V A.			8
Soghdien			288, 284
Somendra, son of Kalvemendr	a		68
Soohaji Bapoo		1	178
Sotapatti		84	288
Sport			60 257, 808

						Page.
Sphutartha, nam	ne of Y	ashomit	ra's co	mment	ary or
Vyakhya	•••	•••		•••		280
Spiritualism repud	diated		•••	•••	••	296
Spooner	•••	. •	•••	•		336
Sragdhara stotra,	hymn to	Tara		•••	•••	111
Srighanta	•	•••	•••			121
Srosh in Mani	•••	•••	•		•••	231
Stael von-Holsten	n •••	•••	• • •	•••	•••	229, 321
Stanislaus	••	•			·	204
Statecraft or Niti	shastra	••			•••	34, 84
Stem	•••	••	411	7,	73 130	, 195, 227, 234
Sthavira .	•			••	•••	263,281
Sthaviragatha		•••	•••	•••		10, 294, 54
Sthiramati	•••	•	• • •			1 90
Stonner .	•••				•	91, 235
Stotras			•	••	•	17, 110
Stupa			••	•••	4.0	17, 45, 51, 66
Subhashita samgr	aha	•••			•	1-22
" Sanjsa	ha		•••	•••	••	322
Subhashitavali	••	74 0		•••	944	289
Sudravarma	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	198
Sugata				•••	•••	289
Suhrillekha of Na	igarjuna	, .		•••	••-	91
Sukhavatı	•••	• •	486	•••	• •	309
,, charm	for birth	ın	700	•••	••	115
Sukhavatıvyuha	••	•••	•••	•••	•••	77, 94
Sukhtankar Shanl	kar	• •	•••	••	•••	339
Sumagadha, leger		4	••	•••	•••	281
Sumagadhavadana	a	•••	•••	•••	•••	62
Sumedha	••	•	• • •	•	• •	264
Sundara	·	•	••	••		52
Sundarananda Ka	ıvyam	•••			•	28
Sundarı	•••	141		•		34
Superman, in Pali	canon	4.0"	•••	140		4

					PAGE
Sumbhatas	tava				110
Suprabhata					816
Surangama					800
Suryamatı, S					8*0
	a of Avants		-		198
Sashrata					276, 277
Sutralankar	a			8,247	, 814 820
	cites Buddhocarlta				199
,,	of Ashvagosha				80 36
h	onginal Sanskni fr by Lüdera	agments	treated	ol	36
n	refers to the great and Vauheshika se	epica t	o Sank Brahm	hya ans and Jains				88
14	relation to Divyava	dana			51
n	Shastra -			••	180
. "	story of Shanputra	L .			87
	of Sthavirus				+97
Sutra of 42	articles, first transi neso in 70 A. D	lation fro	m Sanı	knt	23
_	ecaya, of Shantideva				CI 101
Sutra Sam	nkkaya				818
Sutras Bu	ddhist m Sanskut				8
Sultanipati	, Sutrampata			9. 18. 16	8, 125 830
Sutta pital	LA			, ,	209,213
Suttatikini					210
Sutta vibb	anga.				18° 260
Suvamakal	hi mother of Ashvag	osha			*8 *9
Suvamapo	abhasa "				61, 82
/ 11	fragment from	Contral	Asir.		8.5
,	in Shantideva				104
Suvarma pr	abhasa-suira			~~ 28	0, 284, 285
Sumbi 1				4D. B	2 188,809
Suzuki b Shradd	olds Ashvaghosha lotpada	to be	author	of	40

							PAGE.
C 11		ĺ					298
Svadhyaya	•••	•••	•;•	••	,		261
Svagata	•	•••	•••	•••		•••	195
Svat			•••	•	••	•••	65
Svayambhu			•	•••	•••	•••	74
,,	ın Karı	andavyu	ıha	•	•	•••
37	Purana		•••	•••	•	•••	110, 319, 333
Syriac	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	326
Systema Br	ahmanı	cum	•	•••	•••	•••	141
,				T.			•
						1.4	8, 9, 40, 79, 92
Takakusu		•	••	•••	•••	•	0, 5, ±0, 10, 52
• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •	denies	Ashv	aghosh	a's au	thorship	of	40
		yana S	nraggi	iorpada	•	109	, 198, 238, 333
Takshashil	a, Taxila	ł .		•••	•••	190	267
Tang		•••	•••	•	•••		237
Tangutian	•••	•	•••	•••	•••		167
Tanjur	•••	•••	•••	•		•••	40
" and	l Ashva	ghosha	•••	•••	•••	•••	_ ·
Tantras		•••		•••	,	•••	110, 318
Tantras ar	nd Tantı	a Budd	hısm		•••	•••	122
,, ba	arbarous	Sanskr	it of		•••	•••	122
,, of	three k	ınds, K	riya, C	larya an	d Yoga	•••	117
,, te	stify to	total de	cadeno	e of Bu	ıddhısm	•	117
Tara	•	••	•••	•••	•••	•••	111 '
Taranatha			•••	4	0, 89, 10	1, 12	L, 122, 205, 258
28		Sarvajn	amitra				111
Tara sadh		•			ndragom	11 •••	112
Tarkıkas		1				•	296
Tathagata	ouhvaka	one of	the 9	Dharm	as of Ne	enal	64, 119, 166
Tathagata			. (Dhain		· F ·	104
Tathagata			in	Mahar	yana S	hrad-	1
dhotpa			111	икапа)	•••	•••	40
Tathagata			. 1		• • •	,,,	64
Tatsın	•••	••	• • •	009	•••		196, 253

	PAGE
Taxila	198
Taynochi	254
Telang	200
Terebrathus	887
Tertulian of Buddhern	190
Tevija sutta	210
Theists attacked by Buddhists	286
Thera	219
Therapatha	10 164 264 294 880
Therapadana	264
Theravada	17 8, 90 211 918
Theravagua	211
Therigathas	164, 210 888
Thomas, F. W., on Ashvaghosha s Saundara	manda, 84, 40 82;
, d translated Biatriceta s	•
narthavarpana	41,44
Thomsen	280
Thought, speech, word	118
Threetaona	281
Three Jewels	42
l'ibetan Dulyen	880
Tien-tchow	258
Tipitaka	9, 211 121, 128, 207
Torthes	-110
Tissa Moggaliputta alias Upagupta precej	ptor of
Ashoka	P3 411 888
Tokhara kingdom of	224
Tokharian language	227 884
Pratimokaha	188 028
Vinaya of Sarvastivada	8
Tokwai, Tsuru Matsu studies in Suma	gadha
Angaria	62
Topes -	74
Tommana m Tankayatara	81

			~	_			Page.
Toung Pao.	••	•	••		•••	8,	9, 54, 99, 831
Transliteration		nese of	Hındu	names	•••	•••	202
	••			• • •	••	» * *	265
Trikanda She					•••	•	292
Trikayastava		•••	• •		•••	••	321
Tripitaka, Ch			•		•••		9, 301, 329
Trishanku, st			by Bu	ıddha		•••	56
Truths, the F			•••	•		•••	56
D7 1			••	•			323
Tun-huang			••	•••	•••	•••	228, 238
Tunku, the		•••	` •••	•••		•	. 178
m c	• • •	••			41, 22	4, 225,	264, 222, 223
Turkish	•••	• • •	•••	•••		•••	235
Turkistan, E	astern	MSS.	discov	ered in	•••	•••	7
Turner	•••	. '		••	•	•••	310
Turnour (Ge	orge)			•••	- •	•••	301
Tushita gods		•	•••	•••		بر •••	12, 20
_						·
				Ú.
Ubhato	•••			•••	•••		162
Udana	•••	•••	4			9, 54,	164, 175, 208
Udanavarga	•••		•	••	• • •	•••	7
,,		nskrit		•••		•••	239
Udayana	•••			••	•••	•••	91
Uddyosahar	a			•••	•		310, 334
Ugraparıprı				•••	•••	•••	\ 104 [']
Uigurian	•		•	••	•••		233
Uıgurıka	•••	•••	•••	•••		١	335
Uigurs	•••		•••	•••	•••		225
Ummadant	Jatal	ra	•••	700-	•••	•	220
Untouchab	le and	Anand	a			٧.	55
Upadesha	•••	•••	•••	••	•••		175
Upagupta	•••	•••	• • •	•••	•••	52	, 178, 1 96, 388 (

		- 1107
Upagupta Elder		T:
- Dramatic legend		52, 57, 60 804
Upah -		160
Upaliparipriccha		10:
Upanishada		150
Upateshya		821
Upmekhat		150
Upsaras		31
Ushnishavijayadharam		110
v
· ·
Vacaspati Misra	•	29
Vaibhashikas	n.	97 28
Vaipulya		17
er Bruten.		19 64 7
Vanheshiku		199 28
, referred to in Sutralankara		8
Variheshikas in Lankavatara	•	8
Vaishnavaites		28
Vajbeshka		247 25
Vajracchedika		87 280 28
Vajradarta		11
Vajradhvajasutra		10
Vajra Mandala		18
Vajrapard		27
Vajnaroci		17
and Dhamukuti		8
" attributed to Ashvaghesha conder	mns caste	88 17
Cries Manu and Mahabharata		18
Vallabhadeva's Subhashitavali		289 28
Vall bha of Mathura		19
Vallee Poursin (see Poussin)		7, 801, 81
Valmiki		8
Vararuchsk vya 👡	11 	19

						PAGE.
Vararuci	•••	. •••	• • •	•••	•••	197
Varnanarthavarnana	a of	Matrice	ta, tra	inslated	by
Thomas	•	•••	••		•	41
Vasantatilaka			•		•	25, 257
Vasiska	•••			•••		246, 251
Vasubandhu	•••	•	•••	,	29, 4	1, 268, 279
" Virincivasta	•••		•••	••	•••	96
Vasudeva	•	•••	•	••	•••	249, 312
Vasumitra		•••	•••	4.04	203, 20	6,282, 338
Vatsa		•••	•••	•••		303
"Elder …	•••		•••	•••	••	279
Vatsiputriyas	•••	•••	•••	•••		283
Vatta Gamanı		-	•••		4	165, 214
Veda cited by Vajr	asuc1	•••				38
Vedalla	•••	1	•••		•••	175
Vedas	•••	•••	•••	•••	•••	152
Vehicle, Buddha	•••	•••		•••		66
Vehicles, the Three	э	•••	•••	•••	111	66, 67
Veradasamardakasa		•••	••	•	• •	249
Vesali	•	•	•••			210
Vesantara Jataka		•••	•	•	•••	221, 234
Vibhajjavadis	•••		•••	•••	. ,	211
Vibhasa shastra		٠.		•••		204
Vibhasha	•••		•••	•••	9	7, 188, 338
Vicitrakarnikavada	na	,	••	•••	••	61 -
Vidushaka		•••		•••		222, 243,
Vidyabhushana, H	arı M	ohan	•	•••	••	62
Vidyabhushana, S	Ch		•••	•••	. 40, 6	2, 310, 334
Vidyadhara pitaka			• 67	•••	•	115, 316
Vidyushekara		• • •	•••	•	•••	310
Viharad .,	•••	•••		• •	`	73, 236
Vıjayadharmasurı	•••			_ '''	•••	1
Vijnanakaya	,	•	•••	•	•••	_ 279
Vijnanavada .,`	•••	••	•	•••	• • •	5

					1	PAGE
Vijnanavada in Mahayana	Shn	ıddbotm	da			40
Vijnamavadus						803
Vikrama-arka Vikrama-adi	tva					890
\ malakutinirdesha	•					104
Vimana Vastu (Vatthu)	_				1	.0 14
Vimana Vatthu			••			, 104
Vinashvara-panel						290
Vinaya			•		8	820
" in Sanakrit						289
, pitaka				8 21	. 959	805
, Sammkass	-				•	172
Vindhyavasha						99
Vira						204
Virgaparamuta						818
V ishnu			••			807
Vishnupurana and Buddha						288
Visvantara Jataka .,						221
Vivadamara setu		-		_		142
Vohumano m Mani				_		281
Void					108	389
Vratavadanamala						61
Vyadi					197	198
Vyakarana						175
Vyakhya, Abhidharmakoshs	ţ					278
		w Wackemagel
Waddell				=0	110	301
Wagner, Richard				60	110	-
Walleser Max			5.90	279, 291	900	181
Wardak vase of Sam		••	u qs	419, 291	408	250
Wassilief				92, 180	900
Watanahe			н	#2, LOU	100,	808
Weber A.				1, 179	147
				+, L()	, 134	040

							PAGE.
Weber MS .	•••	•••		•••		•••	227, 287
Wenzel				• ,			91
Wessdin .	••	•••	to o	•		••	141
Whitney, W.	D. on 1	Indian	Chro	nology	••		156
737	• •		••	•••	•••		144
Wilkins, Char	les ,	•		•••			193
Wilkinson .	••	•			`	•••	38, 178
Wilson .	••		•••	•••	•••		115
Windisch, E.	••	•••	•••	•••	162, 2		257, 305, 323
Winternitz .	•	•	•••		,		219, 301, 307
Wishtree-avad	ana-gar	land	••		, .	•••	59
Wogihara .	Ü	•	•••				96
Women, stude	ents .		•••			•••	299
Woolar (lake)		••	-	•••	• •		~ 197
Writing, art of			• • • •			•••	297
Wujra Soochi		••			•••	•••	178
•			•••		•••	,	2.0
				Y.
Yaghnobı	•	••	, -	•	•••	•••	234
Yajnavalkya	•	•	• • •	•	•••		208
Yakshas		••	••	••	4.	4.00	274, 297
Yarkand	•	•	•	•			224
Yashomitra.		,	•••	•••	•••		279, 338
Yayatı	• •	••	•••		•••	•••	198
Y1-tsing (see I-	tsing).	••		•••	•••	•••	181, 182
Yogacara .		-	•••	-		•••	18, 81, 280
Yogacarya bhu	ımı sha	stra	~-	•	•••		95, 188
Yogatantra	• •	• •	•	•		•••	188
Yogı, Tantrık	. •	••	• 64		•••	•••	121
Yogini	•	••	• •	••			119
Yue-tchi .	•		• • •	•		•••	194, 253
			:	Z.		I
Zarvan, the go	d of to	ma					281
, -  , 50	~ or m	11 C	•	•••	• • •		2 9↓

						PACE
Zeda inscriptions						285
Zoroaster his religion basis	of	Manu				280, 837
, temptation of			-			1*6
Zoroasinan patets						162
Zoronstrums	••		•••	-		181, 204

							PAGE.
Weber MS	•••	•••			•	•••	227, 287
Wenzel		•		• ,	•••		91
Wessdin	•••	•••	59.0	•	-	•••	141
Whitney, W.	D. on	Indian	Chron	ology			156
Wiemar	•••		•	•••	•••	•••	144
Wilkins, Cha	-						193
Wilkinson			•	•••	`	•••	38, 178
Wilson	•••				•••		115
Windisch, E.		••		~•••	162, 219	a. 221.	257, 305, 323
Winternitz				•••		-	,219,301,307
Wishtree-ava		rland	•••		• ,		59
TTT 1	.uana-ge	alland	••		, ,	•••	96
Women, stu	•		•••	••	•••	•••	299
Woolar (lak		•	-	•••	• •	•••	197
Writing, art	•	•••	••	•••		•••	297
Wujra Sooc		•	•••	•	•••	•••	178
wujia 3000	ш	•••	• •	•••	• * •	•••	170
			7	Y.	•	•
Yaghnobi		•••	/	•	•••	••	234
Yajnavalkya	•••		•••		••	100	208
Yakshas	•••	•••	•	•	•	•••	274, 297
Yarkand	•••	••				••	224
Yashomitra		•	•••	•••	• • •		279, 338
Yayatı	•••	•••	•••		•••	•••	198
Yi-tsing (see	I-tsing) 		• • •	•••	•••	181, 182
Yogacara			•••	•	•	•••	18, 81, 280
Yogacarya 1	humı s	hastra	~		• •		95, 188
Yogatantra	•••	••	•••	•		•••	188
Yogi, Tantr	ık	•••	* 254	~	10	•••	, 121
Yogını	•••	••		••	• •	••	119
Yue-tchi	•••		•••	•	• `	•••	194, 253
			7	7.		,
70.00m 4L-	, , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , ,						S94
Zaivan, the	gog of	nme		•••	• † •	•••	231

				PAGE
Zeda inscriptions Zoroaster, his religion basi	 s of M	ani		246 280, 887 126
temptation of	•			288
Zoroastrian patets		••		180, 204
Zametrians	••	***		